DARED FOR MIKE C. TO TRACEY A.

Alea,

Hey babe, its been real ... very special young lady to me. you've always been there for me and I'll always cherish those memories of ... we would talk for hours on the phone. I was kinda hesitant of getting to know you at first because you're a little wierd, but you have a good sence of humor and that the greatest thing of all. being able to make people laugh. I'm outa here in one day and I can't wait, although I am kinda nervous. I want you to know that I'll always love you and be ur ... in whatever you decide to pursue (except men). Good luck.

Love
Mike

Alea,

Well the year has finally ended. You are such a sweety! I am so glad we became such good friends. you are so special to me, I can't believe you only saved me a half of page-(:) Look how small I am writing. Anyways I just want you to know, you are so sweet. thanks for being there when I needed someone to talk to. I can't wow the Red Lobster, how exciting. I can't ... Anyways Alea can you believe everyone is leaving, I am so sad, we are stuck here another year, (2 for me) You better keep in touch with me over the summer. I hope you succeed in all your ... will always be there for you ok! Anything you need to talk about I will be there. we have to stick together since everyone is leaving us. I love you like a sister don't you forget that. well I think I have said enough, (only joking) Words sometimes can't express feelings, (if you know what I mean) well hun, I better close for know!

You are one of my Best Friends I will never forget ya!

Love Always

SOME DREAMS DO COME TRUE

Queen Tracy Cole and King Bryan Palmer

The spirit of the class of '88 was reflected in the success of their homecoming. Each member of the court was unique and each had different memories of homecoming.

"It was a dream, almost a magical night," explained Marc Barlow.

"The whole night was perfect!" stated Queen Tracy Cole. "I was really excited, not to mention surprised, when they announced my name for queen," she added.

Traci Welch and Tracy Cole had both had thoughts of being on the court since freshman year, as Traci Welch illustrates:

"Ever since my freshman year, it was a dream for me to be on the court, and I was so thrilled when I found out I made the court."

The requirements for the court to have six activities and no "U"s in conduct, raised conflicting opinions between members of the court.

"Requiring six activities helps get people more involved and helps build school spirit," viewed Tracy Cole while Traci Welch explained it this way, "I think the requirements are a little too strict, but if the underclassmen see what they have to look forward to, then they will want to try and work towards their requirements early."

The benefits of being on the court (the fun and excitement) definitely outweigh any trouble it may take to get there. Traci Welch concluded, "It was a great moment in my life that I will always remember."

In traditional Hebrew costumes, the Musical Theatre Workshop class performs an Israeli folk dance.

Closing the show is the traditional "Hallelujah Chorus."

"Holiday" line shows Kathy Bauer, Angie Labadie, Brenda Thomas and Osiris Talamantes.

Before the show, Dana Ciolli applies final touches on make-up in the dressing room.

Performing Arts Unite in Holiday Concert

As brightly colored Christmas displays filled store windows and smoke from cheerful fires rose above chimneytops, the season of giving had arrived. Along with the spirit of Christmas, the Performing Arts Department began preparations for the annual holiday concert held at East County Performing Arts Center.

"It is the only show during the year that combines all aspects of the performing arts," commented Mrs. Bush, who directed the show with Mr. Romeo. The concert consisted of both marching and symphonic band, specialty team, and both sacred and secular selections from the choir. Twenty-minute musical skits were presented by the Musical Theatre Workshop class, and several numbers, including the "Toy Soldiers" and a ballet to "Silent Night" were performed by the dance department. The show ended with the traditional "Hallelujah Chorus."

Tickets for the Holiday Concert were sold by all performers for $2.00. The show was held on December 16, 1987 and captivated the audience, making the spirit of Christmas come alive.

Two specialty team members, Deanne Bender and Kathy Leach share hairbrush and hairspray between numbers.

Synchronized movements accentuated the "Toy Soldier" number and delighted audience.

"Silent Night" ballet is danced by dance department members Shelly Stanley, Valerie Propst, Shauna Hopkins and Bobbie Koch.

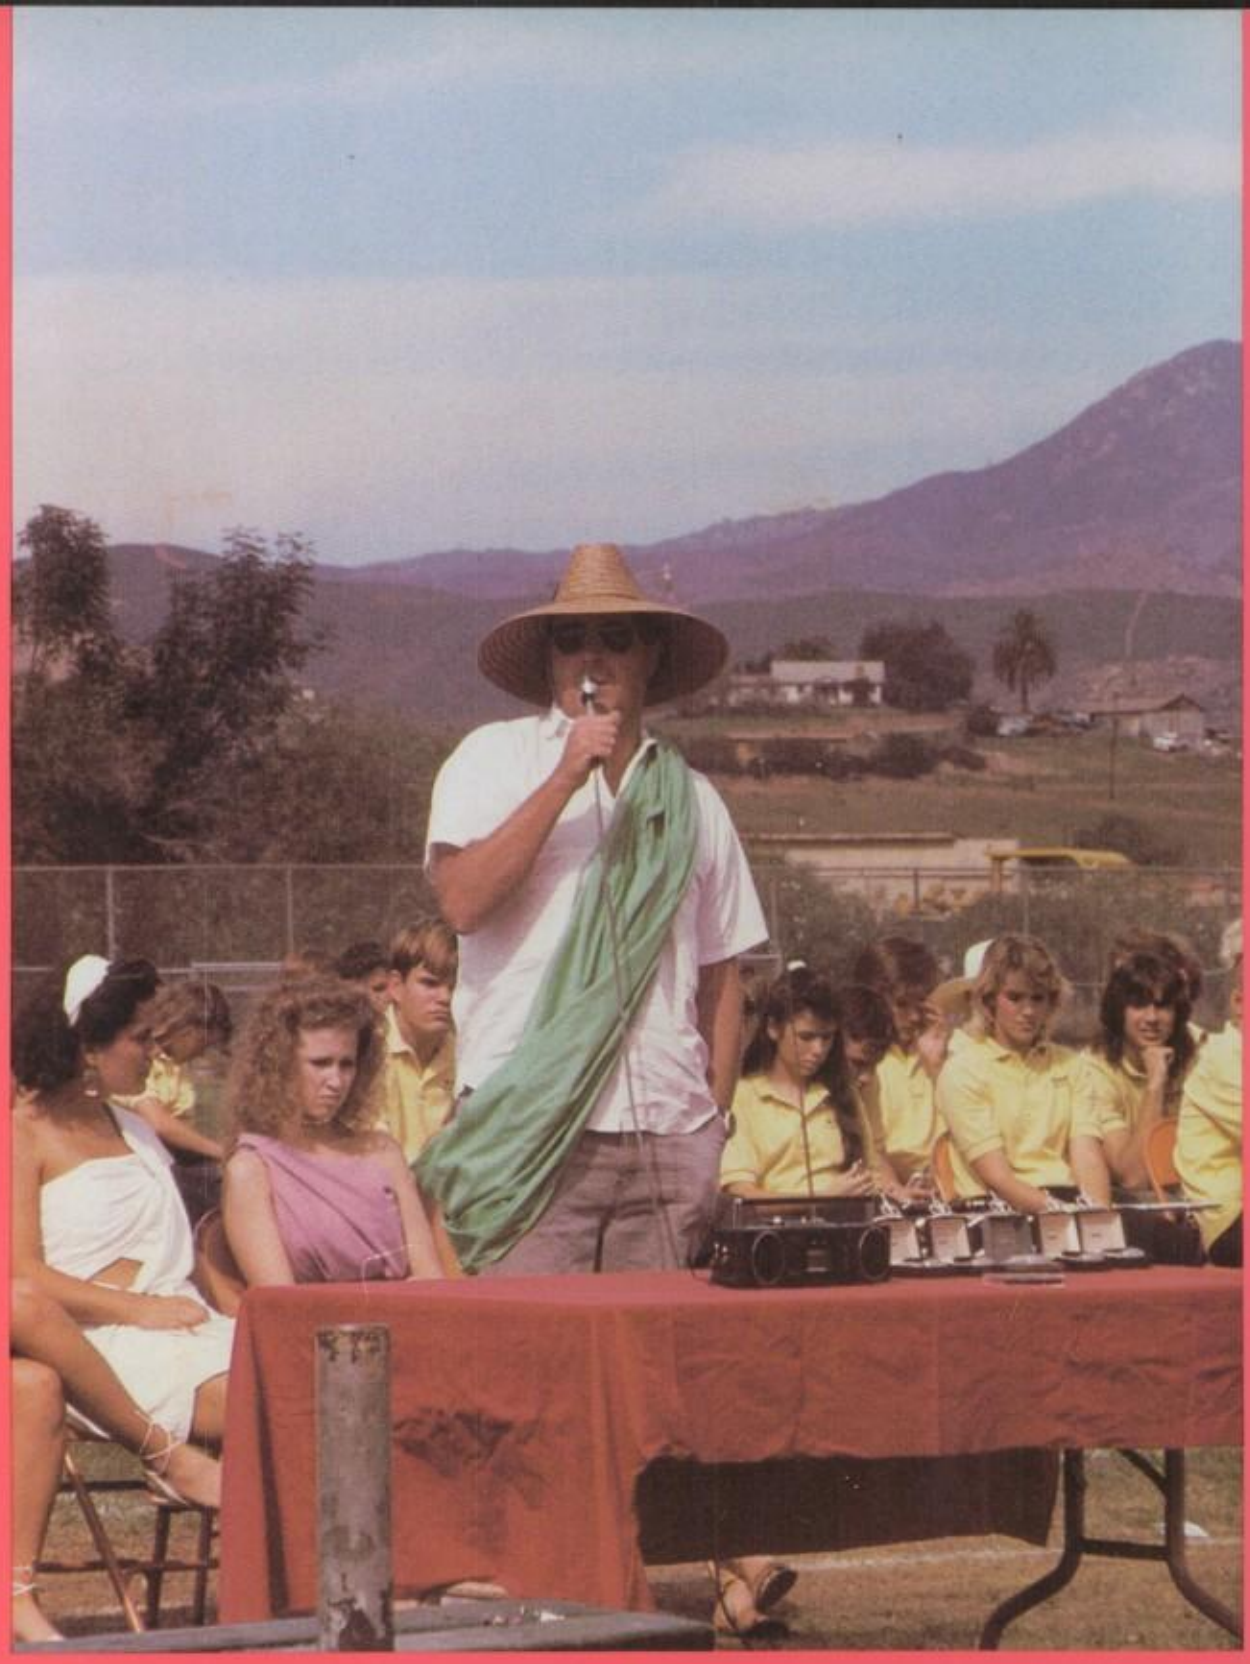
Juan Grande Is Homecoming Speaker

Fortunately the week was beautiful. It made dress-up days and float preparation much easier and kept spirits high.

Homecoming Chairwoman, Stacy Van Gessel, coordinated the events. She had many willing helpers but the success was due largely to her capable leadership.

The day of Homecoming had sunshine so no one froze in their traditional togas during the all school assembly held on the football field. Popular disc jockey from 91X, Juan Grande was featured speaker and was draped in a toga at the beginning of his talk. The sport teams were introduced but this year there were no "care" packages for the individual players. It had been a joint decision by ASB and administration to discontinue the tradition. A special number was performed by the "Aquamarines", a popular campus group.

Tradition prevailed in the evening as the parade marched around the field, the Homecoming court was officially introduced and the king and queen crowned with the band and drill teams standing by. The dance followed the game with each class having decorated the corners of the gym to depict an era in keeping with "A Blast From the Past."

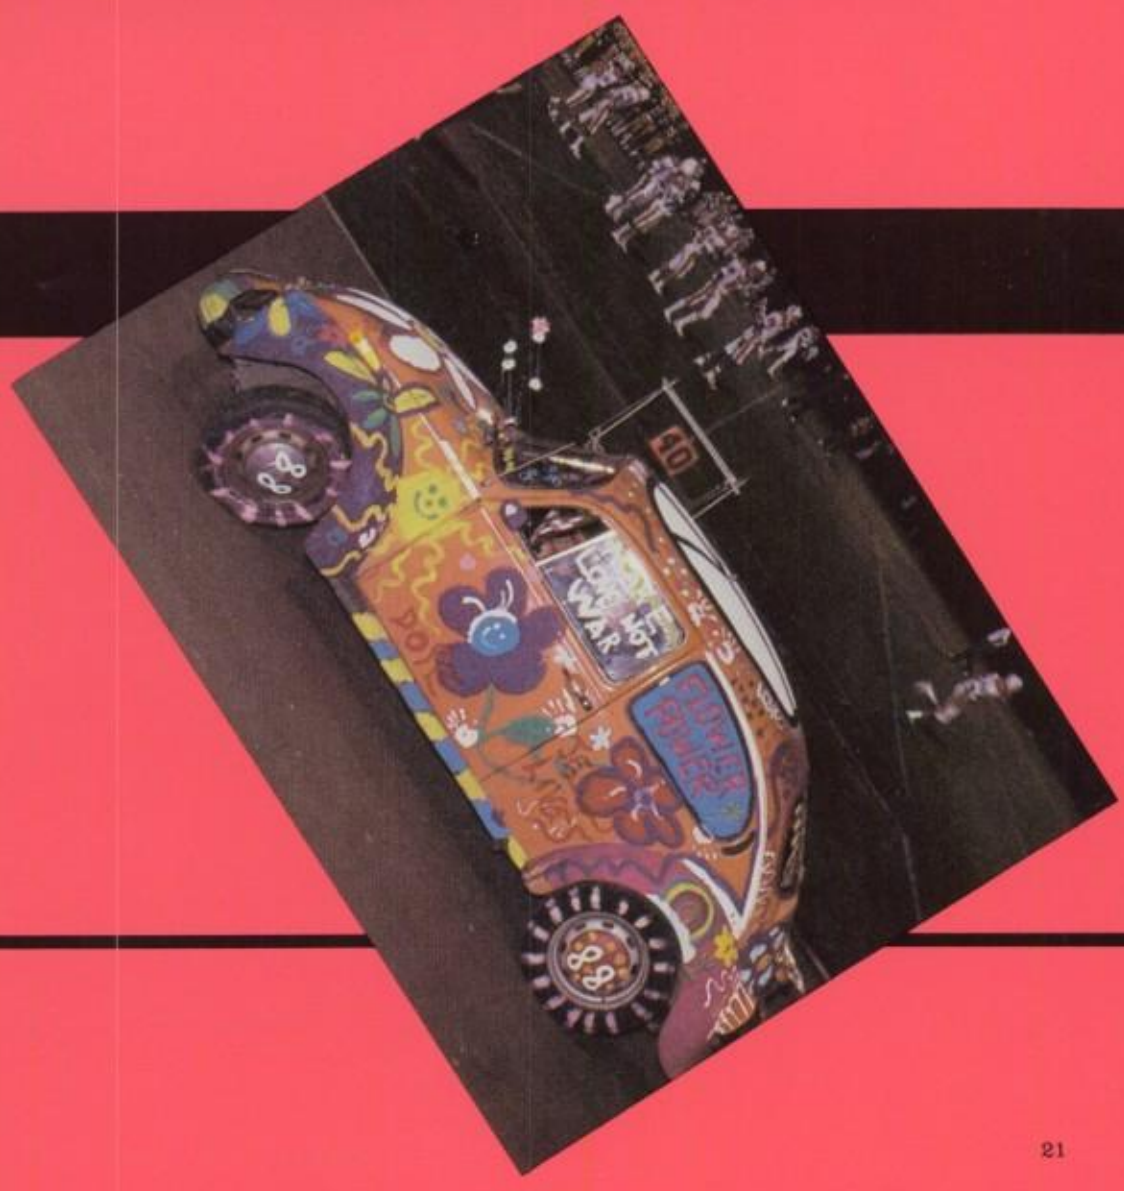


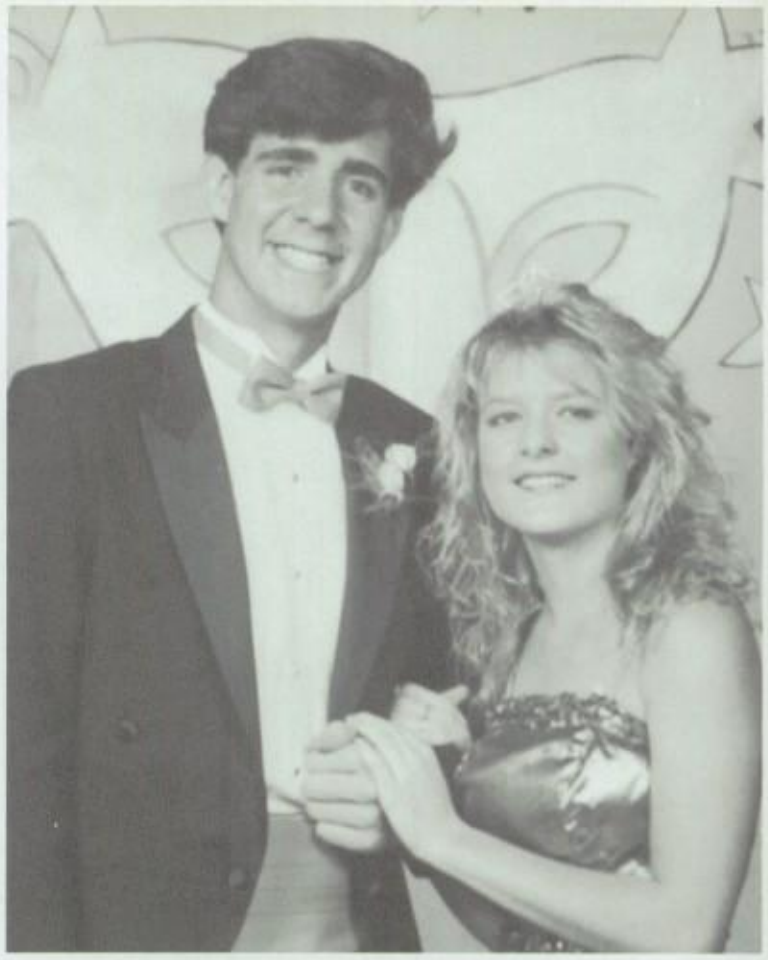
First, Juan Grande gives the surf report, followed quickly by encouraging words to the football team for the game.

On the first palce winning float are Cliff Shilenberg, Scott Kaczmarek, Neil Lotz and Nathan Drake in their first live performance as the Beatles.

Racing for the senior class for class competitions are Tracy Cole and Kurt Meeder.

Ooops, Jon Richart nearly turns the wrong way on the coronation aisle but is gently coaxed by Traci Welch to go the other direction.





Couples enjoy dancing to the music of 91X at the Winter Masquerade Holiday Dance as a way to begin a two week vacation.

Junior Class Prince and Princess: Paul Laird and Vikki Elliot

To hear who had been selected for King and Queen, the crowd gathered near the stage to hear Cathy Perry's announcement.

As Joe Cocker sang "You Are So Beautiful", John Robinson and Karla Hopper danced close enjoying the romantic music.

Winter Masquerade Well Attended

Thoughts of bundling up for the snow, last minute shopping, and attending the winter formal danced through students' heads during December.

This year the theme of the dance was changed from any religious aspect of the holiday to "A Winter Masquerade." "There were people there who had not in the past gone to the dance because of their religion which does not allow them to celebrate Christmas," said Lisa Fooks, "The theme change of this year's dance allowed more people to attend."

About 200 couples attended the festive event which was held in Foster Gym. Amidst colorfully-decorated pine trees, delicate snowflakes, and theme colors of ruby red, gold, and silver, couples danced to music provided by 91X.

A free mask accompanied each bid. Many couples opted to decorate masks and enter them into a contest for the best-decorated mask. The first place mask was decorated by Karen Webber. Second place went to Sean White and his date. Third place was awarded to Andrea Bravo.

Of course, no winter formal would be complete without a court. Students from each class were chosen by classmates to reign over the Winter Masquerade. This year's court consisted of King Steve McNamara, Queen Lourdes Plascencia, Junior Prince Paul Laird, and Princess Vicky Elliot, Sophomore Prince Brian Peeler and Princess Stacey Martinez, Freshman Prince Robert Presley and Princess Carrie Vetter.

Spanjaard Visits to Create Awareness

At the invitation of the ASB, Mr. Spanjaard spoke in Lakeside about his experiences as a youth in a Nazi concentration camp.

"I'm talking to you today because within fourteen years, most concentration camp survivors will be gone and you must know about it," spoke author Barry Spanjaard of Don't Fence Me In to a crowd of a thousand spellbound Juniors and Seniors on December 3rd. "That's the main reason why I'm talking to you today."

Mr. Spanjaard was born in New York City in 1929 and in 1932, his Dutch immigrant parents moved back to Holland. "We heard about this German guy by the name of Adolph Hitler, but we didn't pay much attention to it," he said. His life was like any normal kid's in Holland until May 10, 1940. That day was the Netherlands' darkest day as they lost a five-day battle and fell to German invasion forces. The Germans quickly took over and began the process of weeding out the Jewish population. According to Spanjaard, constant restrictions began to tighten. "We had to wear these Jewish Stars over our heart," he said, holding up a laminated star. "This was our identifying mark."

On April 6, 1943 at 2 o'clock in the morning, German Military Police arrested his father, mother, and himself. This came after thirteen raids in the past. "When the police broke in they yelled at us and told us that we had ten minutes to pack. Well you know what ten minutes is like to pack; you can't pack anything!" His family was then transported to a transition camp where they were detained for more than a year. "I still don't know why they held us there for so long," he said.

February the first, 1944 was a day Spanjaard said he would never forget. "On that day, we were sent to Bergen-Belsen, a 'privileged camp' they called it. We were to be transported to the camp in cattle cars. As I walked up to the car, I read on the side 'eight horses or forty persons.' They crammed us seventy to a car with a thin layer of straw on the floor and a small bucket in the corner to use as a toilet. We were in that for forty-eight hours!" A horrified murmur ran through the crowd. "Yeah, forty-eight hours. By the time we arrived, some had died, including some children."

"At Bergen-Belsen, we were treated differently than others were at other camps. Families weren't split up, although the men had to sleep in the men's barracks while the women had to sleep in the women's barracks. Anyone over the age of fifteen had to work. Since I was only thirteen, I stayed in the camp, bored and hungry. Sometimes, my friends and I would pretend that we were eating food and we would swallow as if the food was real. All we really had to eat was some weak turnip soup and a piece of black, foul-smelling bread. I later met someone who said that the bread usually consisted of one-half sawdust."

Almost one year later, the Spanjaard family received their freedom from the camp. Mr. Spanjaard, too weak to walk, had to be helped onto the railroad car. "I remember feeling a tingling sensation when I got on the car and realized that for the first time in two years, I was feeling real heat on my body. It was a weird feeling." At a train station that sat on the German/Swiss border, the Spanjaard family was traded for six captured German officers. "As we entered Switzerland, my father said 'I'm happy you and your mother have your freedom; now I feel that I will die.' They carried him off, and the next day, he died."

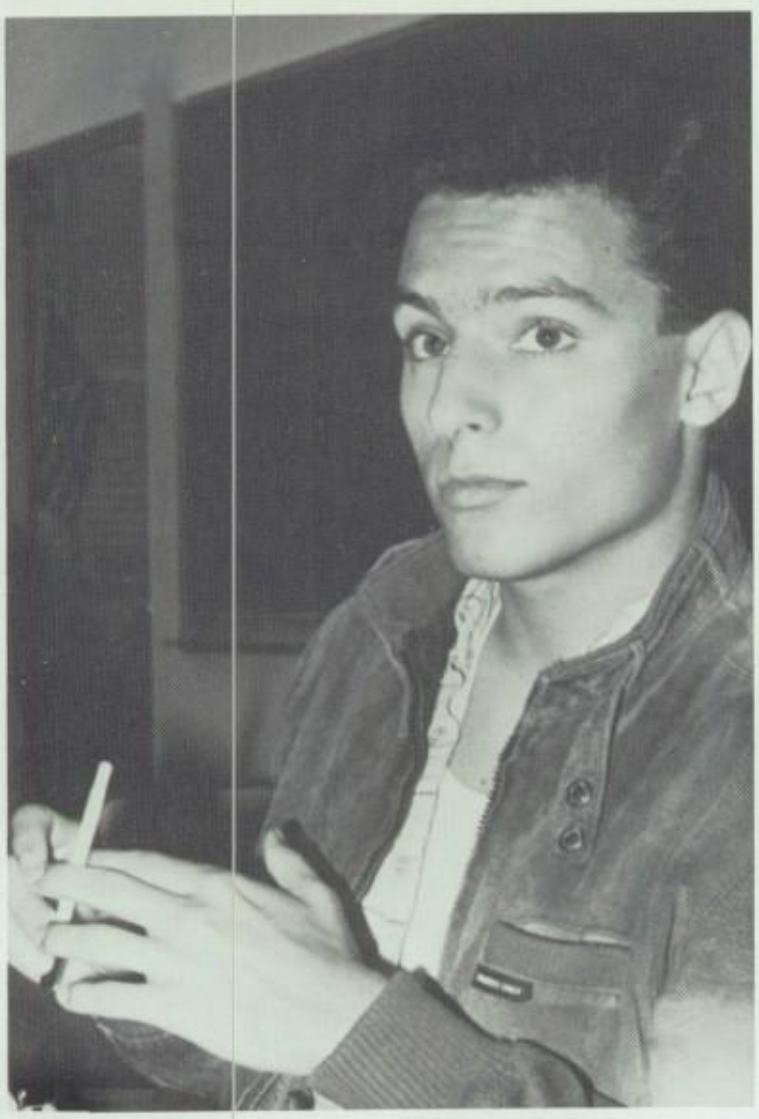
Spanjaard said that he wasn't even allowed to attend the funeral because time was hectic. At Marseilles, on the south coast of France, Mrs. Spanjaard and Barry boarded a wounded soldier ship. "When we came into the harbor and saw the Statue of Liberty, some of us wept, and others cheered. And around the harbor, a tugboat was going 'round and round.' It had a large speaker on the top and it was playing Bing Crosby's song, Don't Fence Me In. That was where I got my book title from."

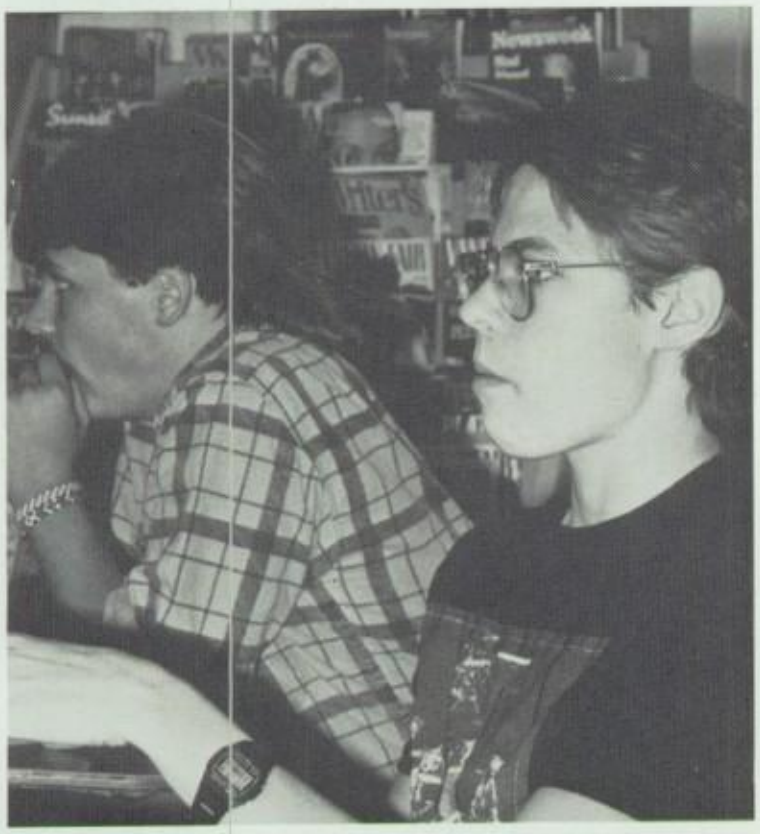
At the age of sixteen he wrote his book to "relieve pent-up pressure and frustration." When he returned, his family refused to talk about the ordeal.

Today, he feels nothing against the people of Germany. "I hate those who were involved but I don't hate the normal people. Seventy percent of the people in Germany today didn't have a thing to do with it, so why hold them to it?"

His biggest hope is that the words "holocaust" and "genocide" are never spoken again. One can only hope.

Youth Ambassadors Seek Soviet Friendship





If a friend cuts you off while driving on the freeway you would probably react differently than if a stranger did the same. In the case of your friend cutting you off, you most likely would be a little annoyed (but not angry) and you would understand that your friend has faults and forgive him without any major conflicts. But if it was a stranger that had pulled out in front of you, it would have been easier for you to become angry at that person, and hate him without even knowing him.

The basic theory behind the Youth Ambassador Club is to become friends with the Soviets now and dispell the prejudices and barriers that lie between the U.S. and the Soviet Union. Says President Sean Halsey, "We must see the Soviets first as potential friends, not as faceless commies if we hope to peacefully resolve problems in the future."

Letters are written and exchanged between El Cap and its "sister school" in Moscow, and several Y.A. members have penpals there. The club is also preparing a scrap book to be sent to the school showing the many aspects of American life. The project is under the direction of Jody Clifton, and is expected to be completed in February.

Y.A. members and their families also hosted 15 Soviet students experiencing San Diego from December 27 to 29. The host families took the Soviet students to Balboa Park, the zoo, a bonfire at La Jolla shores, and introduced them to American family life.

Having visited the Soviet Union, President Sean Halsey is strongly supportive of the philosophy of Youth Ambassadors.

Juniors Andy Taurianes and Danny Krause offer suggestions for the scrapbook to be sent to the Soviet Union.

At a lunchtime meeting, Michelle Housenan speaks to the group regarding the Soviet students who will be visiting in December.

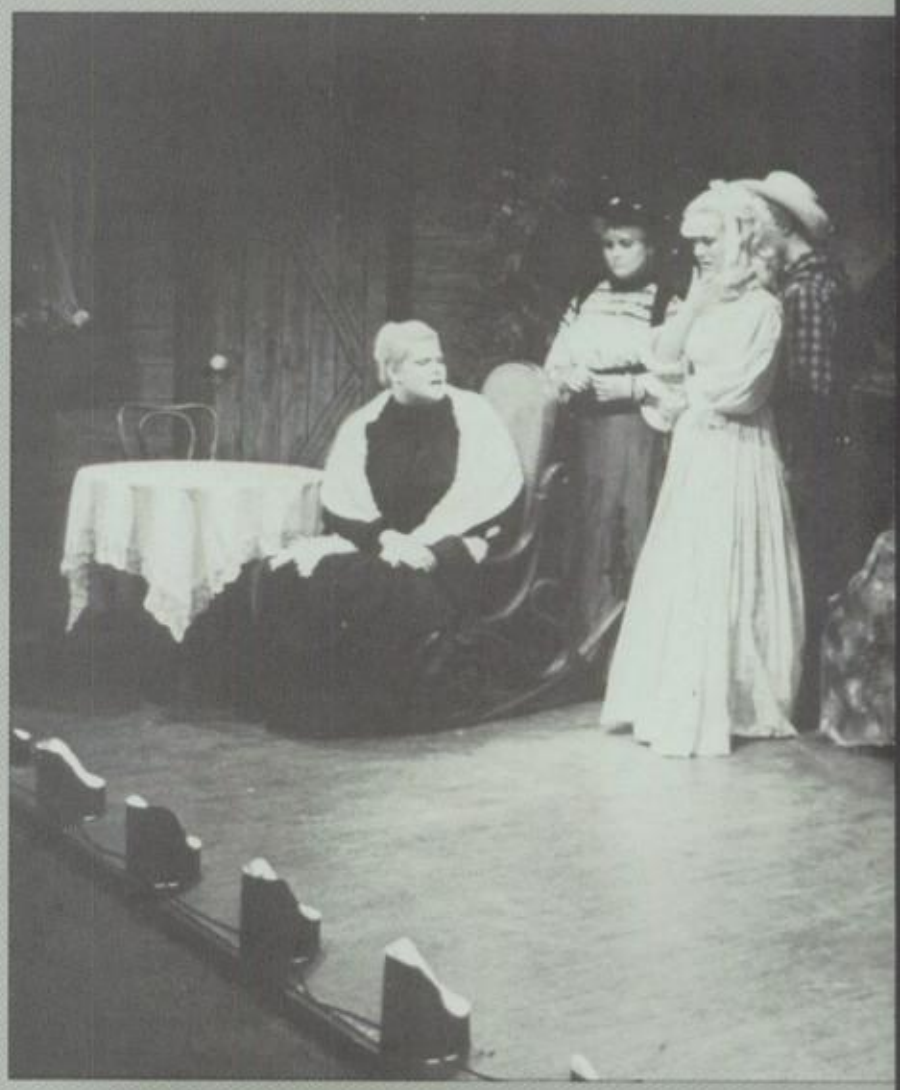
DIRTY WORK AT THE CROSSROADS

"Dirty work at the Crossroads" had its big opening on Nov. 3rd in the Little Theatre. The gay-nineties melodrama told about a vicious villain, "Munro", who attempts to seduce a sweet country lass, "Nellie," to come into possession of property she would gain after her brother's death. Meanwhile Munro's ex-wife, whom he put into an asylum years ago, doublecrosses Munro and blackmails Mrs. Asterbilt.

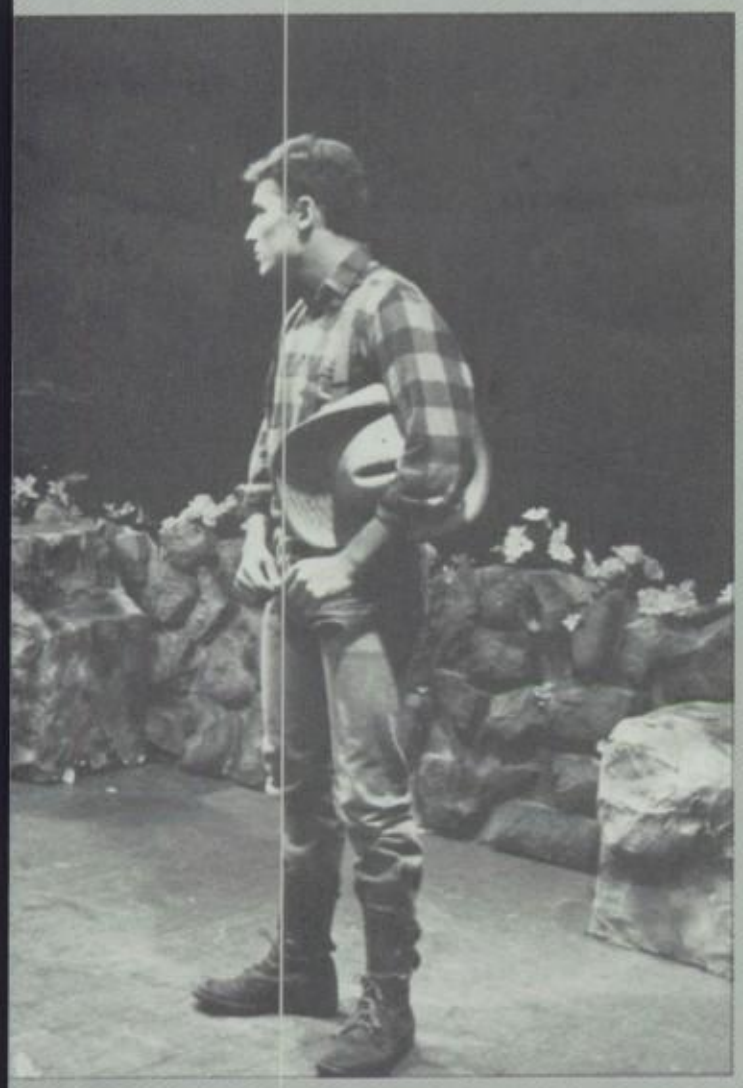
The rehearsals began on Oct. 8th, and they practiced every day after school and during the weekends under the direction of Mrs. Baker-Bush. Lisa Scott, "Nellie", Caroline Schkade, "Ida", and Stacy Braswell, "Fleurette", described the play as exacting. It took teamwork and patience, partly because the play included lots of singing. The cast was satisfied with the play as was the audience. The play was sold out, with standing room only.

The parts were given by auditioning, and most of the performers were double-cast. The cast included Lisa Scott as "the heroine", Sean Halsey and Lance Throp as "the villain", and Larry Lane and Sean Halsey as "the Hero". Sean Halsey describes how it was to play two parts, "It was definitely a challenge. I had to know more than half of the play. Playing both parts, especially when they were so opposite, made me a little schizophrenic for a while. By so far it was the best production I've ever had the opportunity to perform. The entire cast was excellent."



To assist Munro Murgatroyd, Ida fills Nellie's mind with thoughts of the Big City, Bridgeport, to convince her she should leave.

When Munro (Larry Lane) is sneaking around Nellie's boarding house trying to catch a glimpse of the lovely Leonie Asterbilt, Ida catches him to expose and foil his plans. Munro convinces her to help him to marry Leonie.



Deceit, deceit. Ida (Caroline Schkade) convinced Nellie to go to the Big City with Mookie (Sean Reidy). Nellie (Lisa Scott) has written a letter to her grandma, and Adam (Sean Halsey) reads it. Gram dies content, and Adam becomes a bum, because he thinks Nellie doesn't love him.

Just before Nellie walks in, Ida fakes a faint so Adam has to hold her, and Nellie thinks Adam doesn't love her.

At dress rehearsal Mrs. Baker-Bush makes sure the lines go right, and everybody does his/her best as she offers final suggestions and encouragement.

Before the play Caroline Schkade is transformed by make-up into Ida Rhinegold, Munro Murgatroyd's wife.

Behind the scenes lights were handled by Scott Mendias and Josh Miskovsky.

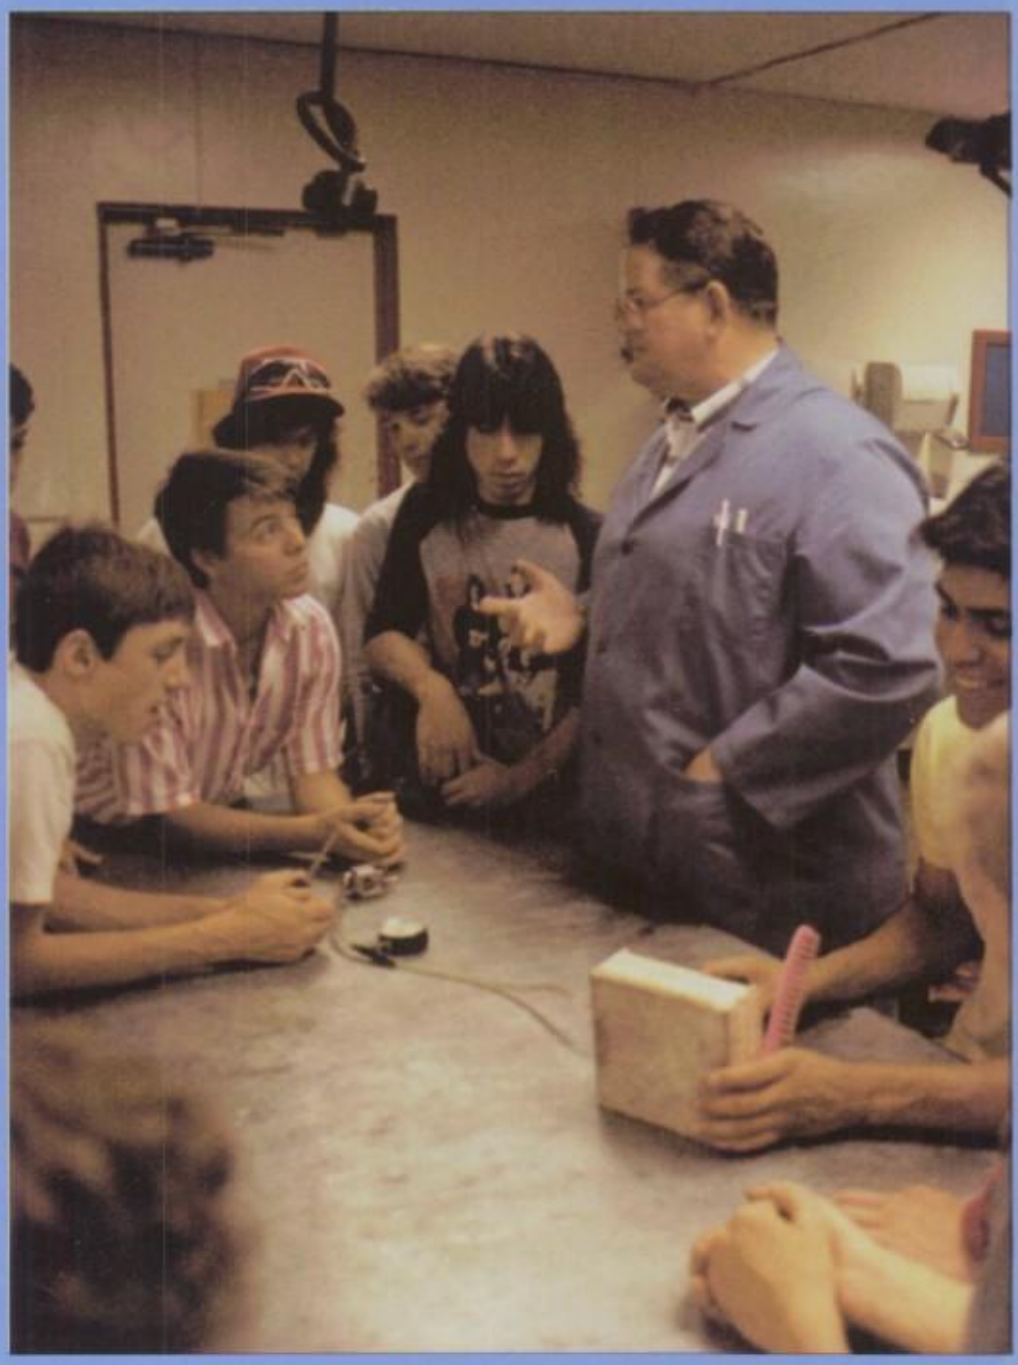
Attention to detail is essential, especially when overhauling a carburetor, as Mike Hollinger exhibits.



During class, Joey Wingeater, Fred Becker, Mark Sanchez, and Kenny Ruiz listen attentively as Mr. Overbay lectures on chainsaw carburetors.

ROP's GOAL: TO BE EMPLOYABLE

In the world of small engines and motorcycles, the goal is to train the students to be employable when they complete the class.

In the small engines class, the students do everything from tuneups on personal lawnmowers and chainsaws to complete overhauls, which at times involves taking the entire engine apart and rebuilding it.

Two outstanding students in this class are Fred Becker and Bill Patton. "Becker pays attention to instructions and follows them to a letter," explained Mr. Overbay, "And Bill Patton is a very meticulous mechanic and will not give up until the job is done."

The ROP motorcycles class involves learning about the basics of motorcycle repair including tuneups, and complete overhauls on twostroke and fourstroke motorcycles.

One of Mr. Overbay's top students is Steve Starr. "Steve has outstanding test scores and pays attention to detail," stated Mr. Overbay.

Mr. Overbay proves to be a popular teacher as one of the students states, "Mr. Overbay is very understanding and always is ready to help you if you need it. If someone doesn't understand something, he'll help you through it until you do."

Before working on the engines, they must be steam cleaned, as Mike Simon demonstrates.

Working diligently, Kevin Jackson reassembles his three-wheeler nicknamed "White Lightning."

HUMANITIES STUDENTS DO IT AGAIN

The third annual Greco-Roman Festival was held at the Greek Amphitheater on Mt. Helix. The festival is the culmination event of an exhaustive study of Greek and Roman history and literature.

All students in Mr. Coulsby's Humanities class wrote and presented plays relating to ancient Greece and Rome. Some plays included Jeoparditis, Tholes view of Lypestrata, Down, But Not Out with Diozenes, Dorthea and Totolenia, and Finger Licin, Good . . . Odysseus, Men Become Fast Food.

Clothing had to be togas and halfway through the day was a lunchbreak that consisted of a variety of Greek and Roman dishes.

It was with reluctance that the students boarded the bus to leave at the end of the day.

At the amphitheatre, James Nieboi and Cameron Owens are part of a Greco-Roman Dance.

Ace humanities teacher is also an ace photographer to record the "historical" events of the day.

Seated comfortably in the expensive seats, Sarah Olson and Shawna McKeown watch "Jeoparditis."

Hungry performers break for their lunch of traditional Greek food.

Dressed in their best togas, the humanities students gather at the start of the day to hear instructions.

OFFICERS PULL TOGETHER

"Seniors Off the Wall" was the class of '88's theme as they joined together to reach their goal for the year.

President Cathy Perry assumed a majority of the responsibility when it came to organizing and planning events. Vice-president Sean Halsey was there to hold down the fort whenever Cathy was ill. Senior class events were well publicized through the combined efforts of Jennifer Demi and Maile Kahananui.

Denise Nash and Terri Robinson helped to plan Senior Activities, including Senior Breakfasts. Secretary Karla Hopper diligently took notes at every lunchtime meeting, keeping in order all plans and ideas for future reference.

Treasurer RaeAnne Hamilton was responsible for the safekeeping of all profits earned from Senior Class fundraisers. Included in these were the "Class of '88" scarf sale, "I love the class of '88" bumper sticker sales, and a candy sale in late February.

Individually, the officers did well in keeping up with their duties. When one was unable to carry through on a task, the others were nearby to pick up the slack. This aided in the maintenance of comfortable working arrangements.

Cathy Perry was pleased to observe more senior students becoming involved this year. This participation and unity helped to make the year a successful one for the class of '88.

January Grads OPT FOR HEADSTART ON THE FUTURE

Although most seniors awaited graduation in June still undecided as to what they were going to do, a few people chose to graduate early and get their start in the "real world."

The 1988 January Graduates were: Robert Amavisca, Leonard Gamble, David Gorospe, Erik McKay, and Sean Walker. They graduated a few months early to begin further education, military careers, or new jobs.

Erik McKay planned to back pack through the Smokey Moutains, and a trip to San Jose before he joined the Navy in August. Although graduating in January was a good opportunity for him he said, "El Cap has been the best school that I have ever been to, and it's unfortunate that I graduated in January, because I missed out on all the end of the year activities."

Sean Walker planned to further his education by taking several ROP courses in landscape management. He wanted to take these courses to begin a career as a park ranger supervisor.

Robert Amavisca and David Gorospe graduated in January to begin working, and go to college. "I graduated in January to go places that I've always wanted to go before I start my career as an air traffic controller or an operations specialist in the Navy," said Leonard Gamble.

Graduating in January gave these people a head start on their futures, however they said they would miss all of the end of the year activities.

TAKING EVERY OPPORTUNITY to SUCCEED

"School is fun and exciting for me," said Jim Barton. "I think school has changed me for the better." For Jim, the best part about being a senior was involvement with people both in the school and its activities. Aside from winning the Grossmont League title in track, Jim has enjoyed hanging out and skiing with his good friends, Matt Fuller, Chad Chapman, and Apollo Kollias.

Matt said, "Jim is a very out going person, I like being around him because we always find fun things to do."

He's involved in such activities as Commissioner of Sales, Teacher Prep Class and Air Band. In Air Band, he and his friends took their routine to state finals performing to the Village People's "Y.M.C.A." Although they didn't win, it was an experience never to be forgotten. Jim said, "It was a thrill just to be there performing in front of thousands of people."

Jim offered advice for success. He said, "We can't slack off in school and we need to get the best education we possibly can. We need to be the best we can be in all that we do. We only have one chance at life so it's important to make the best of all opportunities."

In his typical outrageous behavior, Jim Barton sails off the top of the 700 building in a burst of high energy. He can often be seen jumping out of trees or wearing unusual costumes on dress-up days.

AMID CONFORMITY

KAHANANUI EMERGES UNIQUE

At a time when most teens conform and are ultra sensitive about how their peers view them, Maile Kahananui emerges as unique.

"She doesn't really care what other people think about what she says or does," explains close friend Erica Deese, "She's an original person." Maile is definitely her own person with her own personal style. Maile is not afraid to voice her thoughts — she tells people what she thinks, whether with friends or in class. Her honesty and openness, that are apparent in her attitude, set her apart from the rest.

Maile has participated in a variety of school activities; from the tennis team to the academic team. Maile's determiniation, competiveness, and honesty have helped her succeed in these activities. She is also in charge of senior class publicity with Jennifer Demi. Together, they made posters, helped out in senior class meetings, and Maile assisted in handling any loose ends that the senior class encountered.

Maile's personal belief about life in general is "Anything can be done. If you put your mind to it, nothing is unattainable." She proved this through, not only her survival of American studies last year, but of her success. At the beginning of the year, she was lost in the class. But time and hard work paid off — she received an "A". Maile has made her own luck and has succeeded in everything she's tried so far.

Although Maile Kahananui says she is shy, her friends view her as playful and outgoing.

SENIORS and WEEKENDS EQUAL FUN

Whether it was going to the beach, movies, or each other's houses, seniors spent their off-campus hours in many different ways. Jon Ritchart and Traci Welch spent their weekends together at the beach, surfing or just enjoying the atmosphere. Sherry Peek spent her weekends with her boyfriend Gary going to see movies at the AMC or going to Torrey Pines beach if the weather was good. Foreign exchange student Riikka Tvominen from Finland could be found enjoying the excitement of California at various dance clubs around San Diego. Like many seniors, Marion Sandoval was also one who escaped to the beach on her time off. Some of her favorites were Swamis, Bone-Yards, and Dabbers. She and her boyfriend Mark Darwell liked to hangout with the Mooseheads (long-boarders). "I have always loved the beach, ever since I was a kid. I love riding the waves, the sun, and the special feeling you get being at the beach," says Marion.

No matter what they did, the majority of the seniors had a very good time doing what they did best - HAVING FUN!!!!

Showing off his surfing talents, Jon Ritchart does an intense cutback at Bird Rock.

GOING, GOING, GONE!

SENIOR PARKING RAISES REVENUE

Groups of seniors began to form and the noise level grew. All were hoping to have the highest bid on the parking spaces nearest the main gate of the student parking lot.

Acting as auctioneer, Mr. Legace accepted bids that ranged from $30 to over $100 on the 81 available parking spaces. The auction netted the seniors approximately $5000. Most spaces were sold to individuals but in some cases friends pooled their money to buy a better space since they would drive to school together anyway.

Class adviser, Ms. Douglas, said the whole procedure ran smoothly throughout the year. Seniors were able to decorate their spaces anyway they chose as long as it was in "good taste". Ms. Douglas reviewed the spaces upon completion and none had to be redecorated again. Also, few citations were needed since violations of the designated spaces rarely happened.

Senior parking was a fundraiser that fostered creativity, cooperation, and imagination. It also was one that lasted all year long.

Usually the parking spaces have school spirit oriented themes, but this year, Dana Fennessy and most seniors sought to engender a spirit of fun and humor by depicting comical or cartoon characters in their art work.

ONCE AGAIN SENIORS ARE

VICTORIOUS in CHARIOT RACE

The screams and shouts were heard throughout the football stadium as the chariot teams took their places on the track. Each team wanted to win and earn points in the class competition.

The gun sounded and the senior team immediately vaulted into the lead. They maintained their lead and won the race.

Chad Chapman said, "It was really kind of fun knowing who our competition would be and knowing how fast they were. We were chosen to run for our class because we won for the past three years." Although volunteers constructed the chariots, it was the running team that hauled it to victory.

Close on the heels of the seniors came the sophomores, then freshman with the juniors bringing up the rear. Junior Brian Harmon said, "We knew it would be hard to beat the seniors but we gave it out best try and it was fun."

Panting for breath and with the sophomore team close behind, leaders Chad Chapman and Apollo Kollias pull hard for the finish line as anchors Jim Barton and Toby McLaughlin push to give the seniors the win.

"RELIABILITY
One of the ways someone can rely on me is that if I tell them I will do them a favor, I don't back out at the last minute. And if something comes up where I do have to cancel, I let them know ahead of time so they can make other arrangements.

LOCKERS MAKE STUDENT LIFE EASIER

Often the little things that make life run smoothly are taken for granted. One of the best examples is the student locker. Two essentials made up the locker. One was school supplies and the other was the "extras".

School supplies included folders and books for each class, and some Bic pens and Papermate pencils hiding among the notebooks. It's difficult to imagine lugging around six folders, books, paper and writing utensils if lockers weren't available.

The "extras" are what made a locker personal. Some students carpeted their lockers because they wanted their books to be comfy, looked nice and added the personal touch. Inside the door were stickers, phone numbers, pictures, posters, and more. The most popular pictures were of groups, sports, muscly hunks, or gorgeous blondes. Greg Branson asked, "What would I have done without my favorite girl there to greet me each hour?"

The locker housed hair spray, colognes, perfumes, after shave, combs and brushes. Probably most important was the ability to get a "pass" to the locker to retreive something or just to take a break. Whatever the locker held or whatever the purpose, it served ably as students crammed their goods, slammed their doors, decorated for birthdays, and chatted with nearby locker mates. Though not always paid very much attention to, it was indeed a central necessity for all students.

EARNING WHILE LEARNING

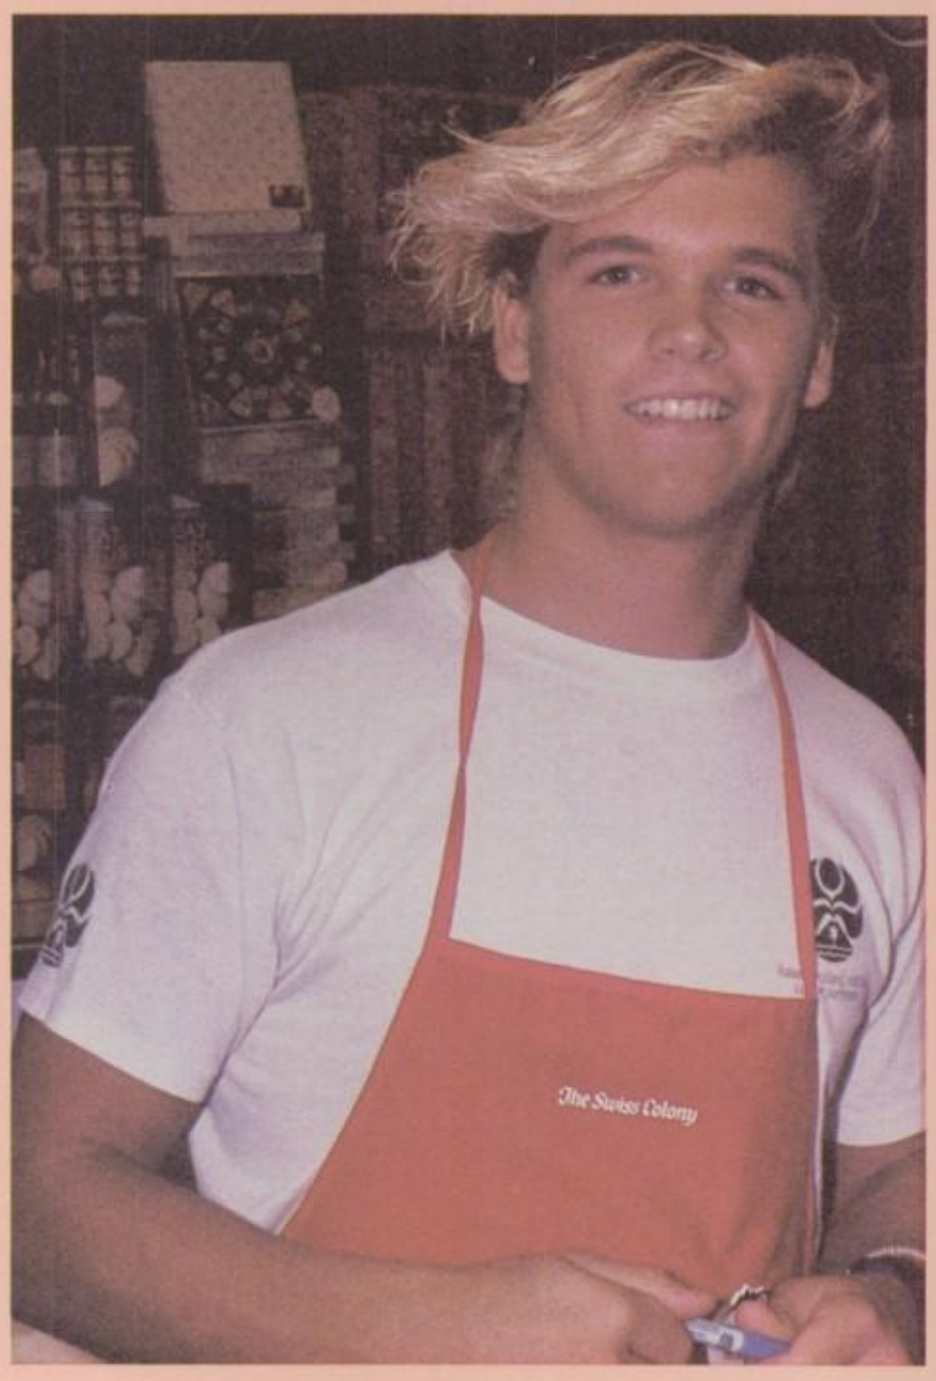
It's a way to gain experience and earn money at the same time. The work experience program allows 90 juniors and seniors to work in the community in various jobs.

Work experience teacher, Mr. Paradowski said, "This program is basically an awareness program to show teenagers the pressures at work and of life, learn how to make a budget according to an income, and most of all to learn responsibility, honesty, and loyalty."

A strong aspect of the program is to teach students what an employer expects an employee to do. One work experience student said, "It's a good program to take advantage of since you learn a lot about your job and get better hours for working."

In addition, the program stresses the importance of enjoying the job. According to statistics, 80% of employed people are unhappy with their jobs in some way. Since most people's lives revolve around their jobs, the program has the advantage of letting the student learn early what they want in a job as well as what to avoid.

According to Mr. Paradowski, "If you do a good job in any field of your interest, you'll climb that ladder of success." The skills gained offers the work experience student an advantage in their effort to become successful.



Working at Swiss Colony Kitchen, Jon Ritchart is learning how to deal with customers and recognize that if they are rude or unkind, it's nothing personal.

"Senior Citizens" Published Monthly

The Senior news letter "Senior Citizens" was published monthly in an effort to keep the graduating class informed of important dates and activities. "We published this memo with the hopes of increasing the student involvement in their class," said Karla Hopper.

The letter contained information pertaining to Senior class activities, news of executive board, college dates, and most other school related topics and events. Entertaining stories written by various students were also among the printed articles. "We welcomed stories from everyone who wished to contribute," said Karla.

Some of the timely contributions included the Christmas dance, prom, senior breakfasts and news of test and college application dates as well as how to's on applying for financial aid.

DARWELL BELIEVES

"LIFE IS WHAT YOU MAKE IT"

A basketball fanatic, as well as a softball and tennis player, Theresa Darwell is very athletic. When not participating in sports, Theresa divides her free time between clubs, work, school, and friendships.

Theresa has been in both the bike club and the key club. In fact, she was president of the bike club in her junior year. Bike club advisor, Mr. Lipetzky, describes Theresa as "a positive, conscientious, dependable student."

Despite all her other activities, Theresa is also involved in her church youth group and holds a part-time job at her grandfather's insurance agency doing basic clerical work.

Friends are an essential part of Theresa's life and have helped her to become the honest, trusting, patient individual she is today. She is described by close friends, Chris Martin and Lorissa Shenefield, as a creative, energetic and all-around fun person. She is loyal to her peers and if a friend needs her, Theresa will be there. Her caring nature touches all that know her.

Theresa believes, "Life is what you make of it and you need to believe in yourself and in the people you care about." She strives for the best: good grades, meaningful friendships, and success in sports. With her optimism and determination, "Tees" or "TD" (as she is known by friends), is sure to reach the top.

TRUCKS MODIFIED for SHOW

On any typical day Darren McGarvie, Donavon Long, or Glenn Simmons could be seen driving around in their minis, looking for some fun.

These three guys all share a common interest in lowered trucks which are "different and fun" said Glenn Simmons, who's had an interest in lowered trucks for over a year.

These trucks couldn't be bought at any local truck dealer. It took time, effort, and money, "but it's rewarding in the end," said Glenn Simmons.

They're nicknamed "Slammed Trucks", because of the modifications. In order to modify the truck, first the rear blocks are lowered and the torsion bars are loosened. Besides being lowered, there are choices such as paint job, interior, and maybe even a stereo system. These choices have to be made, and it's all a matter of taste, which can run someone between $500 to $1500, depending on the quality selected.

These truck owners spend most of their time maintaining them for shows and driving around. When they receive comments, like "cool truck" they get pretty happy. "We sometimes get criticisms, but just in Lakeside," said Darren McGarvie. "But usually we get good comments so it makes it worthwhile."

Clubs are available for those who are interested in slammed trucks, like "Matters None," which Darren, Donavon, and Glenn joined. There, they met people with similar interests. The club provided opportunities to compete with their trucks in shows. Since prizes could be won, and when that much time has been spent in preparing for the show, and the work put into the truck, it felt good to win like Darren McGarvie. He won a plaque for best paint job and one for best custom truck. Although Glenn, and Donavon have not yet won, they enjoy the competition.

With pride, Donavon Long and Darren McGarvie show the modifications they've made on their prize winning trucks.

SENIORITIS: The CAUSES, The CURE

A very discriminating epidemic swept the campus once again. The diagnosis - senioritis. The disease only affected those students nearing graduation but always caused apathy towards school.

The symptoms of the illness were easy to detect; irregular attendance, declining grades, and a never ending wish for the last day of school to approach swiftly.

Fortunately, there was a prescription for this cruel affliction. The cure was to hit the beaches for some surfing, to go up to the snow, or to sneak off for an occasional rendez-vous with friends. This kept up until grades started to really drop, taking spirits along with them. With the college admissions process facing them, most seniors got serious and put their attention back in school. When the reality hit, they hit the books. Sherry Peek said, "Getting more involved in school activities helped cure my senioritis, but it was always a struggle not to hope for the last day of school."

All too soon their wish came true and the epidemic had run its course with graduation. It waits, however, for the next batch of victims. If hasn't gotten you yet, it will.

Suffering from senioritis, Denise Nash, Diana Bradley, Tracy Cole, and Bob Hermosillo discover a momentary cure in the senior breakfast at the Kopper Kettle.

DATING PATTERNS VARY AMONG SENIORS

Opinions ranged from not dating because of school, finances, or work schedules to couples who have been together for two years.

"I think this is a time to date a variety of people and to experience lots of different personalities. It's hard to be in a long term relationship and still have time for friends," said Bob Urquhart.

Mary Hanna and Todd Owens have been together nearly a year and a half and enjoy the companionship they share whether it's the movies, bike riding, or shopping. Another couple of two years duration, Traci Welch and Jon Richart, say they enjoy doing the same things like going to the beach, surfing, shopping and talking. Traci said, "I had a crush on Jon for nearly a year before we got together. I'm sure what we share now is true love."

Both couples shared that it takes trust, honesty and hard work to keep the relationship going well. They like having a commitment to each other. For others like Tom Lane, this seems too early to have commited relationships. He feels too tied down and doesn't like the hurt feelings when a longer term relationship dissolves.

JASON BARBEAU: SCHOLAR, ATHLETE, HUMANIST

Sitting under a tree reading poetry, writing a short story, or just thinking, Jason Barbeau enjoys a few rare moments of free time. It is true that this 17 year old does not have much time to devote to hobbies as he is an active participant in an extensive list of organizations at school, while still maintaining a 4.5 G.P.A.

Jason enjoys being involved. He feels that if he tries hard enough, he will be able to get everything done right. He is not sure of what gives him his motivation, except that he feels good when he is involved in something important. He believes that anybody can make a difference. He comments, "Satisfaction comes from seeing others having a good time and getting things done right."

Sometimes Jason does feel that he takes on just a bit too much and he finds emotional release in basketball, tennis and bicycling. Being able to do these things have also given him an opportunity to be with others and make new friends. He also likes to get back to "natural nature", and he seeks a positive aloneness.

Although he hasn't thought too deeply about the future, Jason does want to go to Yale or UCSC, then into the Peace Corps to do what he can to make a difference in Africa. His main goal is to see people helping people.

Jason says that many good people have influenced him during his life, but he doesn't want others to think of him as the "All American School Boy" who has no problems. He doesn't want to be known for his activities, but as a very caring and sensitive person with more in his heart and his mind than even his accomplishments can reveal.

Students Share Thoughts on Friendship

Friends are an important part of everybody's life, but what exactly is a friend? Beth Cundari describes a friend as "Someone who will listen to you and will appreciate what you stand for." Therese Mitchke stated, "A friend is someone you can trust with your secrets and is honest, forgiving and never backstabs you no matter what."

Some say it is easy to get friends. Senior Thom Lane met his best friend Joan Lee in fifth grade. They used to fight, but through those fights they became closer. Now they go horseback riding together, swim and play water polo or just talk and have fun as many friends do.

Of course, there are also conflicts since friends do not always agree. Therese's advice for resolving conflicts is " . . . to approach your friends and talk about the problem one to one and get your feelings out in the open. Get them resolved face to face and be honest and forgiving." Andrea Snoen says, "Friends are important because they need you as much as you need them."

Sharing secrets and fun in friendship is the usual, but Kelly Cruse and Shelly Nichols take that a step farther. They even end up on restriction at the same time since when one stretches the limits, the other one does too!

ONE of the MOST IMPORTANT THINGS in the WORLD

One of the reasons Dane Pennington and Kenny Ruis are best friends is they're both so easy to get along with.

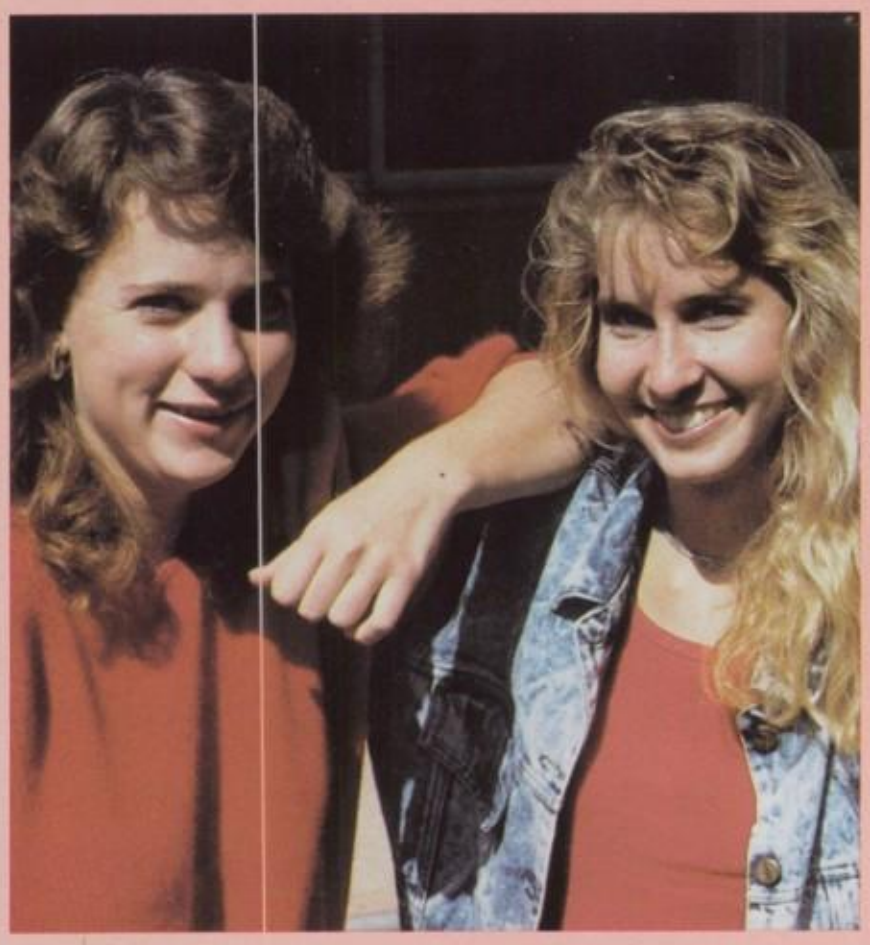
When you wake up in a good mood, ready to face the day cheerfully, usually it's not because you get to go to algebra again. It's probably because you have something special planned with a friend.

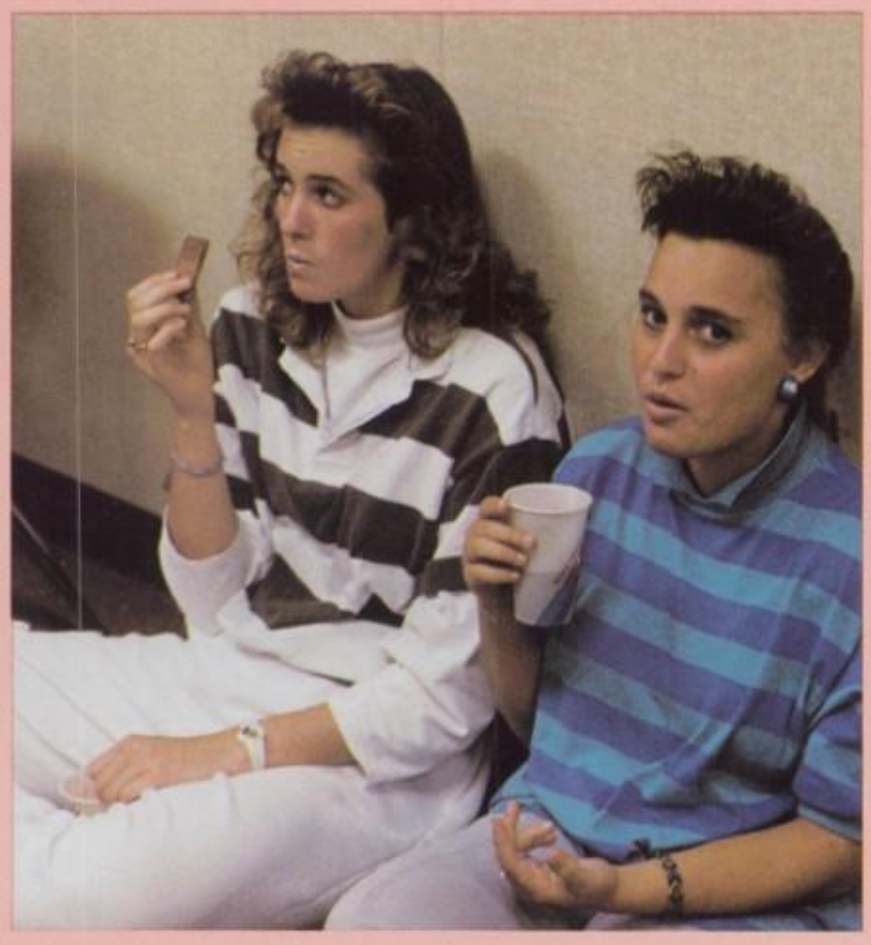
Friends are a very important part of everybody's life, but what exactly is a friend? Beth Cundari describes a friend as "someone who will listen to you and will appreciate what you stand for." Therese Mitchke defined a friend is "someone you can trust with your secrets. Someone who is honest, forgiving, and never backstabs you no matter what."

For some people, making friends is a frightening ordeal, for others it comes easily, and for still others it happens quite by accident. Senior Thom Lane met his best friend, Joan Lee, in the fifth grade. They used to fight constantly but through this bickering they became close. Now, they go horse-back riding, swim, and play waterpolo together.

Of course with friendship comes conflict for the simple reason that two people cannot agree on everything all the time. Therese's advice for resolving these differences of opinions is, "Approach your friends and talk about the problem one to one and get your feelings out in the open. Get them resolved face to face and be honest and forgiving."

Companionship can make or break the high school experience but the best part of friendship is the giving and the taking. As Andrea Snoen says, "Friends are important because they need you as much as you need them."





Eating lunch together is one of the many things best friends Dawn Carson and Judy Almeda enjoy doing together.

From Brownies to getting their first cars, Diane Rouza and Amy Paradowski have been through nearly everything together.

The Scoop On Stickers

Go out to the school parking lot and read some classics. "No way," you say? Well, these classics aren't Shakespeare but are printed on the bumpers of the cars lining the lot's stalls.

Bumper stickers can tell a lot about the person driving. "Born To Shop" tells that this person loves credit cards and sales slips. "Friends Don't Let Friends Drive Drunk" does a community service and lets the public know how the driver feels about alcohol. Others like "Curiosity Didn't Kill the Cat, My Truck Did" just show a warped sense of humor.

In a survey passed out to the senior class, the two top vote getters were "91X" stickers and the popular "Class of '88" stick on.

One senior responding on the survey said, "Every senior should have a bumper sticker that says 'Class of '88' because they should be glad that they are graduating with friends that they've grown up with."

Another said, "I'd never put a sticker on my car. They look so tacky."

Either way, bumper stickers are here to stay and besides, they do give us something to chuckle at while trying to get out of the parking lot after school.

RESEARCH AND EFFORT: KEYS TO SCHOLARSHIPS

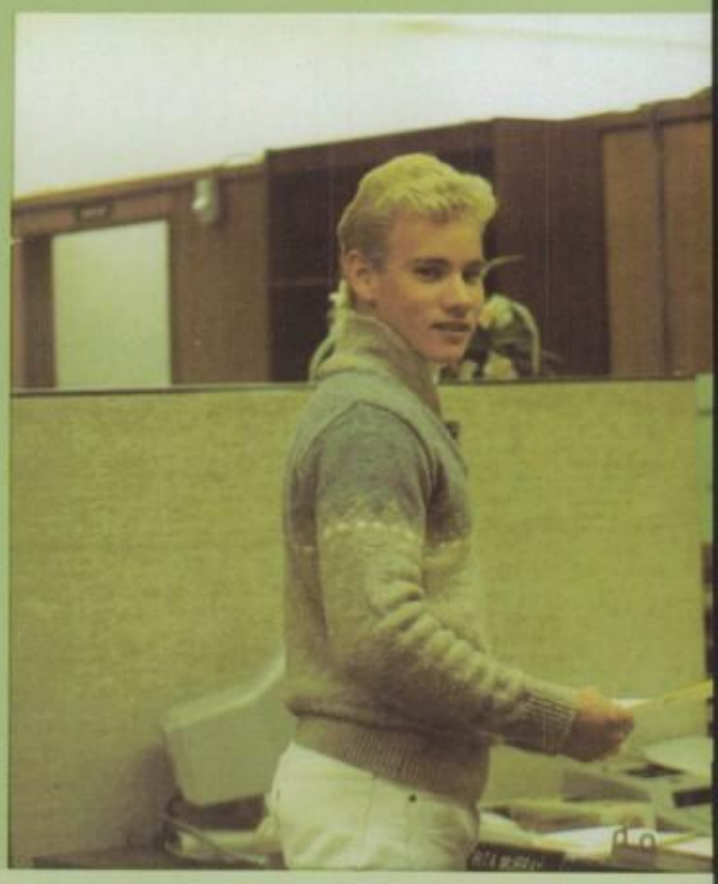
College costs continue to soar and most schools will be beyond the financial reach of many students unless they receive scholarships, grants and financial aid.

For many students, fall semester was filled with search and paperwork. In October, they received the first of many scholarship bulletins. They were blessed with a secretary in the counseling center that helped with finding the best possible scholarships.

Many students found scholarship information on their own. Manuel Hernandez took advantage of the school's computers in his search. The computer became a valuable search tool making more possibilities available to the seniors. It not only informed them of which monies were available but what special requirements were needed.

Some seniors speculated that they needed two additional class periods in order to fill out all the paper work and follow-up on the variety of letters of recommendation they needed to package their financial packets for the various sources of funding.

Though it was time consuming at the time as well as tedious, when the awards of monies began to come through, it was viewed as time well spent with some trying to figure how much they made per hour.



With many possible scholarships available, Eric Roberts takes advantage of Ms. Murray's valuable insight on which scholarships he might qualify and apply for.

CATHY PERRY: INSPIRED AND INSPIRING

"Energetic, friendly, outgoing, and responsible," said Ms. Romaine. "She's a person of high standards, who is an inspiration to everyone she is around."

Cathy Perry exemplifies these characteristics. Her involvement has been keenly observed by fellow students. She has been sophomore and senior class president, a cheerleader, and an avid member of Campus Life. In addition, she was president of S.A.D.D., held office for the Youth Leadership Board at her church, and is a member of the church choir.

People enjoy being around her because she's fun. She believes a person must be a friend before expecting to have friends. She describes her friends as . . . "a vital part of my life. They keep me going, encourage me and support me." She says "I cannot have standards for friends because everyone is unique. If two people enjoy one another's company and find special places in each other's heart, then love, trust, and the other important qualities of friendshipseem to come naturally." Consequently, Cathy has many friends.

Cathy has decided to attend either Redlands or U.C. Irvine and major in French and Spanish so she can teach at the secondary level and apply it to missionary work later.

Cathy said she wants to be remembered "as a friend and someone who didn't get involved in things just for the glory, but as someone who wanted to help out and cared about what was going on."

Senior Standouts

After several days of voting and counting, seniors honored fellow seniors by selecting a few they felt stood out in different categories.

Everyone had an opportunity to be selected. Ballots were handed out to the civics classes with the categories and two blanks by each. Seniors then filled in their choices for each category. Although it was more difficult to tally, it afforded everyone a chance to be a "standout" for the class of '88.

Humanistic, Intelligent, Friendly, Active:

Portrait of Joel Comford

Junior Class President Joel Comford views himself as, " . . . friendly, and easy to get along with."

Also believing himself to be a strong leader, Joel's decision to run for class president was made in hopes of making a difference. His foremost goal for this school year was to promote class spirit by uniting the students into a family.

Aside from these duties, Joel is a member of the Humanities Club, Youth Ambassadors, and Vice President of S.A.D.D. Amnesty International, a new organization this year, was introduced to the school by Joel, and he now acts as one of five organizers of the campus' A.I. chapter.

Joel's involvement began when he attended an A.I. meeting of the San Diego chapter in order to research a report. He was impressed by the concept of A.I., and began attending meetings on a regular basis. When he thinks of the mistreatment these prisoners endure, Joel explains, "It angers me; it makes me want to get up and do something about it."

Although he feels that he is basically a loner, Joel enjoys being near people. He finds interest in talking with people who, ". . . present new ways of seeing things." Through this communication, Joel has gained an appreciation for exploring different theories and religions.

In addition to direct contact with a variety of human beings, Joel seeks education through reading and music. His current favorite author is Oscar Wilde. A wide range of music appeals to Joel. Classical, New Age, Ska, and Reggae are among his preferrences. However, if asked to name one type of music as his overall favorite, he chooses jazz, particularly a group titled "The Style Council."

In choosing his friends, Joel tends to be selective. Intelligent, caring individuals attract him most often, as well as those who are consistently willing to be supportive of others.

Describing his friends as, "Very much like myself," Joel stated his closest friends to be Chris Blanco, Maile Kahananui, Jason Barbeau and Lorraine Demi. As he spoke of his home life, he added his mother to that list. Because he lives alone with her, they generally get along well. Joel says that while most people his age don't enjoy their mother's company, he likes to spend time with his mother by, " . . . going shopping, and out to dinner."

It is Joel's opinion that the bond of friendship is special and the strongest form of love. This belief stems from the certainty with which he feels that "Close friends will always be there for you."

Reflecting on the school year, Joel feels that the single most important lesson he has learned concerns life in general. He has come to view life as a temporary state. Summarizing this theory, Joel stated, "You can't trivialize life, because you never know what might happen every day."

Conducting a brainstorming session, Joel Comford lists ideas for the Homecoming float.

It's most important to be honest with myself because it is me who makes my life the way it is. I am the final decision maker, not others so I feel being honest with myself is the key. If I can't be honest with myself, who can I really be honest with?

From soccer to volleyball, from then to now, Danielle Gerdes distinguishes herself positively on the playing fields.

Dinger Gerdes:

The Best Kind of Friend

Bright, energetic, and athletic all describe Junior Danielle Gerdes. To top off this, she's nice too.

Danielle, mostly known as "Dinger", likes most everyone, which explains one friend's admiration, "She's the best kind of friend, the kind that listens. She is not so involved with herself that she doesn't have time for you."

Being a good friend and listener are important qualities that Dinger prides herself on. Her optimistic and enthusiastic attitude spilled over onto the volleyball court where she was voted "Most Inspirational" by her teammates.

Her involvement in DECA and Humanities have honed her communication skills, "The reason I get along with people is because I can understand them so well." Being involved in school and getting something out of it are more important to her than any grade. "Grade point averages don't reflect what you've learned, but how hard you've worked." Dinger's 3.2 GPA demonstrates how hard she has worked and learned for herself and her friends.

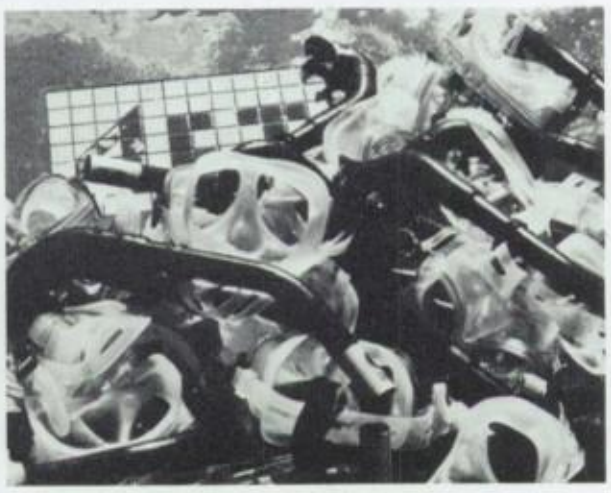
In a front "wave" seat, Teri Sanders observes the class underwater, to make sure they are performing their underwater scuba drills correctly.

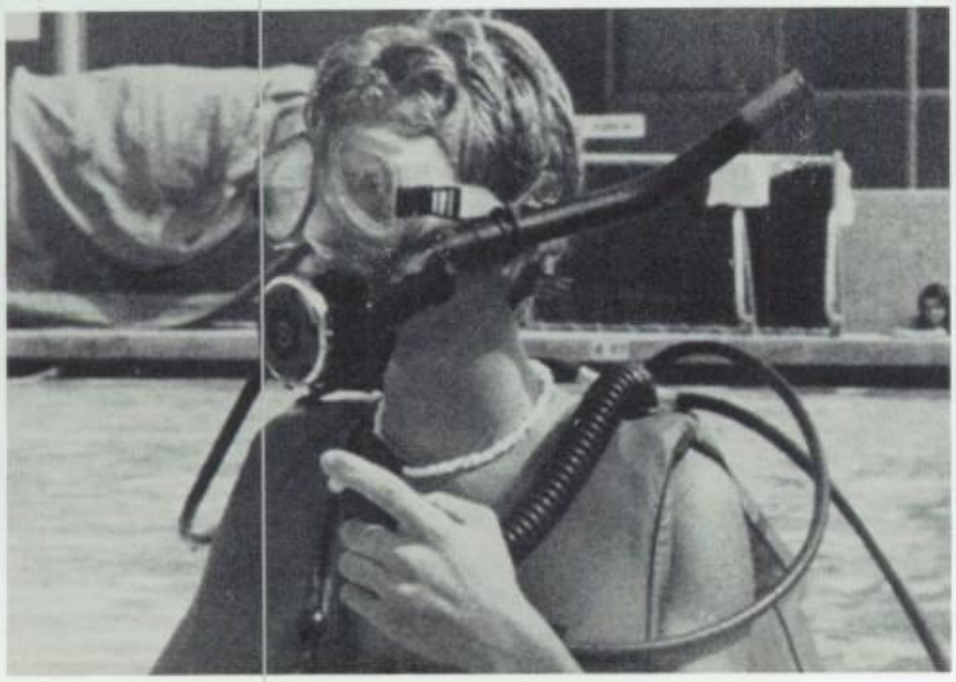
Trying to attract Paula's attention, Scuba instructor Jack Gremminger has Danny Hildebrand and Don Stoles call her name.

Prior to an ocean dive, Felissa Denow practices breathing through the regulator.

At the end of the period, the equipment is laid on the pool deck, so it can be washed off and prepared for the next class.

In order to stay afloat, Patrick Ishie is drilled on how to inflate his bouancy control device.





Relaxation and Confidence

KEYS to DIVING SUCCESS

The days started with a few quick announcements and the agenda for the day. The divers walked over to the bins and picked up their masks, snorkles, and fins. As they were being fitted, the instructions were given, partners picked, and they were ready for the day. With a splash, they went into the pool. The students helped each other check the equipment, making sure everything was secure.

A Scuba Diving Program in the schools was implemented by Jack Greminger. He used to teach Scuba Diving in the High Schools at Orange County and Los Angeles. When Jack moved to San Diego, he couldn't believe that Scuba Diving wasn't offered in any form through the High Schools. "What the heck, why have it up in Orange County and Los Angeles and not down here in Sunny San Diego?" stated Jack.

The Scuba Divers went on many beach trips, while in the course, but the best was yet to come. They went to Catalina in November, for two nights and three days. The Scuba Divers got to experience what it was like to go on a real ocean dive. The previous beach trips, they just went to La Jolla Shores, but "La Jolla Shores can't even compare to Catalina," said certified Scuba Diver Jessica Atlas.

In order to be certified, "You must demonstrate confidence in yourself and relaxation in the water while performing many different skills," said Jack.

Scuba student, Don Stokes said, "I was interested in it and I plan to become certified later on." The motivation level was high in both places and thirty-one of El Cap's students became certified divers.

PEER COUNSELING: STUDENTS HELPING STUDENTS

"Students find it easier to talk to peers as opposed to adults for fear that they can't relate to their problems," says Peer Counselor Vicki Elliott.

Although the course wasn't offered until the beginning of this year, the response was good. The idea was brought to the PTA's attention last year by Isabel Piccini and is supported by El Capitan's faculty.

"The peer counselor's this year hope to achieve a drug free school, the support, and trust of the students through confidentiality," states Vicki.

The counselors went through many weeks of training, studying, and preparation to be able to become a peer counselor. The majority of these counselors aren't perfect students themselves. They have encountered many of the same problems as their clients. Just because they were taught how to counsel, don't think that they are perfect, have no problems, and are unable to relate to the problems of others.

The peer counselors advertised the services they offered by going around to the English classes and announcing the hours they were available for the students. There were also messages in the bulletin and flyers that were hung in the classrooms.

An orientation was held for all of the new students during lunch in September, letting them know someone could help make their adjustment easier.

Responsible On the Field and Off

When on the campus or out on the field, one familiar face to everyone is that of Andrew Johns.

Andrew started off his senior year with a winning football season. As one of the captains and running back, he led the team to a 6-4 finish and to CIF playoffs. His playing also earned him the Daily Californian's Player of the Week and Month and gave him a position on the 1st All-League team. Andrew says it was Coach Waasted who helped him achieve these goals because he makes a player want to be better and work toward team effort.

Some of Andrew's other goals include those for his senior year. He would like to win a scholarship for his football playing or academic achievements. He also hopes to get to meet and know more people from his graduating class so he'll remember them in the years to come.

Aside from football, Andrew also takes part in peer counseling, journalism, and the barbell club. He feels peer counseling has been a gift to the school in that it has given students the opportunity to talk with someone their own age without feeling the pressure they might with an adult. For him, helping others has been self-gratifying and rewarding.

Although Andrew had never had a lot of writing experience, he took journalism his junior year by counselor suggestion. He has since realized he likes to write and has been inspired to continue by class advisor, Sandy Schuster.

To fulfill his requirements for the barbell club, Andrew also enjoys lifting weights in his spare time.

While being involved in various sports and clubs, Andrew must maintain good grades. He's continued to do this and claims, "When I get good grades, I feel better about myself. They're also a good stepping-stone for college." He feels he has high self-esteem and believes in himself, which he says was fostered when he began to succeed in school and sports.

Another trait Andrew admires in himself is his open-mindedness, which has made peer counseling and getting along with others come easily to him. He also feels a good friend should have many qualities such as being fun and outgoing, a good listener, and especially, responsible. "Responsibility is part of maturity," says Andrew.

Since there are no tables, students group wherever they can find space to talk, eat or people watch.

Trying to keep all her work current, Tracy Powell uses lunchtime to get a head-start on the next day's homework.

Lunchtime is Crunch Time

You are in your last five minutes of fourth period. You grow tense, eager, and start to chew nervously on your pencil eraser. The growl in your stomach becomes a roar. You count each minute, waiting, perspiring. Your eyes are fixed on that clock and your stomach on lunchtime. "When will it ring," you ask yourself. Finally, the bell rings. Its shrill scream is a delight to you.

You tear out of class, down the hall, and into the lunch line. But you didn't get there fast enough. The line of kids there before you seems endless. It moves slowly and by the time you get to the window and order, half the lunch period has passed.

Most agree that lunch time is much too short. Marion Sandoval said, "It should be longer, you never have time to eat and to socialize."

But there are also good things about lunch. "It gives me time to catch up on my homework when I don't eat lunch," said Tracy Powell. Others such as Kim Vanvein spend their time with close friends socializing.

Kim said, "It's a time for me to release my bottled-up energy with Marion." Whether you've used lunch time to fight the lines or socialize, everyone agreed the time was too short. The bell rings and feet trudge back to the lockers and rooms but with less anticipation and often with a bit of lunch there wasn't time to finish.

“

SELF-ESTEEM:

Biking for Fun and Necessity

During the year, several juniors rode their bikes to school because either some didn't have a license or a car and some because they enjoy riding. Through the rain or shine, they would ride to get to El Capitan. Some of them said they rode distances of from eight to ten miles to school. Bruce Hill rode a yellow schwin and enjoyed riding from Alpine to Lakeside and back again.

Aaron Hanson rode a white Niussbi everyday because it's his only way to school. Junior Jared Malmquist owns a blue Monnetto. He enjoys racing and rides from 200-300 miles a week.

All of these juniors said they enjoy riding during the week too.

Junior Class Makes Strong Showing

First place on the Homecoming float and a first place on the corner theme at the dance brought the juniors prizes of $200 for the treasury and a pizza party. This was a positive start for the junior class.

The next major project to raise funds was promoting a sweetheart dance Valentine's weekend. Unfortunately, despite strong, creative publicity, the turnout was low. The basketball team was playing an important game and divided the numbers that could attend. "Those who attended had a great time," said Chris Wirtz, "we were disappointed by the small crowd because our net profit was only about $50."

Kim Varvel said the year had been a learning experience and the best part "was being able to communicate with our class and as a vice president, being able to help the other officers."

Olivieri Establishes Designer Locker

For many students, a locker is simply a place to stash books and clothes. For one student it was much more. Joe Olivieri made his locker unique by decorating and adding everything but books.

"I don't know," said Joe, "it just sort of grew. First I got the carpeting and it mushroomed from there."

After carpeting, Joe added a tape player which he listened to (as did his neighbors) between classes when he would freshen up. The journalism class always knew when Joe had entered the room as the scent of Brut wafted in before him. He carefully arranged his favorite grooming materials for easy access. The locker became the center of attention as students wandered by to take a look or comment on the contents of the locker that held everything but books.

Unfortunately, shortly after Joe's picture was taken here, someone broke into the locker stealing most of the contents.

Practice Prompts

Improvement for Scholars

Practice, practice, practice! Practice enhances improvement in anything. That includes test taking. Many juniors prepared for the Scholastic Aptitude Test, (SAT) by taking the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test (PSAT). This test allowed students to compare their ability to do college work with other college bound students, along with giving practice for the SAT.

Many counselors recommended the test because of the similarity the PSAT has with the SAT. Mr. Brown said, "Juniors planning to go to a university should take this test. It lets students see how they compare with other students around the country, plus students get their test booklet back to study for the SAT. "Students who took the test agreed. Karin Hamilton, one of the 117 El Capitan students who took the PSAT, said she took it "because I wanted to get an inside look at what the SAT may be like. Now that I have taken the test, I have found out what I need to work on before taking the SAT."

Robert Leirmoe, another student who took the test, said he took it so I would know what my strengths and weaknesses are when I take the SAT." Both of these students felt the test increased their chances of scoring higher on the SAT and raised their overall comfort level in test taking. Practice wasn't just for athletes, it was for scholars too!

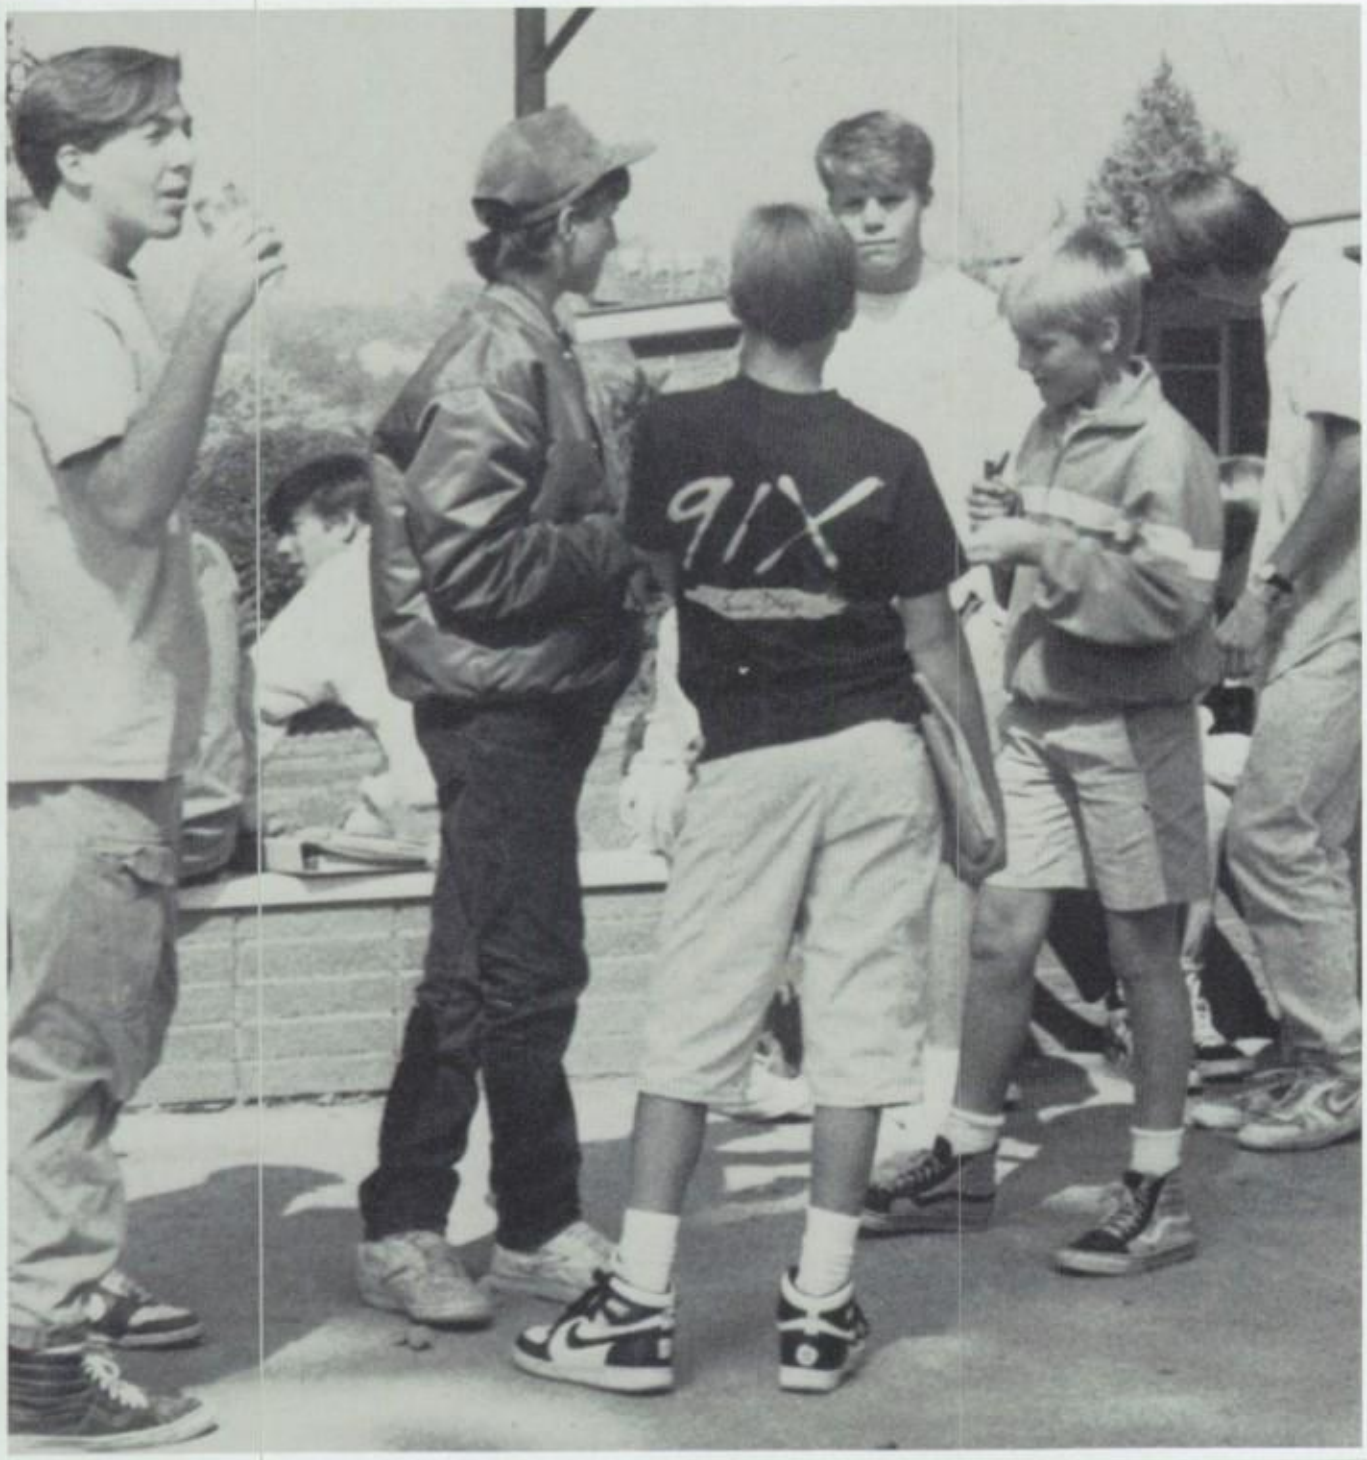
Tee Shirts:

Unofficial Uniform

Tee-shirts were the unofficial uniform of the 80's teenager. From freshman to seniors, teens were able to project messages, convey images or make a statement. The pictures and messages ranged from advertisements to glorifying "Seniors Off the Wall" to recalling places visited or supporting various athletic teams and rock groups.

Some shirts generated controversy within the district if the shirt depicted a drug or alcohol theme. District policy stated no such shirts were allowed on campus. A group of students challenged the policy resulting in an easing of the policy. Most students continued to wear their favorites while others sported no message at all. The ease and comfort seemed to be the key.



The 91X logo found its way not only to tee-shirts but jackets, bumper stickers, and book covers. Other tees were simply to say this is what I like to do, where I like to go, or what I have done recently.

Alea,
You sex crazed maniac? Every day you just turned me on flaunting your body around! I don't know what Jim gonna do next year without you around to flaunt your sexy bod! Anyway I had a good time! You made me laugh! I hope to see you next year. Give me a call sometime or if you ever try to find Jim!

Step To Independence

It's one of those required classes sophomores were eager to fit into their schedule as soon as possible. The driver education class was one step on the ladder to having a driver's license which would mark an important passage from dependence into independence.

They watched movies on driving safety rules and good turns. Attention was paid to what to do in case of emergency and a general awareness of car parts. For some, the class seemed endless with the worksheets and movies, but the final result made it worthwhile.

Sally Goldate said, "The best thing about the class is it helps us to pass the permit test."

Usually parents are happy when their kids pass exams. This was the one class that struck fear in their hearts rather than joy. They knew once the permit was in hand, their car was in jeopardy.

In class discussion, Kim Howatt answers a question on rules of the road.

When It Comes to Music

Hagen is Serious

At some point in time, most people have probably stood alone in their room, listening to their favorite groups on the radio and pretended they were the greatest guitarist ever, playing concerts in stadiums packed full of screaming fans, making number one album after another and dozens of videos. Thousands and thousands try for it, but only the best and the lucky ever succeed. Senior Chris Hagen has decided to make his own dream come true.

Every day after school Chris commits himself to practicing one of his guitars for approximately four hours. Practice makes perfect and Chris intends to be perfect. In the end, all of the hours of practice pay off by his being able to play almost anything that anyone requests and is even able to compose songs. "Chris Hagen is one of the finest," says friend Tim Brinigar.

Chris is serious about the music he plays, and he doesn't limit himself. He plays everything from classical Mozart to the blues. Chris used to be lead guitarist for a band, but he decided that it wasn't what he expected. "I quit the band because they weren't serious enough about the music that we played. I wanted more than just a lot of parties."

Chris wants to go all the way to the top with his music, and being in a band just to party wasn't the way to go about it for him. When it comes to his music, Chris Hagen isn't fooling around.

Friends Chris Hagen, Jim Hamilton, Michelle Nash and Bryan Buchiet relax on the quad at lunchtime.

A Quick Fix

Rush, rush, rush. It seems that students are always in a hurry. There's never enough time in the day to get everything done, including eating. Often, the easiest way to appease the hunger is to pull into the nearest drive-thru.

In the early days of fast food, there were hamburgers and hamburgers only. Today, there are a variety of options; fried chicken, Mexican food, oriental cuisine, and even breakfasts. Sometimes all these foods are available at one franchise.

The sophomore class decided to check out the fast-food world and see what chain was favored most. The winner hands down was Taco Bell and the Burrito Supreme with 48% of the votes. The Whopper and Burger King came in second with 33%. Arby's and their shakes took 12% of the popular opinion, and Jack-In-The-Box held 7% of the totals.

When appetites have been satisfied, the dining area becomes something more than just a place to eat, it's a place to hang out. Sometimes the popularity of one establishment is boosted when a friend gets a job behind the counter. Brent Sexton shows this point, "I like Taco Bell because of my friends, and the food's good."

Even though some parents may not approve, junk food is part of being a teenager. Yes Mom, french fries are good food. Well, maybe not, but it won't kill the fun going to favorite hang-out for a double fix or food and friends.

At Taco Bell the emphasis is on fast as Monique Wiley deftly sacks an order for the drive-through.

Whether the customers walk in or drive through, it is important that Patti Hutchinson take their order quickly and accurately.

Before Motivational Media began, ASB Advisor Stu Shaffer talked and guided students with opening remarks.

Build Bridges Not Walls

Building bridges between people, instead of walls, was Motivational Media's theme for an assembly presentation.

The presentation entitled "Bridges" took a close look at how young people today are building walls instead of bridges made of concern and understanding between themselves and the peers they are surrounded by. What is borne out of these walls are contempt, deceit, violence and misunderstanding.

The presentation illustrated through cartoons and first-hand experiences, the ineffectiveness of walls people build to protect feelings pent up inside of them. What's really effective are bridges of understanding and affection.

One student said, "I never realized how cruel people can be. This show made me take a good look at the world the way it is but doesn't have to be."

Wide Range Displayed in Fads and Fashions

Fads and fashions varied on campus this year from denim miniskirts to ankle length cotton skirts, from the casual to high class G.Q. There were backless dresses and kneeless acid washed jeans.

Junior Denice Sayatovich said, "I like many of the fashions but they don't express what I want to express, but I must say they are better than last year's."

Around campus it looked like 50's day, many days. Guys had pants rolled, tee shirts, loafers and flat tops. The surfer crowd wore brilliant jams and surfin' shirts and nearly everyone had jeans, 501's, tee shirts and casual sweaters.

They shopped at thrift stores, at boutiques and at the Gap in order to achieve "the look".

Friendship Made the Priority

Whether it was going to the mall, going to the beach, or just sitting around doing nothing at all, Gina Leone and Tammy Bordine were your average best friends who enjoy spending most of their time together.

Since Gina and Tammy have been friends for over five years, they have discovered different and exciting things together. Their best time is usually spent going to parties as well as spending the night at each other's home. Whatever it is, it's fun.

Although alike, Tammy and Gina do have their differences. Gina said, "Tammy is very stylish in her clothing and her grades are very important to her." Of the two, Gina is more outgoing and according to Tammy, a likeable person that is first rate.

To stay best friends, Tammy and Gina appreciate and understand each other. Gina said, "If Tammy and I both like the same guy, I would hope to sit down and work it out in a mature way." Tammy felt the same way and added, "There's no question about it, a best friend is better than any guy."

FUNDRAISERS BUILD CLASS TREASURY

No dues required — no subsidies available. Therefore, classes must look to themselves to build the treasury to cover their expenses. Often the burden is spread among the few for the many to conceive and achieve ways to produce needed income.

Class president, Mike Bonnet said the sophomores were conducting a variety of fundraisers to meet their financial needs. Their most successful venture was the "Welcome Back Dance" held in September. They made over $2500 which was by far the best money maker of the year. They did other things like selling Christmas wrapping and roses but nothing compared to the money produced by the dance.

Mike said, "I like helping my class by donating my time and energy — Hopefully others will do the same."

To conduct a successful fundraiser, class officers Jennifer Agostine, Kim Howatt, and Christy Krivitz share ideas at a class meeting.

> "COOPERATION: A cooperative person is someone that works well with other people. Usually, they are not selfish and make decisions based on what is best for everyone. Often, they are open minded. However, it is sometimes necessary to object if I feel strongly something isn't right even if everyone else in the group does.

Bonnett Blends

— Work
— Sports
— Recreation

For Mike Bonnett, winning isn't everything. He simply wants to do his best and have fun doing it, not only in sports but in his other activities too.

"Our goal is to make more money for our class than any other," said Mike Bonnett, sophomore class president. This year he said he was ready for anything, and was willing to put forth every winning effort he had.

"Mr. O'Malley is a good class advisor," said Mike. "He understands what we want to do for our class and that we want to be able to use our own ideas and solve our own problems. However, he knows when we are having problems and is always willing and able to help when we need it."

This year Mike decided that several small fund raisers would be the way to go. He liked the idea better than doing one huge one. "A large fundraiser, such as selling crystal hanging ornaments can cause a lot of problems with orders getting lost and buyers not being able to pay when their order comes in compared to the smaller ones." According to Mike, bigger isn't necessarily better.

"I really enjoy working with all of my friends on the staff, because they aren't afraid to say how they feel about one of my or anybody elses' ideas," said Mike. He enjoys having people around him that have an understanding for the way friends work together.

Mike also was involved in school in other ways. This year he played tennis. He said, "I had fun whether I won or lost. The reason I go out for a sport is because I enjoy playing it. I did win some matches, and I really had a great time even though I didn't always win. Playing with new people as well as old friends is most of the fun."

In Mike's spare time, he goes out with friends to have a good time, or sometimes he goes to the desert riding his motorcycle across the dunes. He enjoys riding with friends and family, but most of all it's all just for the fun of it.

SLANG: Ways With Words

Words are often used to play with. It's a fact that we don't speak in the same language we write in. What's the distinction? Slang.

Slang is everywhere from, "Whoa! Check out those totally awesome chicks!" to "Yeah, like too cool!" We've all heard it and even used some of these phrases that sound so silly when you think about them.

Merriam-Webster defines slang as "an informal nonstandard vocabulary composed typically of coinages, arbitrarily changed words, and extravagant figures of speech." But as stated earlier, we don't talk like we write so we asked a few people to define slang in their own words. Jeff Hill stated, "Like slang is totally like, the obscenity of a basic word." Carey Tinsley said slang was "Like words that are used in place of proper grammar, like rad or something totally hip." And finally, Brandi Branselter said, "Slang is used like when there are no other, like, words for the thoughts you are trying to express."

Each generation has their own slang. Haven't you ever laughed when your parents slip up and say "groovy" accidentally? Someday, we'll all chuckle at the thought of saying "rad" but until then, if the word fits — use it!

Sharing some conversation, Kristy Krivits and Billy Forest try talking without using any slang at all.

RELIABILITY:
The most reliable person I know is my dad. If I ask him to do something for me, he'll get it done, usually on time too! My friends describe me as reliable too because I do what I tell them I will. For example, if someone can't make it to work, and I say I'll work for them; they can count on me to show up.

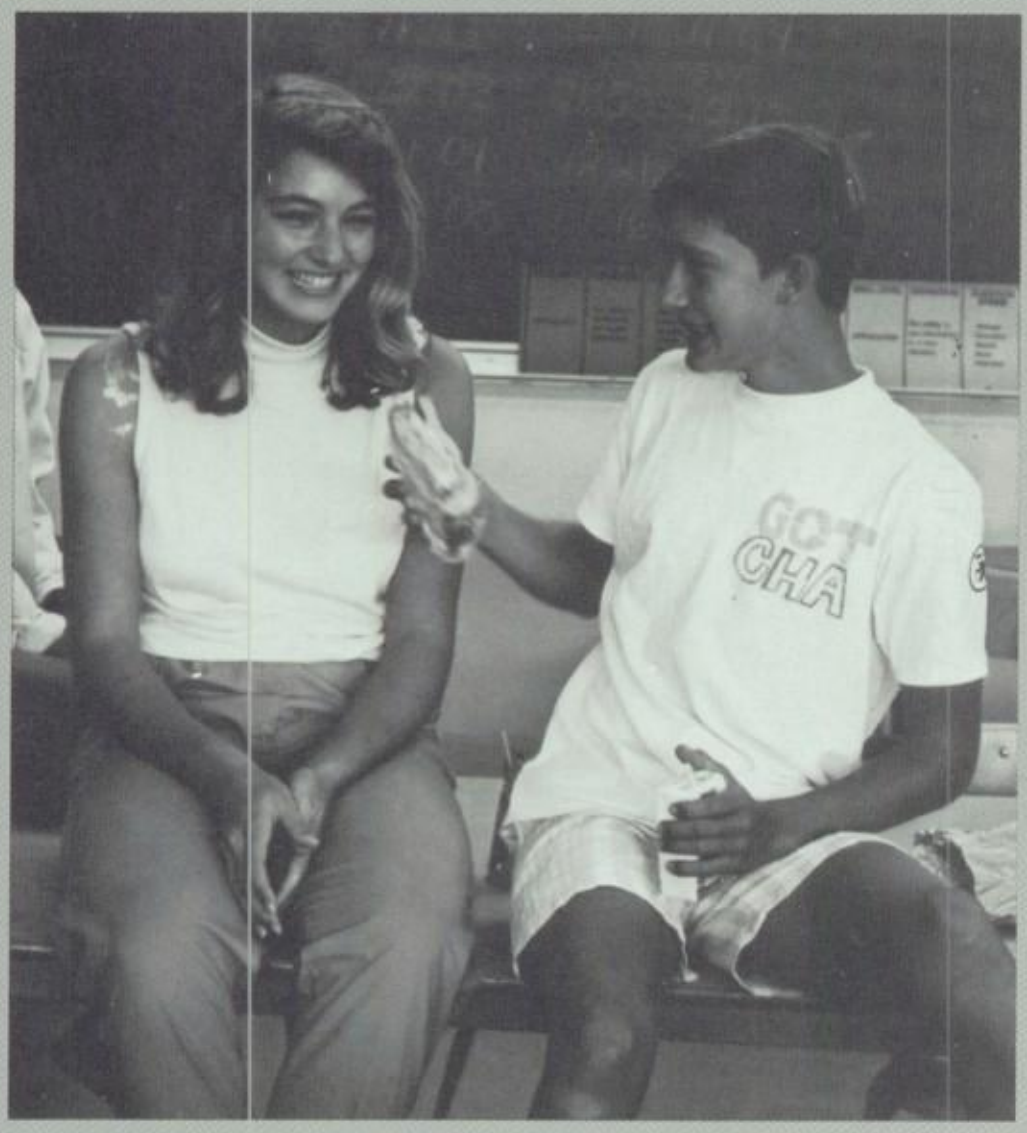
During lunch, sophomore class vice-president, Christie Krivitz sits with her friends and talks about events planned for their class.



CLASS OFFICERS and FRIENDS

ACCOMPLISH RECORD FUNDRAISING

"I wanted to run for a class office my freshman year because I didn't know anyone and I wanted to get involved," said sophomore vice president, Christie Krivitz. Christie has been a class officer for two years. Her freshman year she was the treasurer but now she has stepped up to the vice presidency. Christie and Mike Bonnett, the president, have big plans for their class. Already they have set records for raising the most money in the history of El Cap for a freshman class and are well on their way again this year. They expect many more fund-raisers in the future.

Christie Krivitz, Mike Bonnett, Jennifer Agostino, the secretary, and Lori Pangborn, the treasurer, all got along great in and outside of school and are good friends. Christie thinks it is better to be friends first, and then be officers because she can get her point across a whole lot easier.

Christie also plays extra-curricular sports. She played on the volleyball and basketball team and might do track. Not only does she excel in sports, but also maintains a 3.5 G.P.A. Christie says school comes easy to her.

Vice-president, Christie Krivitz, gives her ideas during the lunch time class meeting. She hopes to have another successful fundraiser to surpass the last.

Enjoying the sunshine at the Homecoming Rally, friends Carey Tinsley, Tammy Cruse, and Tracy Andrews discuss the upcoming game.

FRESHMAN FACE CHALLENGES

The first year in high school is a time when most people fall flat. New changes, ideas, and challenges face freshmen as well as the knowledge that there are four years left. A majority of the freshmen take the classes and do the required work, but some rise above the rest to exceed the set standards.

"For myself, striving to be the best means getting involved in class and school," said Carey Tinsley. "In junior high, apathy was the general rule when it came to getting involved. Nobody really cared about what was going on except for a few of us." Carey also mentioned her involvement in the class and the Homecoming float which won second place.

"The freshmen class can become better only if we work together," said Jennifer Clark. "Excellence as a class begins with everyone getting involved such as working on the float for Homecoming or officers making sure all goes right."

Some people excel outside of the classroom. Class clown Tammy Cruse is best at making people laugh. "I hate seeing people upset and sad. I strive to make them laugh, which being class clown for the past three years, seems to work." Tammy also excells in sports. "I've played basketball for the past five years and I hope to make J.V. basketball this season."

Excellence comes in more than sports and class involvement. Some people are great babysitters, while others work well at helping others. Whatever it is, each person is great at something and that is what excellence is about.

FRESHMEN CLASS OFFICERS SUCCEED IN TEAM APPROACH

What's hot this year in the Freshmen Class? It was the new officers Jason Heise, Jennifer Smith, Tara Marray, Renee Branski, Stelia Vanderpool and Daralyn Harris.

President Jason Heise stated that what he wants most for his class is to make the year the best ever for Freshman. Jason said, "I want our class to go out of high school with a big bang."

The officers want more money for their prom by having fund raisers such as car washes and hot dog stands. They hope to get the Freshmen more involved by going to games and matches.

Vice president Jennifer Smith has had experience as an officer at Lakeside Middle School. She said, "I want the Freshmen to be proud of their class, to get involved and make the El Cap years the best possible. I want school spirit boosted to an all time high."

Treasurer Tara Marray said, "I want us to lead the class right because I don't want to make any mistakes that would affect the class."

Daralyn Harris, Renee Branski and Stelia Vanderpool agreed, "We want to help our class be the best and raise money for our prom and other events."

These officers have many things in common. They all love to play sports, including swimming, softball, volleyball and football. They also all came from the same middle school so they have had previous experience in pulling together as a team. Their teamwork approach helped them to follow through on their positive plans for the class.

Handling publicity, Daralyn Harris works late prior to Halloween to keep the freshmen class informed on when and where they are meeting and working on activities.

During a lunchtime class meeting, Jennifer Smith discusses possibilities for decorating their float for the homecoming parade.

For the "duck and cover" portion of the drill, students mostly hovered under their desks.

Earthquake Drills Enacted for Safety

As the frequency of earthquakes increased, concern mounted. The County of San Diego instituted a county wide plan for preparedness.

Each member of the staff at all schools were given assignments and specific responsibilities in case of a real disaster. In turn, all classrooms had written instructions to carry out.

Initially, when the alarm sounded, students were to "duck and cover," making sure they were not near windows or loose shelving. After two minutes, everyone filed from the classrooms to a designated place on the campus where the person in charge could then take roll again to ensure that no one was missing and in need of assistance.

Reactions varied to the exercise. Most students felt it was a valuable exercise. A few did not take it seriously but would still have some idea what to do if the quake were real and not just a drill.

First Day School Generates Anxieties

As the last days of summer slipped away, many had trouble sleeping. The soon to be freshmen watched September 8 draw closer and closer.

Most freshman have heard horror stories about being dumped into trash cans or toilets and it weighed heavily on their thoughts. Other fears and concerns played on their imaginations too. Scott Gray said, "I was afraid of going into the wrong classes." By the end of the first day he discovered, "The teachers were not as mean as I expected and not one senior tried to kill me or dump me."

John Mc Feron was late for his first three classes but nothing awful happened. He said, "I was relieved to get through the first day without any major problems." Scott echoed the feelings of relief. They had made it through as did the many others. How the remaining one hundred seventy nine days would be, they didn't know but they were happy to have day one behind them.

Like everyone else, Jennifer Clark had concerns about the first day of school but felt glad her best friend had been there too.

Jason Heise:

ACTIVE, AWARE, ATHLETIC

Being a freshman isn't an easy job with the new rules and regulations to learn, what to do, and what not to do, and how to adjust. President Jason Heise has adjusted well in many aspects, such as athletics, scholarship, and the general routine of school. He is actively involved in J.V. football, track, basketball, and was President of the freshman class. Jason also showed his athletic powers by being "Vaquero of the Month" for October in P.E.

Jason's main concern is school. He has three college prep classes, two honors classes, and P.E. In these classes Jason receives A's and B's. After school he plays football, and at night he does his homework. He stays up until everything is finished. Jason says, "If you put work off, nothing gets done."

On weekends, Jason likes to get away from everything, so he goes out with his friends, Robert Presley, Chris Salewske, and Chris Tankersly and plays broomball, or something just to get away.

Jason hopes that his friends would say that he's a good guy to hang around, and fun to be with. Jason gets along with most people. He gives everyone a chance and allows time for them to show how they really are. He doesn't judge them by the first impression.

Jason tries not to let little things get to him, because it gets in the way of accomplishments.

Leading a class meeting, Jason Heise discusses suggestions for upcoming fundraisers.

As a reward for their good attendance, PACE students enjoy the first pizza party of fall semester.

*P*ositive *A*ttitudes *C*hanging *E*ducation: PACE

PACE was supported and subsidized by the PTSA and Peer Counseling. The program was part of a District effort to ease the transition from junior high to high school and to encourage attendance during the freshman year.

For the second year, El Capitan welcomed a randomly selected group of freshman to the campus in September. During August, Mr. Mann and project director, Ms. Sutton visited the homes of sixty incoming freshmen, explaining registration procedures and answering questions about high school in general.

During the first semester, PACE met every Thursday at lunch to talk about homework, grades, attendance or any problems that arose during the week.

Emphasis was always on the positive. Attendance was also a key factor and twice, pizza parties were a reward for those students who had zero to two absences.

PACE also encouraged parents to participate in a six-week parenting seminar held in the evenings during September and October. It promoted a positive climate between school and the community as well as welcome freshman to high school.

"RELIABILITY: I think reliable people are respected more than others because they do what they say they will do. Others can count on me to do what I say I'll do.

It's Scary and Fun

Making the Transition

Making the transition from a junior high to a senior high can be scary and frightening change. Learning new rules and regulations as well as learning where the classes are can be tough. But it can also be fun.

"When I came here, I found it to be bigger and more fun," said Todd Hanna.

"I found it (senior high) to be better," commented Toby Campbell. "High school has more to offer and more to do. I found that I don't have any problems with my classes being far away or the passing time too short."

With moving from one school to another, some freshmen find things much different and would like to see some different things.

"I wish we had a larger lunch area," said Nancy Castillo. "With the lunch time and the lines, it's becoming too crowded for everyone."

"With the idea of the passing period, I disagree with Toby," said Heather Wheaton. "My classes are close, but it's still nice to have some sort of break."

"I would like to see the busing system returned," Todd said. "It's a real pain not having the buses come near the house."

One thing is for certain though, all agreed that moving to senior high was a definite change.

COOL FUN IN THE SUMMERTIME

In those boring hot days of summer what is there to do? Some Freshmen boys found a spot to stop and have some fun. The sand pits behind the school provided a fun and cooling hangout for many Freshmen that had nothing else to get around with but a bike. Using only a bike, they flew off a ramp built next to the lake.

Jeff Kalynick, one of the regulars, says, "I can get crazier the longer I can get air." All tricks are performed without safety equipment, but keep in mind those guys were landing in the water. Tricks, jumps, and aerials that can barely be performed on ramps and jumps are compared to freck stunts and jumps they did.

Bret Hart states, "Any trick you can do on a ramp I can do out there plus add a flip if I'm lucky that day." They all used freestyle bicycles and tied a life vest to the handlebars so the bike wouldn't sink. Keith Royer adds, "Next time you feel like flying without crashing, come on out we'll be there!"

Best of Times Best of Friends

Over the years, people go through various kinds of relationships, but none seem so important as the high school best friends. Many things go into making a best friendship but most importantly it gives a certain sense of security that is hard to find anywhere else.

Tracey Andrews and Suzanne Felix met five years ago when they were both playing softball, a sport they share a love for playing. Their friendship developed from there and is more than being the usual “party buds” according to Tracey. While on the summer softball team they discovered they had much in common. They had the same taste in guys, clothes, and values in general. They even share Dr. Pepper as their favorite drink. On the weekends they go to parties, the movies or they just kick back at each other’s house.

“We have a lot of other friends but we never forget each other,” said Suzanne, “and I know that we’ll stay friends even after high school because we will continue to grow together.”

Bus Service Requirements Create Discontent

In an effort to cut costs this year, the district restricted bus service and raised the rates. The rider limit was changed to three and a half miles from school and bus fare was $1.00. It was a combination that had parents and students upset. Kory Byers said, "It's unfair to pay a dollar a day to ride the bus, our parents pay taxes and that should cover it."

Feelings ran strong as an unsuccessful recall effort of specific school board members was mounted by some individuals in the community.

As the semester wore on, everyone adjusted. Of course, freshman were affected the most by the more limited bus service. They were too young to drive so if a bus stop was not conveniently located they had to walk, bike or bum a ride. "Even when you can ride the bus, it takes too long, so I ride with my sister," said Tammy Cruse. The problem with arranging a ride with an upperclassman seemed to be getting home since many of the juniors and seniors had after school jobs and would leave campus early.

Although it created some hardships, the freshmen were creative in their efforts and managed to get to and from school daily.

After dashing to the bus to get a good seat, Brett Handley fights the bus rush to go back to his locker for his homework assignment and was able to run back in time for the ride home.

The New "Kids" On The Block

It's the first day of school and you're nervous. You're not too jumpy, but you still have a few butterflies. Now imagine that on a larger scale and you have the feelings of a new teacher on day one.

Being a new teacher is something most teachers enjoy because they get to know a whole new group of individuals. They also get to experience a new region and cafeteria food.

Karen Ashley came from Mountain Empire where she taught for four years. A native of Michigan, she received her Bachelor's degree from Michigan State University in 1983. Her enjoyment of El Cap is reflected in the students she teaches: she spurs them into excellence.

"The school is wonderful! The department is supportive and the administration is one of the finest," she said. "They are great about helping with problems and I have an excellent relationship with the kids."

Starting his teaching career as an electrician, David Ravizza graduated from CalPoly at San Luis Obispo in 1979 with a degree in industrial technology. He spent two years working as an electrician before returning to CalPoly to get his teaching credentials. He spent three years in Monterey, teaching Special Education at the elementary level.

"I enjoy El Cap," he said. "The students have been helpful to each other and myself, helping me out."

Plummeting through nothingness at breakneck speeds is something John Rich enjoys as well as backpacking and "telescoping."

Earning his teaching credentials at San Diego State University, he student taught for Pat Price for the first semester of the '86-'87 school year and occasionally substituted during the second semester.

"It's great to work here!" he exclaimed. "The school, I feel, is the best in the district. I've substituted all over the district and the students here are the greatest. My colleagues are great and Mr. Avant is the best."

An almost perpetually smiling face seen all over campus is Stu Shaffer's. As the advisor of A.S.B. and a sophomore English teacher, he is well respected by his colleagues and students.

He graduated from California Western University in 1966, receiving his credentials in 1967. He attended the University of Oregon for one year and worked in a sixth grade camp for four years. He also spent thirteen years at Parkway Junior High School, eight as Activities Director. He received his Master's Degree in 1985.

"I obviously enjoy El Cap. The students here are a nice bunch of people," he beamed.

Born and bred in San Diego, Susan Vandervort can be called a true native.

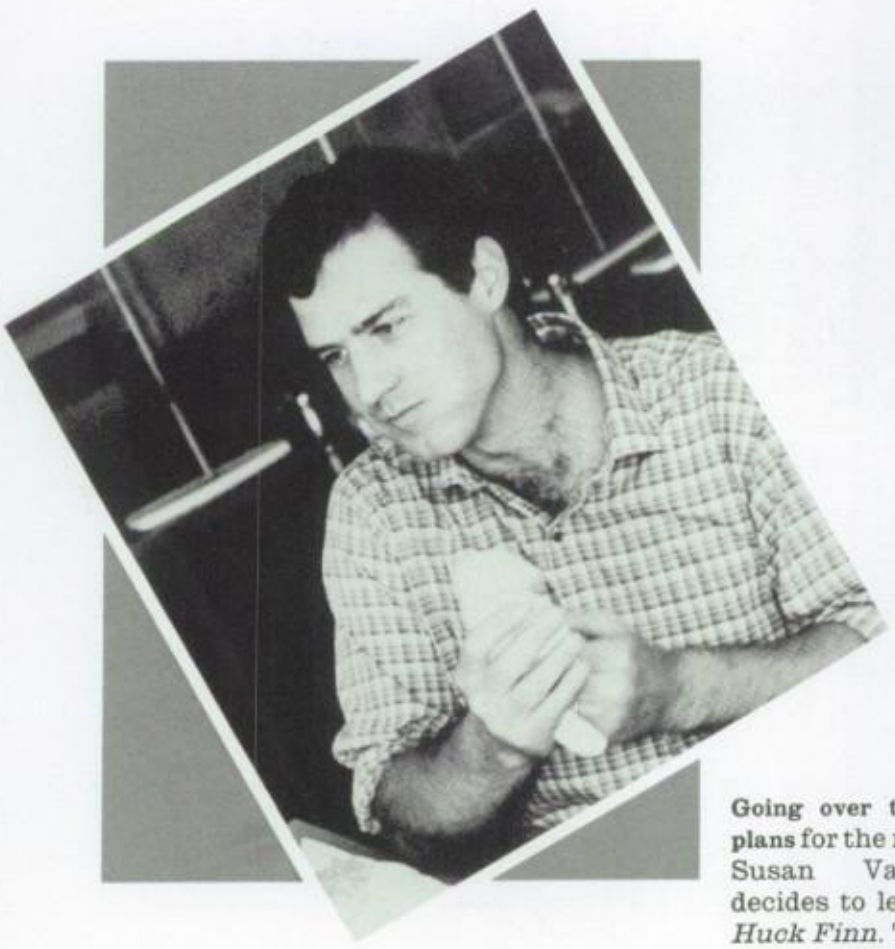
Graduating Patrick Henry High in 1982, she attended the University of California at Berkeley where she received her degree in English in 1986. She then attended Stanford University, student taught at Palo Alto High School, and graduated in 1987 with her teaching credentials and a Master's Degree in Education.

"Despite my last name, I am Italian! I want to make that clear," she began. "I've found the students here are motivated and willing to learn. That makes them fun to teach."

The year began interestingly for Lance Yocom. Called by the administration, he took over for Benfonte the first week of school and has continued since then.

He graduated Point Loma College with a B.A. in Political History Science. He then received his teaching credentials in Social Studies in 1985.

"I would like to stay at El Cap, but, with the new principal, I don't know," he shrugged. "If they like me, I'll probably be back."



Going over the lesson plans for the next day, Susan Vandervort decides to lecture on Huck Finn. To take a break between classes, Karen Ashley jots some notes down for the next class.

DOING IT WITH HUMOR

Humor is a great human trait. It can be used to raise someone's spirits, or, in the case of school, break the tension in a classroom. Teachers all over the school use it to some degree but there are those who make it a daily habit.

Rick White's almost squeaky laugh and somewhat bellowing voice can be heard from as far as the Senior Hall. With a ready laugh and quip, he keeps his students chuckling.

"I feel he's the greatest teacher for humor," stated lab assistant Shawn Potter. "There never seems to be a day when he doesn't have a joke or comeback."

Ready with a joke and star of the Science Department, Jim Peabody enjoys disrupting other Science classes with a couple of jokes.

"Jokes are nice," he started. "I use the humor as a defensive mechanism to force the listener to listen to a lecture. I mean, the average listening span of a student is 18 seconds. It's like 'Listen, listen, listen. Wonder what Mom made for lunch? Listen, listen, listen.'" At this point, he couldn't stand it any longer and told a joke. An aide walked in and participated in it.

"Knock knock!"
"Who's there?"
"Knock knock."
Laughter.

"It's hard to say what event this year was the funniest thing to happen. I suppose it would be my bone lecture. I've been teaching it for eighteen years and it still works."

"If I'm having a good time, I can teach better," he added.

"He's a creative soul with a wild imagination," stated Michelle Houseman. "I haven't had him but he's a great guy to work with."

Every day in Lipetzky's room is a day to remember. Humor is the key ingredient in his class.

"You have to have it," he began. "I basically live in this room so I want it to be interesting for the kids as well as for myself. It may look and be funny, but it gets them going." He added that he is, underneath all of the teacher stuff, a fifteen year old. "When you teach younger people, you are forced to stay young."

The funniest and most memorable moment to happen to him was when he was doing a graphic portrayal of the differences between a round world and a flat world using a grapefruit. "I had just finished squashing that thing when I began to throw the peels at a kid in the back of the room who had fallen asleep. I think I hit him in the face."

Many people also believed Bill "Mr. Bill" Cleeves was another humorist.

"I don't think of myself as funny. That honor belongs to Peabody. I try to keep it light," he said. "I like to use humor when I'm teaching. I don't want to take myself seriously. We also had nothing funny happen in our class. Come on! This is Science and we're supposed to be serious."

On toga day, Ms. McClain, Ms. Potts, and Ms. Romaine trudge, chained together dragging Ms. Douglas and Ms. Benjamin about ten feet behind.

Always ready with a smile, Ms. Benjamin readily appreciates her student's humor.

Counselors Help Students Throughout Year

One of the most helpful groups of people are the counselors. Each of the three counselors, Ms. Piccini, Ms. Nowak and Mr. Brown are assigned approximately 600 to 650 students and they are responsible for proper programming and keeping track of the classes to ensure each student has sufficient credits in the proper areas to graduate. They enroll new students into school and change schedules for others. They make parent contact to help parents work with their student that may be experiencing problems with their studies.

All three counselors introduced their section of the alphabet of seniors at the Senior Awards in June. Each prides themselves in remembering the schools their counselees were accepted by, the scholarships and awards they earned and clearly view them as individuals rather than a number.

When everyone was enjoying the beach in August, the counselors were busily programming students for September's opening. From then till graduation, they were available to help students with problems and frustrations about school or personal issues.

Showing a parent the different scholarships and colleges, Ms. Nowak helps her to decide which one is best for her student.

Known only as "The Aquamarines", they captured attention and laughs at Homecoming.

Programming the A to G portion of the alphabet is Mr. Brown's area. He often checks with teachers to see how well his students are doing and what he can offer help with.

By finishing her business skills homework in spare moments at school, Traci Welch has less to do when she gets home.

STUDYING MAKES THE GRADE

Good study habits are important to have throughout school if you want to have good grades. Some students wonder why they do so badly on tests. It may be their approach to studying (or the lack thereof).

The difference between failing and doing well on work and tests is the way you study. Some students are fortunate and don't need to study as much as others in order to earn good grades. But most people need to study and have good study habits to do well on their work.

Senior Tracy Welch says the way she does her work is ". . . I go to my room, close the door, and try to concentrate." Good study habits require a specific place and time along with the discipline to concentrate. Grades would have to improve if such a procedure were followed daily.

Others, however, choose to just get by or copy homework just before class or cheat on their tests. Senior Karen Lies brings up a good point when she says, "I don't cheat on homework because when finals come around and if I cheated on a lot of my homework, I'd have a hard time on tests and an even harder time on finals. It would probably result in a failing grade."

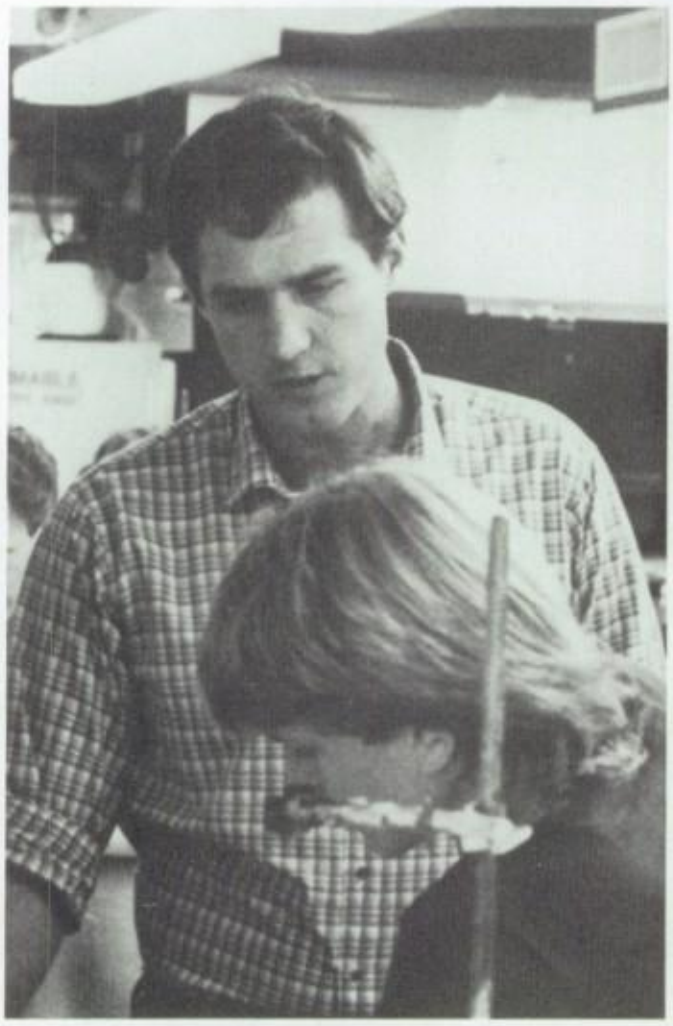
Not only do you not do well on tests but you don't learn the material. One student said they figured they wouldn't cheat because once they are in the work force, there won't be anyone to cheat from there. Work is a do-it-yourself project so doing the work of school seems like good practice.

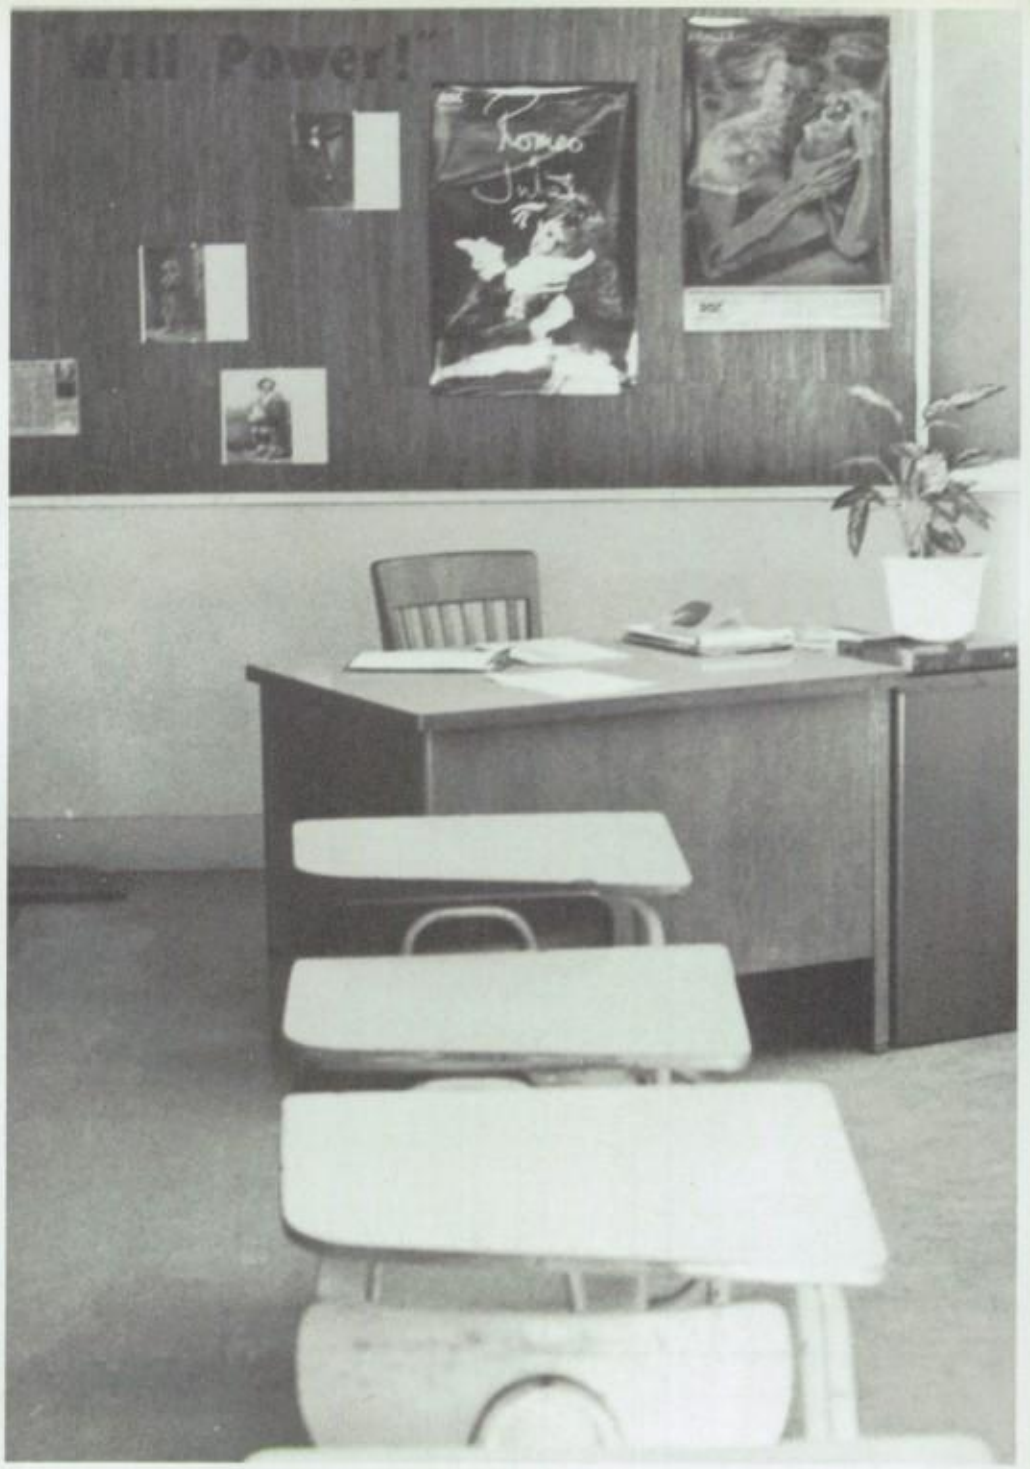
Sometimes it's just necessary to take a break from studying so energies can be restored.

Study groups also assist in learning as Ms. Douglas explains what goods, products, and services society produces.

Stressing "will power", Susan Vandervort's room shows the importance of Shakespeare through poster.

Cluttered, but full of energy, John Rich's chemistry room comes alive as students prepare for the final lab.





Forming a backdrop for an I-Club meeting, Sandy Graham's movie and nature poster collection show a wide variety in his viewing habits.

DECORATIONS, POSTERS, BANNERS, PROPS ARE

Stimulating Interest In Studies

When people come to a high school for the first or second time, they expect the rooms to be the standard drab gray-green color many districts are so fond of. In the cases of Lipetzky, Graham, Hedberg, and Coulsby, they differ from that normality.

At first glance, Jan Coulsby's room seems like any other: a few pictures tacked here and there. It's not until you go into his "castle" that you wonder if you've stepped back in time. Elaborate banners and shields hang from the ceiling and the walls are painted a deep blue.

A spent missile casing hangs from the corner of Sandy Graham's classroom. In another corner, a set of stocks (standing version, head and hands model) sit forlornly, waiting to be used. Steel bookshelves in another corner sag from the weight of hundreds of books and an old pay phone hangs on an opposite wall.

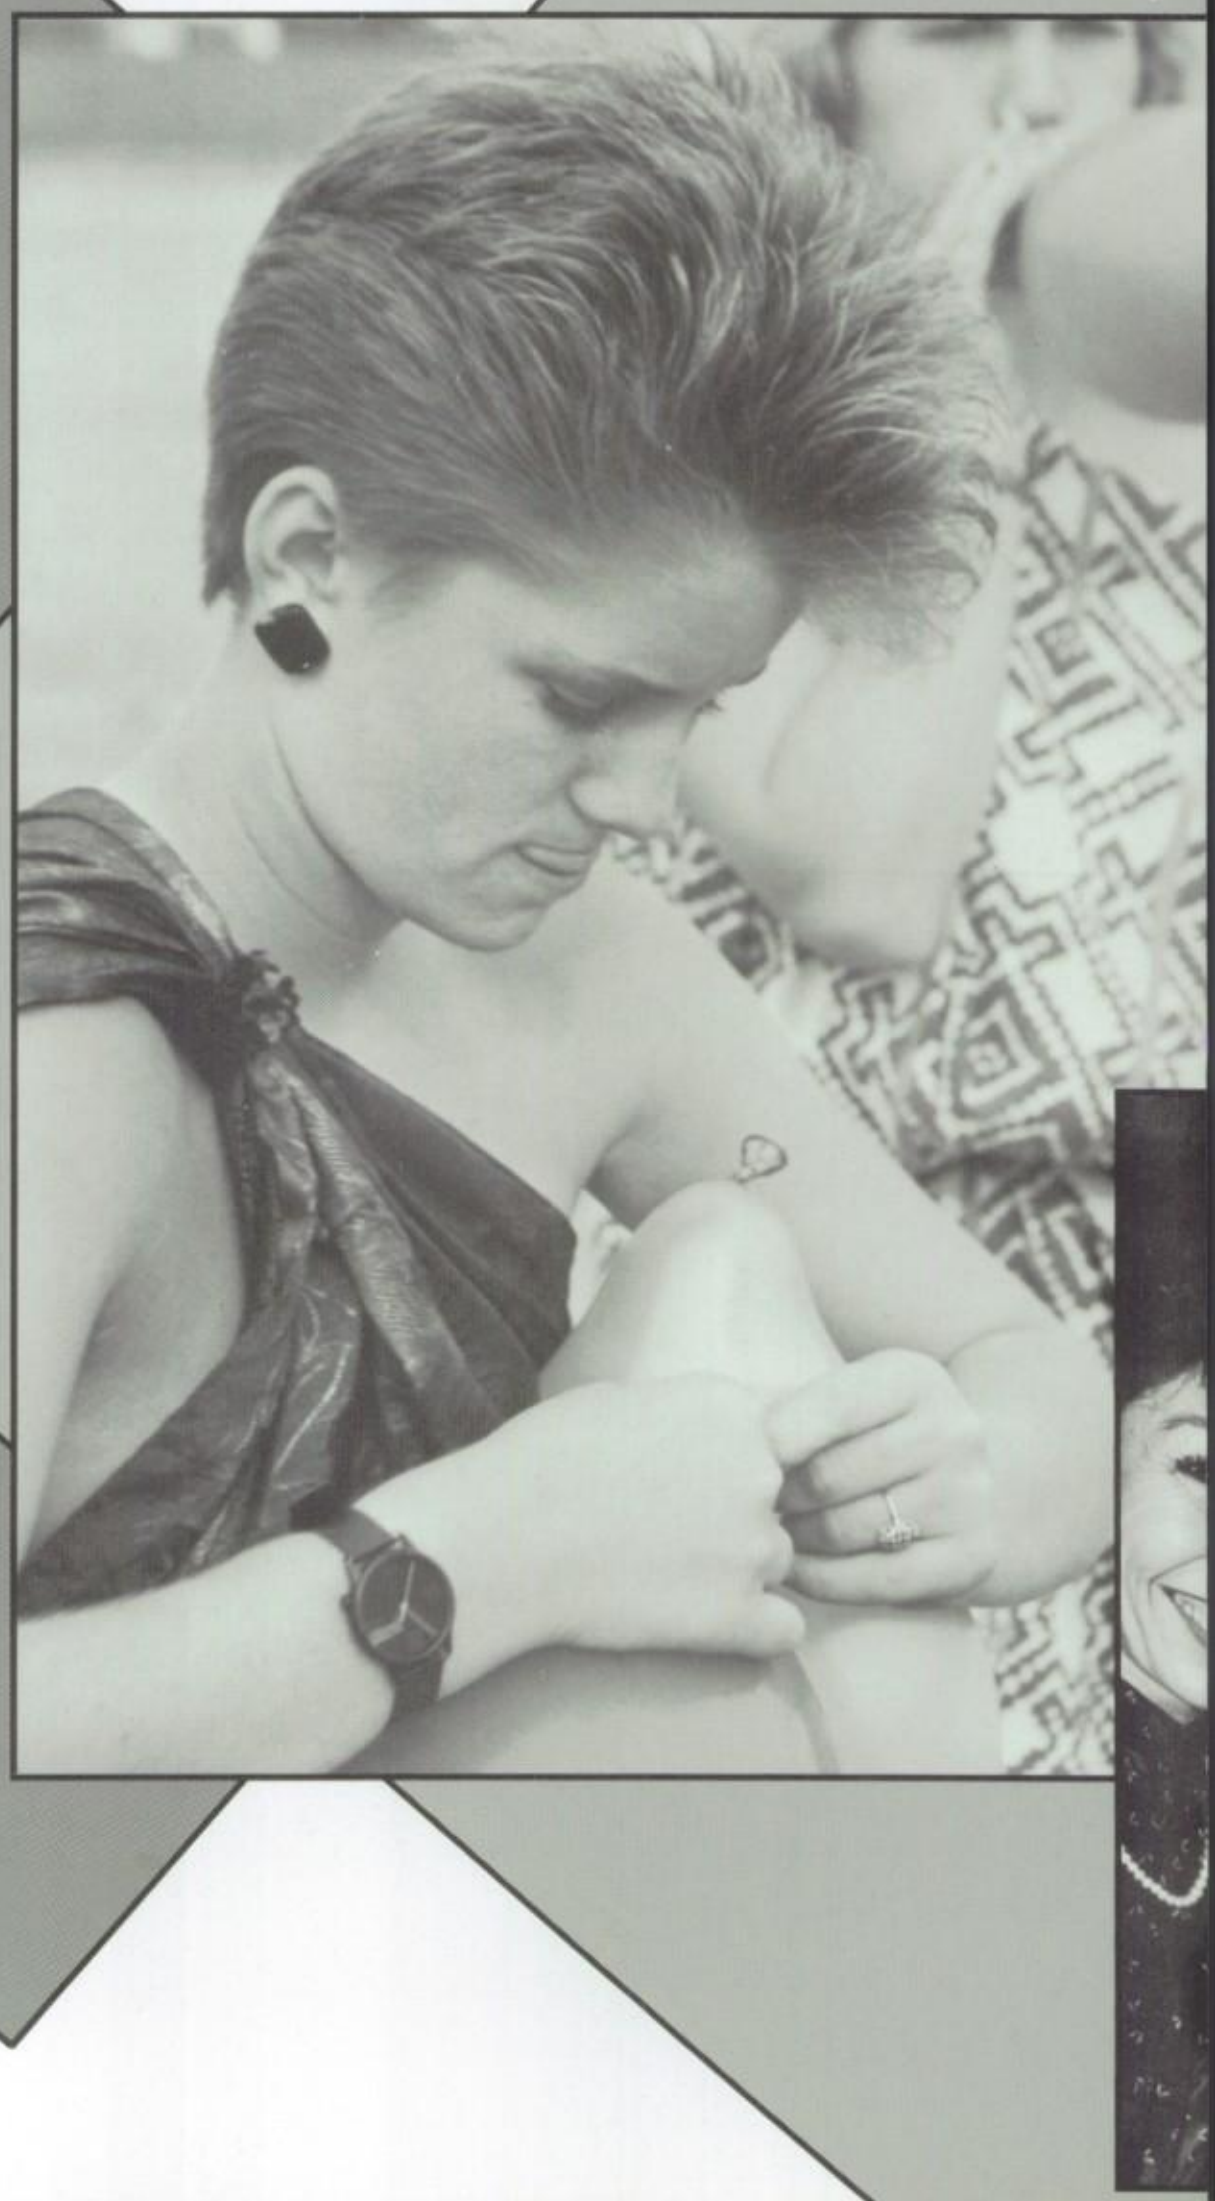
"It's what I call your standard litter," he said. "It's just bits and pieces of this and that I've collected over the years. Pointing to the stocks, a student made that for me."

For Jerome Lipetzky's room, words like "unique" or "different" just doesn't describe the hundreds of pictures that cover every square inch of his walls. Ranging from the ridiculous to the sublime, they seem to cover almost every talkable subject.

"My classroom now is almost like an archaeological dig to find different materials," he said. "The room reflects student work," he motioned to the many maps made by his former students. "A classroom should have these things to show others that they can do a good project too."

Every day, crayfish snap their claws at passing fish in a large tank in Paul Hedberg's room. "Nothing unusual," you might say until you look around the remainder of the room. Pictures ranging from a portrait of Nobel to posters of surfing cover the walls. A bobcat pelt hangs, curing and drying. Hanging over the desk is a shrunken head with a sign next to it stating, "This student didn't take biology seriously."

"I use the 'props' to stimulate curiosity, imagination, and interest in Biology," he said. "I want them to ask questions about what they see and I want them to enjoy being here."



Clubs and Organizations

Precision Performing Brings Honors

The Super Bowl hosted at Jack Murphy Stadium also had several drill team members in the half time show. It was an honor to be selected and it involved many rehearsal hours. Deanne Bender said, "It was fun, hard work and quite a learning experience."

During the parade season the team took a first place at Santee and Brawley and the coveted Sweepstakes at Oceanside. In spring competition, they placed second in Tall Flags, fourth in Rifles, and sixth in Tall Flags Solo at the Clairemont Festival and third in both Rifles and Tall Flags Solo at the Valencia Festival.

Under the direction of Drill Team Advisor Ms. Sue Sutton, "Gotta Dance '88" was both joyful and sad. It was the last major performance for the seniors and memories of the year were touching moments. The seniors performed "The Way You Make Me Feel" and Deanne Bender soloed with "Training Montage." Other special numbers included a dance solo by Brenda Thomas, "Olympic Fanfare" by Tall Flags and a novelty number on "Shopping From A to Z."

25 YEARS

AMNESTY
INTERNATIONAL
USA

Lunchtime meetings are filled with discussion and activity and Jason Barbeau (with mistletoe as his earring) is happy their efforts contribute to releasing political prisoners and saving lives.

With the help of Mr. Shaffer and his microphone, club day offers Joel Comford an opportunity to promote AI to the lunchtime crowd.

Since letters are the key tool, Lena Schnell talks with Ari Soloman to exchange ideas before drafting their messages.

Amnesty International

Struggling for Human Rights

"When the first two hundred letters came, the guards gave me back my clothes. Then the next two hundred letters came, and the prison director came to see me. When the next pile of letters arrived, the director got in touch with his superior. The letters kept coming and coming: three thousand of them. The president was informed. The letters still kept arriving, and the president called the prison and told them to let me go."

A released prisoner of conscience from the Dominican Republic

Although not all of Amnesty International's (AI) results are quite so dramatic, this letter is an example of the tremendous impact AI can have.

Amnesty International is a worldwide human rights organization that struggles to help prisoners of conscience (anyone who has been imprisoned for their color, sex, ethnic origin, language, religious beliefs, or political beliefs). Amnesty's other goals include "fair and prompt trials for all political prisoners and an end to torture and executions in all cases."

Thousands of people have been imprisoned because of their beliefs. Many of them are held for years without a trial or charges ever being brought against them. Some of these people are tortured and even executed. In many cases the governments of countries will not even acknowledge the fact that they have incarcerated a prisoner. These people are listed as the "disappeared." One prisoner wrote, "For years I was held in a tiny cell. My only human contact was with my torturers . . . My only company were the cockroaches and mice . . . On Christmas Eve the door to my cell was opened and the guard tossed in a crumpled piece of paper. It said, 'Take heart. The world knows you're alive. We're with you. Regards, Monica, Amnesty International.' That letter saved my life."

Before AI accepts a prisoner for adoption they must have substantial facts that the prisoner has not been an advocator of violence. Gathering this information is a process of collecting and analyzing facts from newspapers and journals, government bulletins, broadcast transcripts, lawyer and humanitarian organizations, hearsay, along with the interviews of the prisoner and his family.

Although Amnesty aids in the release of their adopted prisoners, they are aware that they cannot take full credit. "We don't always know why a prisoner is released. There could be many contributing factors," explained San Diego Amnesty member Deborah Byron.

El Capitan is one of the few high schools in San Diego to have a Student Action chapter of Amnesty International. This chapter began much by chance when Joel Comford went to a San Diego AI meeting to research a term paper. He had heard of Amnesty as a result of the publicity given to it by music groups such as U2, Simple Minds, R.E.M. and the Alarm. After attending this meeting he got fervently involved. With the help of San Diego AI member Deborah Byron, and friend and El Cap alumnus Lorraine Demi, he began sending letters and gathering information on what it takes to start an on-campus organization.

The first step was finding an advisor. Within the first few attempts, he met creative writing teacher, Rachel McCurry. Ms. McCurry had been in the Peace Corps, and is involved in the support and advocation of human rights. She greeted the idea of becoming an advisor enthusiastically. Ms. McCurry then introduced Joel to other students that might be interested in AI.

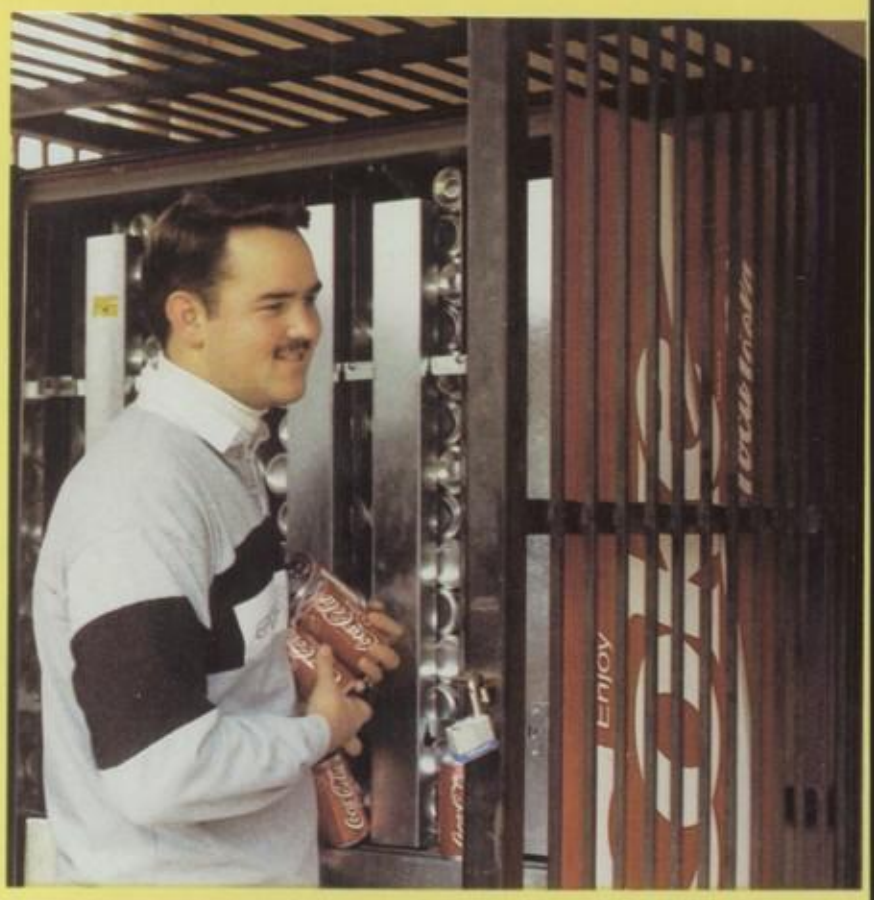
"From there it seemed as if everything started taking care of itself. It really began to just fall into place," commented Joel Comford.

El Capitan's Amnesty International governing board now consists of coordinators Jody Clifton, Joel Comford, Christine Piontek, Ari Salamon, and chief coordinator Jason Barbeau.

"I feel that Amnesty International is a club that anyone can get involved with and really make a difference in the world. It's a club that actually saves lives," proclaimed Jason Barbeau.

At an early meeting Christine Piontek explains that club members need to sign the sheet she is holding to state they agree with the purpose of AI.

Meetings spark discussion and interest as Joel Comford watches junior Michelle Blanchard sign the AI agreement.



Taking over A.S.B. responsibilities at the same time as a new teaching assignment kept Mr. Shaffer busy learning the campus, students, and schedule.

A Year Of Transition

"A.S.B. had a terrific year under the direction of President Craig Scantlin and Vice President Joy Principe," enthusiastically stated Advisor Stu Shaffer. "It was also a year of transition as I took over as A.S.B. advisor from Mr. Plough."

The organization began its year by assisting in registering all students for the '87-'88 school year. Their next major project was the Friday spirit events followed by a Blast From The Past, the homecoming. Although the football team lost, the A.S.B. won with its fireworks display and after-game dance.

According to most attendees, the airband competition was a smash, Groups such as the Blues Brothers, The Cure, and AC/DC helped to set the mood while a professional D.J. and music videos helped to keep the excitement alive.

Major purchases for the year included a new sound system and three stone picnic tables for the quad.

Pen brush in hand, Thom Lane fills in a letter on a banner for the next day's football game.

Wind, whipping the banner away is stopped when Becky Herzig places ink canisters at the corners to stop it.

The Making Of A Yearbook

"This is control. Your mission is to join Publications and publish a stunning yearbook. Should you decide to accept this mission, you are to report to room 701. This message will not self-destruct."

And so began the year for the Publications class. Upon arrival on day one, special rulers were handed out and the staff began to watch video presentations on yearbook presentation and design.

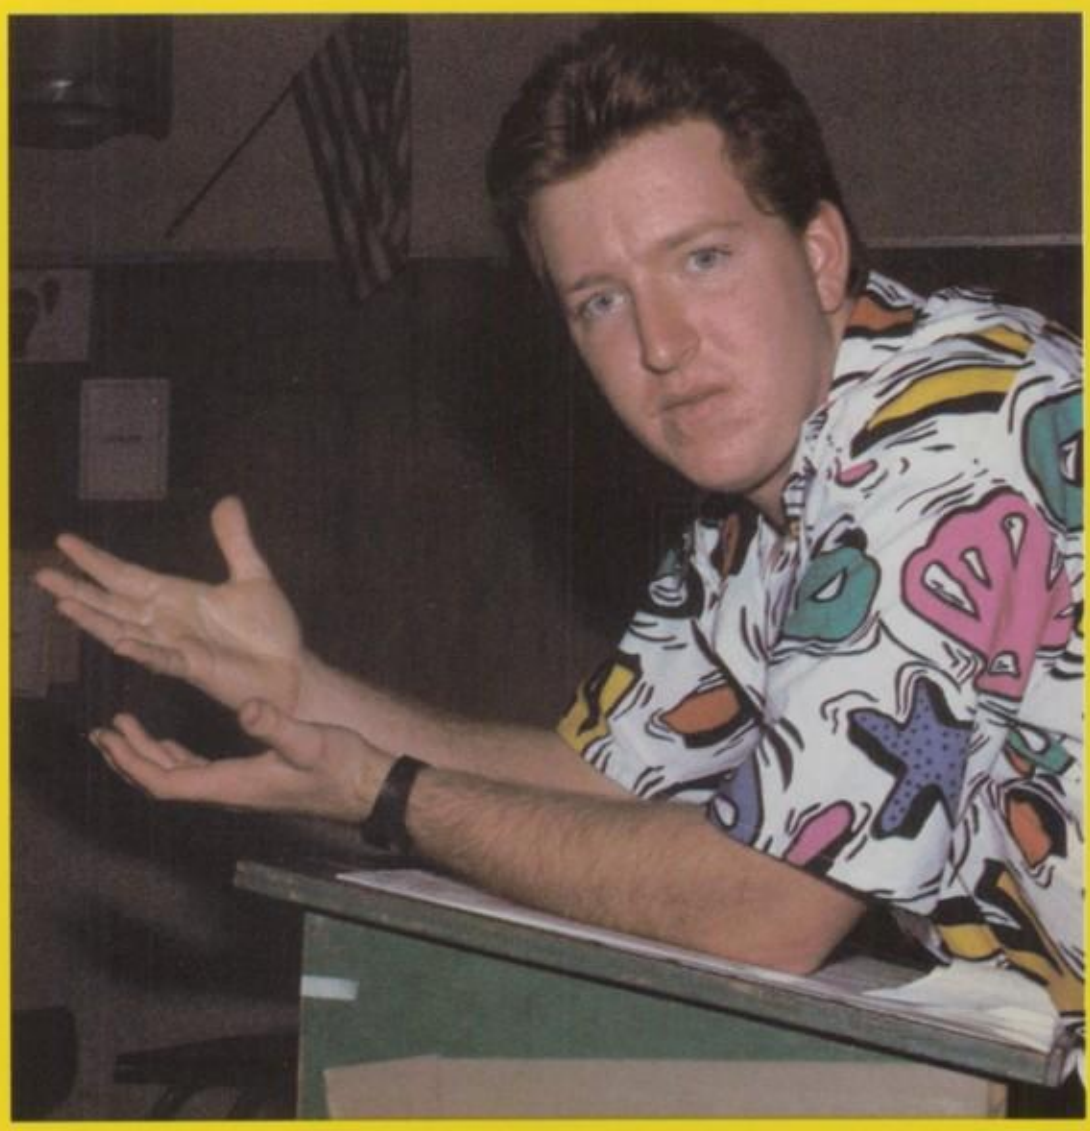
"The next two weeks were used for deciding the theme, the cover of the book, and story ideas," said Greta Decker. "Since then, we've been working steadily on it."

The theme of the book was based on the ten traits that were put out by the district.

Preliminary yearbook work began during the summer when Kelly Cruse began to schedule the pictures and set the book up with advisor Sandy Schuster.

Copy (story) writing became an important part of the book. If someone was a sports writer, he or she would attend games and meetings to get a feel of the story before writing.

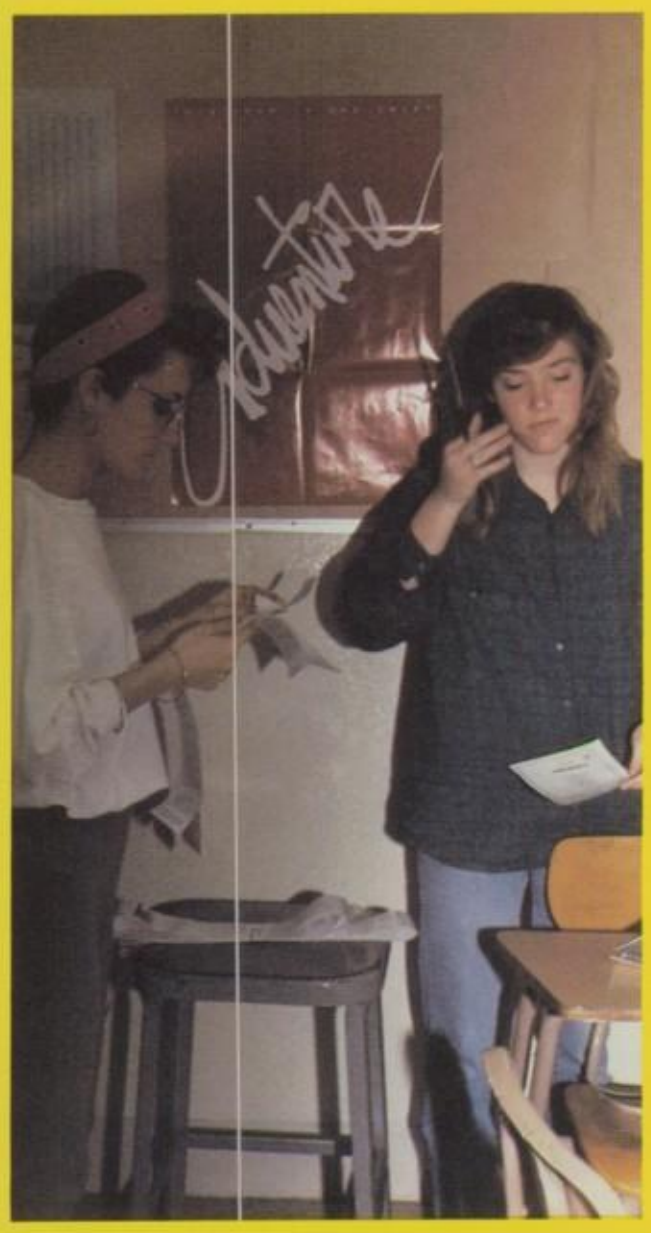
"Last year, we had a strong copy book. This year, it will be stronger and we're concentrating on graphics to give our words and pictures a more attractive look. So far, it's looking great!" exclaimed Schuster.



Corrections are easier to make on the CAI lab word processors. Rob Millikan puts the finishing touch on his sports story.

News Editor Morris Parrish assists in assigning stories for the next issue of the paper.

Carefully, Editor Cherie Piatkiewicz reviews the galleys before laying out the issue.



Cooperation Makes The Finished Product Better

One week a month, light tables in the Journalism classroom flicker on and two heads bow down over a lined sheet of heavy paper. Co-editors-in-chief Jennifer Demi and Cherie Piatkiewicz examine the paste-up sheets of the newspaper pages once more before sending them to the printer.

"This year has been better than the previous year when it comes to the finished product," stated Jennifer. "But before it is finished, I get frustrated with the apathy of some and the lack of stories that come in."

"I think that having two top editors has helped immensely," said Cherie. "Having two people has saved time working on revisions and rough drafts of stories. Also, having another partner helps as well because you have someone to share the frustrations and pain." New mastheads and a new printer has helped them as well.

"I would like to see more dedication and appreciation from some members of the staff and student body," said Jennifer. "Both Cherie and myself have worked hard last and this year to get this paper together and out." Cherie nodded in agreement.

"I've seen several work hard and turn in all of their stories, while I've definitely seen others who don't. But, with more new people, we have better story topics to work with and more help in getting the paper done."

Both do agree, however, that the hard work and dedication together has paid off in one of the best first issues ever.

"It helps to have a good beginning," stated Jennifer. "It also makes it much more encouraging to get it out to the people when you have support and help."

Staying late to lay-out the paper, Cherie and Jennifer make decisions on where to place the ads.

MASTERS OF SPIRIT

"And the winners of the Master Key of Spirit is El Capitan!" Some 200 cheerleaders heard the news on the last day of cheer camp.

For four days the cheer squad stayed in the dorms at UCSD as they attended a UCA cheerleading camp.

Four advisors taught all the cheers and chants and they also judged them. The girls won the Master Key to Spirit, an honor awarded to the squad with the most spirit. They also won several superior ribbons, which were given for the best performance for each cheer. On the last day they won the Spirit Stick as well which the judges give one a day for doing well.

Extra time was put into making up cheers and dances for competitions. The squad had practiced continuously throughout the year. During the summer the girls practiced once a day for two hours and then towards the end of summer it became twice a day for two hours a piece. They only went to one competition this year and didn't place as well as they expected due to an injury to Cherie Isen.

Many of the girls liked the fall season the best but the winter season was the busiest. They cheered at up to five different activities a week. Though everyone rotated around a schedule, most of them ended up cheering a lot during the week.

Due to a change in the Cheerleading Constitution, the squad is now allowed to try-out for spring sports. Denice S. made Varsity Softball and Angie K. made gymnastics

Though it calls for hectic days and a busy year, none of them regretted trying out and making the '87-'88 Varsity Cheerleading Squad.

During the girls' game against El Cajon, Shannon and Lori cheer the team to a victory.

To get the crowd into the winning spirit, the Varsity and J.V. cheer squads paraded around the football field doing cheers and chants during the '88 Homecoming festivities.

Just as the pyramid builds skyward, the crowd pleasing "Let's Go Vaqueros" also builds crowd involvement.

J.V. Cheer Wins Awards at Camp

Practice for the J.V. Cheer sqaud began last April after results were known of the new squad members. They created cheers and chants to encourage the J.V. teams to do their best. In the summer, it meant being in school Monday through Thursday from 7 to 9 a.m. with a brief break in August to attend cheer camp.

The spring and summer practices were evident in the awards they won. The coveted award was the "Spirit Stick". They also won a variety of first and second place ribbons for different daily competitions performed in the camp. Camp was fun in addition to being a good learning experience.

Encouraged by what they learned at camp, the squad returned to give their first performance at "Viva El Cap". Advisor, Sheree Lillard complimented the squad, "The girls really dedicated themselves to cheer. They worked well together and were a pleasure to work with."

The squad had equally positive words for the support the advisor offered them throughout the year. Ms. Lillard was a positive and encouraging force both on the cheering field or their personal needs. Ms. Lillard was there.

When the squad wants to get the crowd going, they perform the shoulder carry.

Happy accomplishing a difficult cheer, Kris and Ami go for a high five.

At the end of every football game, the cheerleaders would join together and sing the Alma Mater.

Being The Best We Can Be

"To be the best we can be" is the motto of the Marching and Symphonic band. Under the direction of James J. Romeo and the leadership of many dedicated band members, the 1987-88 season was the best yet. Besides playing for all the Football games, the Band participated in many parades and Marching Band competition field shows throughout Southern California. The band excelled, receiving a sweepstakes trophy at the Brawly Cattle Call Parade.

The Holiday concert at East County Performing Arts Center brought the crowd to its feet as the Marching Band and the combined symphonic-concert band played music from its past Marching Band season and Holiday selections.

The year was full of other special events including the joining of forces with Tierra Del Sol and Lakeside Middle Schools at a combined half time show during the football season and a combined festival concert in March.

The bands Spring Tour included a trip to Santa Barbara for a three day festival and side trip to Magic Mountain. Other highlights included the alumni band at the Homecoming Football game and a performance at Disneyland.

Even more special was the bands performance for the Denver Broncos Football Team during Super Bowl XXII held in San Diego.

Mr. Romeo proclaimed, "El Capitan's Pride!" All could derive satisfaction from knowing they had done their best.

Intent upon excelling, Jim Graham practices until the sound is perfect.

Classtime offers Kristine Humphrey an opportunity to practice.

Conducting the band, Mr. Romeo attempts to bring out the best in each of his musicians.

At the ECPAC show, David Owen, Geoff Giblin, Rob DeYoe, Arron Martin and Marianne Cox play "The March of the Toy Soldiers".

Duh!

Academic Decathlon: Victorious in Mind and Heart

A battle of the minds, The Academic Decathlon, became a symbol to schools throughout San Diego County that El Capitan is no longer to be considered "cow pie high" in academics.

The decathlon team consisted of 9 exceptional students chosen from Jan Coulsby's second period class, designed to allow team members to research and prepare for the competition, which was held November 14th at Palomar Junior College.

Team members were ranked second overall in the Grossmont District and eighth in the county. The team was honored with a large trophy for ranking second in the district and two smaller trophies for high scores in language and essay. Individual honors were received by Donald Petersen from the county in Language and Fine Arts, for excellent scores in these areas. Ann Massey's exceptionally high score of 950 out of 1000 points on the essay was the highest in the district. The remaining team consisted of Becky Herzig, Jason Barbeau, Jason Sherr, Stacy Byers, Shannon Turner, Apollo Kollias, and Jody Clifton.

Nine areas of study were covered in the competition: fine arts, language, math, science, social science, economics, essay, interview, and speech. In preparing for each area, students broke into small groups and utilized class time for research and discussion. "Working in cooperative learning groups for fine arts, French philosophies, the sciences, and math made it (the team's effort) a success," stated Coulsby.

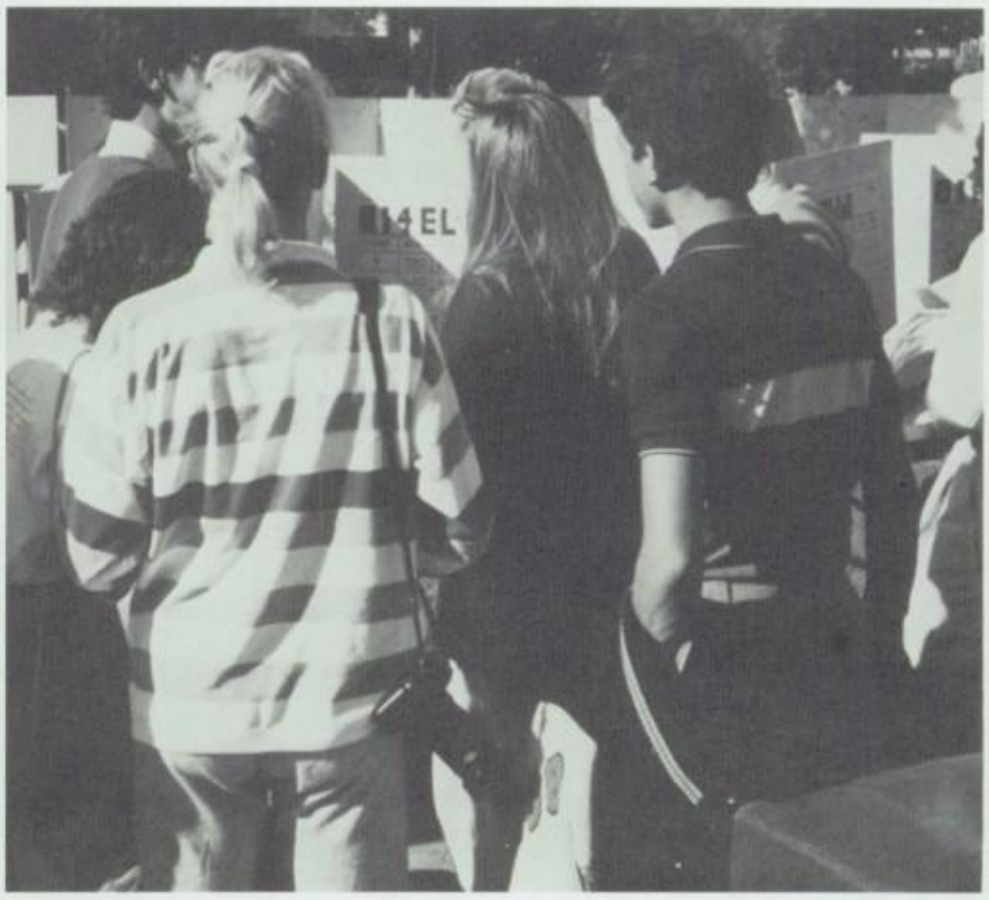
Study time outside of class was also needed to prepare for competition. To promote team spirit and complete research, team members spent the weekend before the contest at a condominium in Carlsbad, compliments of the Kahananui family. In a steamy jacuzzi, they discussed elements of the fine arts. "That was a neat weekend," said Coulsby.

Coordinators of the San Diego Humanities Project scheduled scholars to lecture to students representing decathlon teams from all over the county. Neil Heyman of San Diego University discussed the Napoleonic age. D. Laundret, a fellow of Cornell, lectured on Wuthering Heights and romantic poetry and joined our school's team in Carlsbad to instruct and answer questions. Margaret Maple, a representative from The San Diego Museum of Art, talked on romantic and neoclassical art.

The team adopted the motto "Nulla Victoria Sine Animus," meaning in Latin, "No Victory Without Heart," which is what the team is all about. "This team is a celebration of accomplishment," commented Mr. Coulsby.

Black and white photography fails to give the full impact of Donald Peterson's competition outfit. The jacket is blue and black, the shirt red and white, the tie purple and gold, the pants white, green, yellow and red.

Following rounds of competition, the team checks the boards to find out scores and compare them to the other teams.



At the information table, Becky Herzig and Jason Barbeau hug and consume munchies to assist them in winning.

Beautiful weather prevailed as Jan Coulsby and stopped and reviewed the competition results.

Fishing for answers, Captain Bill Bob Freeman reels in a winning day for his team.

NEW CHOIR DIRECTOR ADDS CONTINUITY

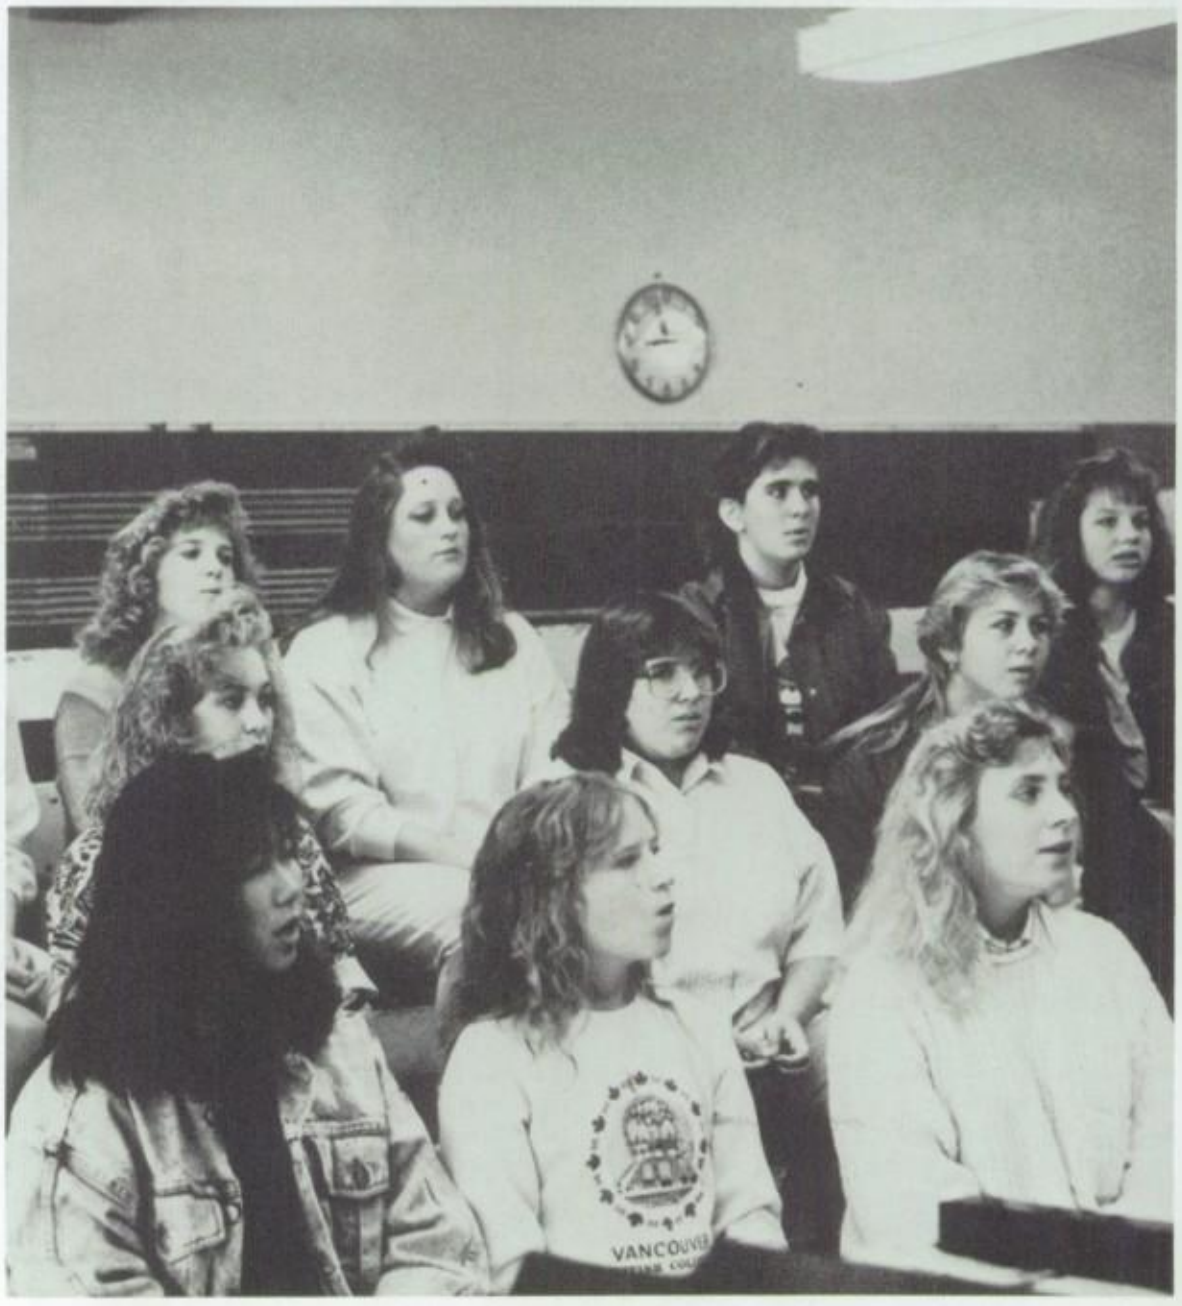
"Depending on the difficulty of the music and how well you read it, choir can be fun but stressful," said LaLanie Curo. Most choir members agreed new teacher Mr. Romeo is a great musician and teacher. In the last four years, the choir has had four different teachers making each year a different style. Mr. Romeo has added continuity and direction.

The main highlights that choir did this year were "The Christmas Concert" at the East County Performing Arts Center, the Spring Show and also the 1000 Voice Choir (made up of all choirs in the Grossmont District). To prepare for the concerts the choir members rehearsed their musical selections and got their robes and costumes ready.

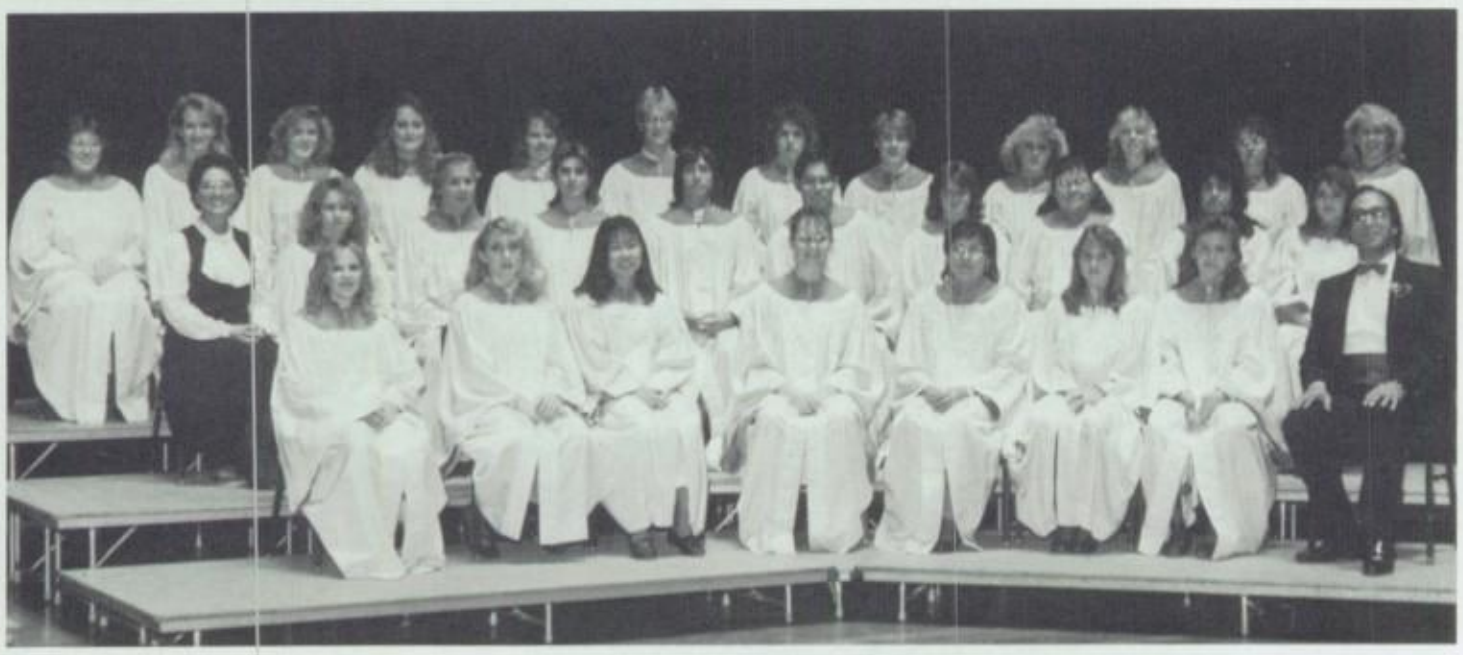
"We're always doing fundraisers, because money is always a problem. There is never enough for costumes," explained Mrs. Huff the piano player. We conduct candy bar sales, car washes, bake sales, and also coke booths.

At the El Cajon Performing Arts Center, Krista Nystrom and Leanne Godley sing the duet "Winter Wonderland."

As the choir pianist, Mrs. Huff is at all practices, dress rehearsals, and performances.



Initially the choir does all their practicing during the regular class period. Later they extend rehearsals when preparing for a competition or performance.



Choir members are vocalizing to warm up vocal cords before practicing.

CHOIR OFFICERS: Top row: LaLanie Curo - Treasurer; John Davis - Equipment; Chris Richards - Secretary; Ken Nadeau - Vice President. Bottom Row: Leanne Godley - Publicity; Cheryl Huntley; Dawn Schnure - President.

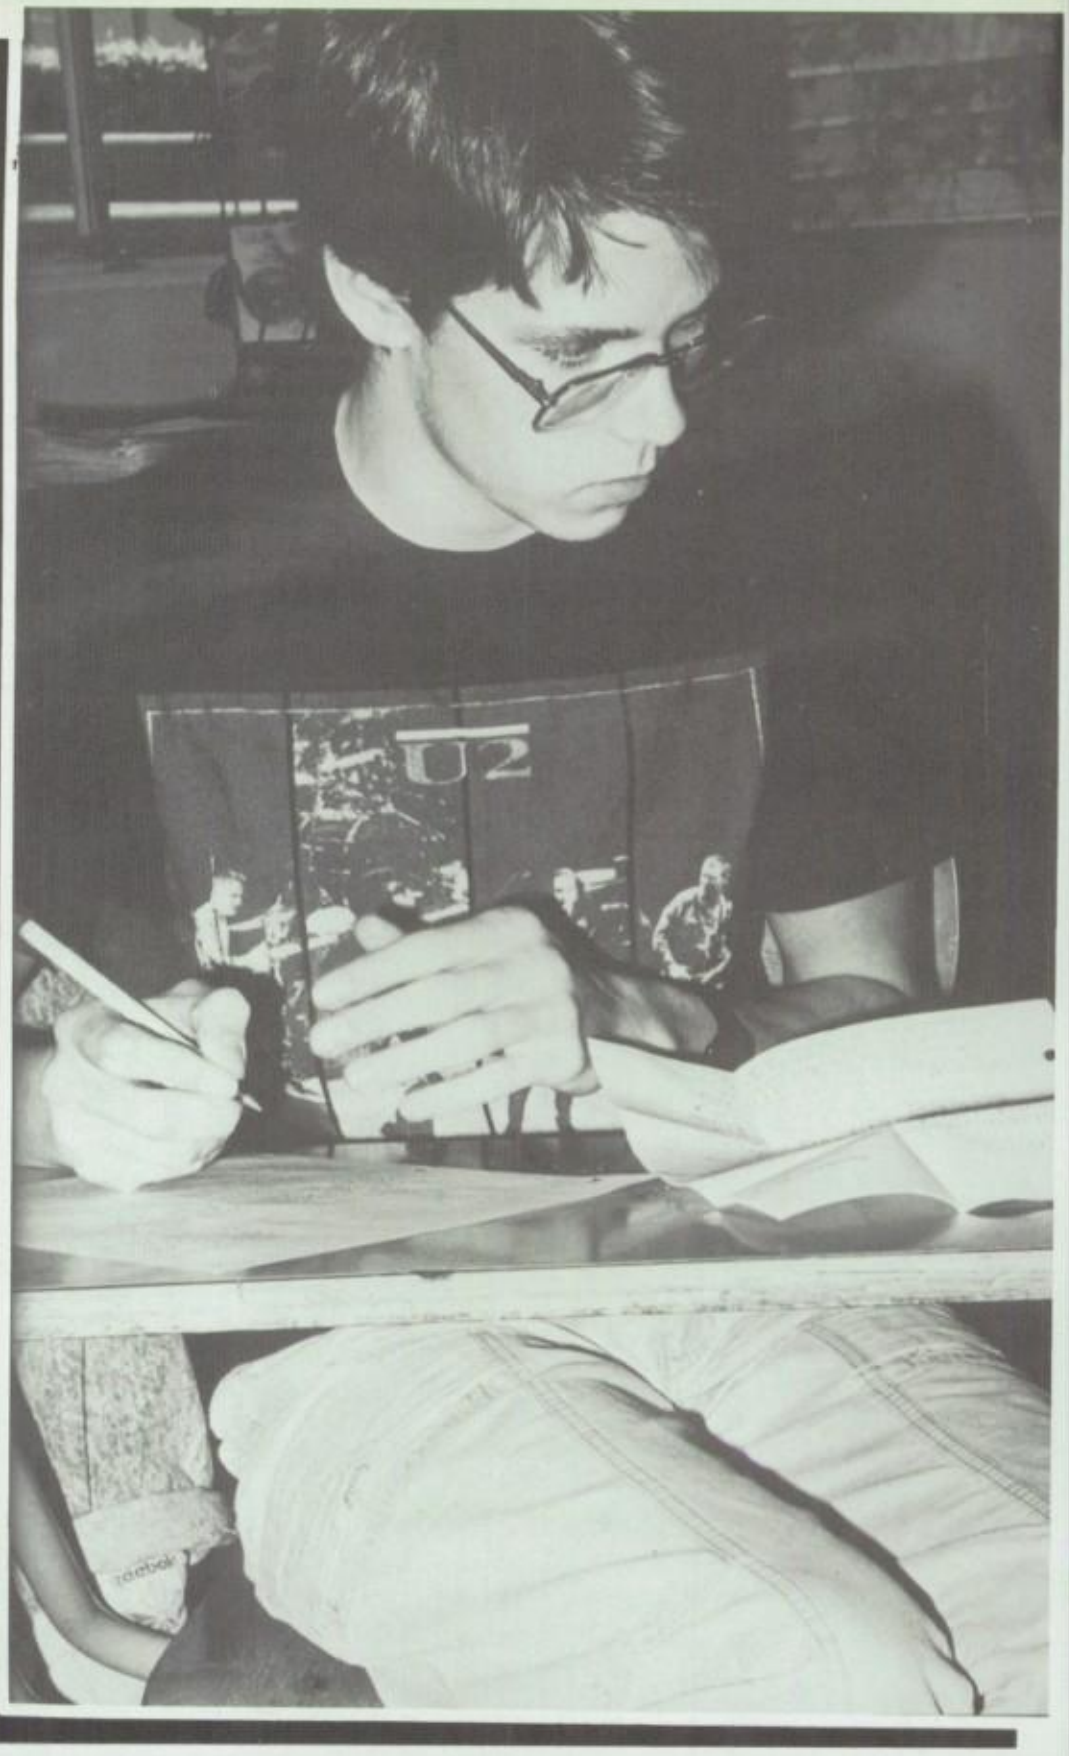
"ALLUSIONS" BECOMES PART OF CREATIVE WRITING CLASS

"I'm amazed at the guts and honesty with which students write . . . " stated Allusions Advisor Rachel McCurry.

Allusions, El Capitan's award-winning literary magazine, is now being produced by Ms. McCurry's 5th period College Prep Creative Writing class. The class is composed of over 20 general staff editors. The specialized editors selected by the staff are: Poetry Editor; Steve Perdue; Non-Fiction: Jennifer Demi; Fiction: Jason Barbeau; photography: Leslie Fruin; Art: Marc Leon, and creative consultant: Christine Piontek. After these editors go over the work submitted to their categories, Editor-In-Chief Alicia Heius is responsible for all final decisions.

By mid-February, there were over 300 submissions of writing and artwork, but work by students was still being accepted. During class, the staff uses editing and critiquing skills they have practiced to evaluate each piece. When all items had been analyzed, the specialized editors combined the opinions of the general editors to determine the acceptance or rejection of each piece. The finished Allusions magazine was sent to press by mid-March.



Selection of the best submissions requires careful critiquing so Danny Krause reviews this essay a second time.

Sometimes the read arounds take place outside and Non-fiction editor, Jennifer Demi talks to the group before beginning the review process.

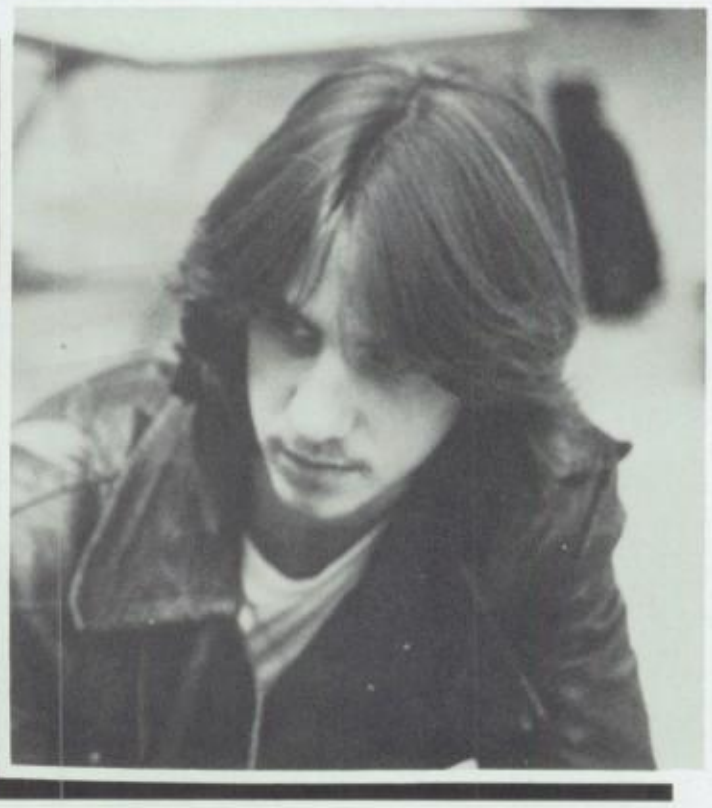
Lunchtime offers another opportunity to discuss submissions and style requirements for the magazine.

Joining a critiquing session on the lawn outside of the Allusions room, Michelle Houseman brings another poem.

Coordination between the various editors is essential so Poetry Editor Steve Perdue talks with the Art editor.

Even lunchtime is a busy time for advisor, Mrs. McCurry as she confers with editors regarding guidelines for "Allusions" submissions and editing procedures.

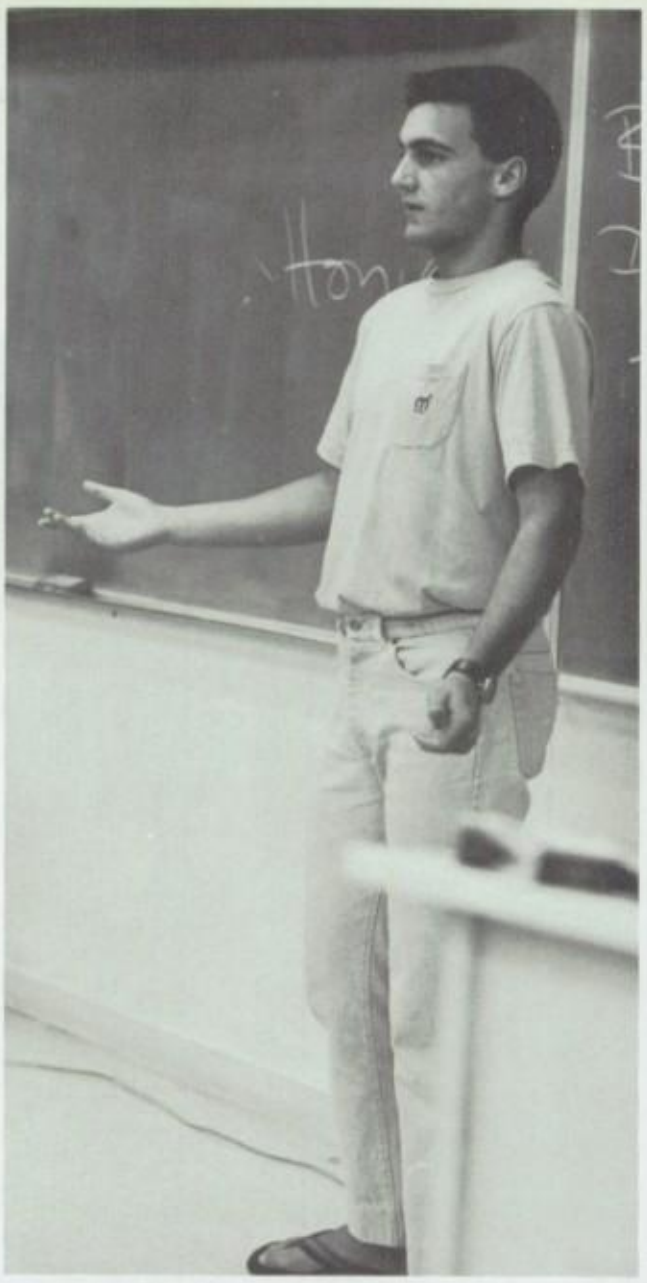


AN EXCHANGE OF IDEAS, CULTURES, and FRIENDSHIPS

In his poem, "The Love song of J. Alfred Prufrock," T.S. Eliot wrote:
"In the room the women come and go Talking of Michelangelo"

He was talking of the fashion of culture, far distant from culture itself. He's talking of the women, full of names without meaning. It's hard to experience culture apart from our own, to understand people and lifestyles so different from our own. For the most part, our lives are full of names without meaning. Lakeside, the home of the rodeo, is also home to people that have traveled from distant lands to come to our little town to learn about America.

They are guests in our country and through them, the names come to have meaning. It is far from the fashion, it is an actual exchange of ideas, cultures and friendships among people. It is an opportunity for understanding, so that Spain, Belgium, Finland, Japan, Columbia, or America - can come to be more than names, to us and to them.



Some Thoughts From an International Visitor

Well here I am trying to answer a question that people always asked me. So . . . What are you doing here? How come you decided to come to America? They wonder what can make a person like me, leave for a whole year all those things that make the "perfect secure" life: my homeland, my family, my friends, to come to a totally different culture so far from home. I was looking forward (and a little bit scared too) to learn about America and its people, to share or at least try to share their lifestyles. I also wanted to prove to myself that I could do things on my own. Being a foreign student is not always that fun. For the first time you have to face new situations in a strange country with a strange language that you don't understand. It seemed that you are lost among these really "weird people."

But it's worth it, so here I am at El Cap and having a great time. The best thing I can say about this year is that when the time will come to leave, it's going to be hard to say goodbye to so many friends and so many good memories. For sure, I'll always remember El Cap with a smile on my face.

Foreign Exchange Students:
Riikka Tuominen, Finland
Lourdes Plasencia, Spain
Amando Aguirre, Spain
Francisco Zorate, Columbia
Garlonne Linsingh, Belgium
Kimiko Ito, Japan
Osamu Hara, Japan

During a lunch time meeting, Amando Aguirre states that in Spain they just party in the street, they don't need houses like here in America.

Although strangers at the beginning of the year, Fransisco Zorate, Amando Aguirre, and Lourdes Plasencio have become the best of friends.

S.A.D.D. Promotes Responsible Actions

Lacking an advisor at the beginning of the year, S.A.D.D. (Students Against Driving Drunk) received a late start, but have already accomplished "a great deal."

Mr. Gilmore accepted the position of advisor and immediately appointed the following officers: President: Paula Hildebrand; Vice President: Lori Wendt; Secretary/treasurer: Kristine Gyldenege; and Publicity: Amy Taylor.

Together, they set forth to inform people just how serious drunk driving is, and to get more people involved in the club.

Some of their activities included the carnation sale for Valentine's Day, car washes, and presentations to the junior high schools. Their main event of the year was S.A.D.D. Awareness Week.

Paula Hildebrand organized the presentations with help from Angie Donn, who wrote the skits. Members of SADD were there in hopes that younger students would get involved and become more aware of the seriousness of driving drunk before they are old enough to receive a driver's license.

Aside from those activities was an assembly held during school hours with a guest speaker. Students were asked to wear their SADD buttons, which were distributed during the assembly. Throughout the remainder of the week, various prizes were given to those students wearing the buttons.

Each day at lunch activities were presented by different club members promoting S.A.D.D. SADD life contracts were another big part of the club. Getting parents and students to bond together was a main goal.

Students take time at lunch to sign up for the S.A.D.D. club.

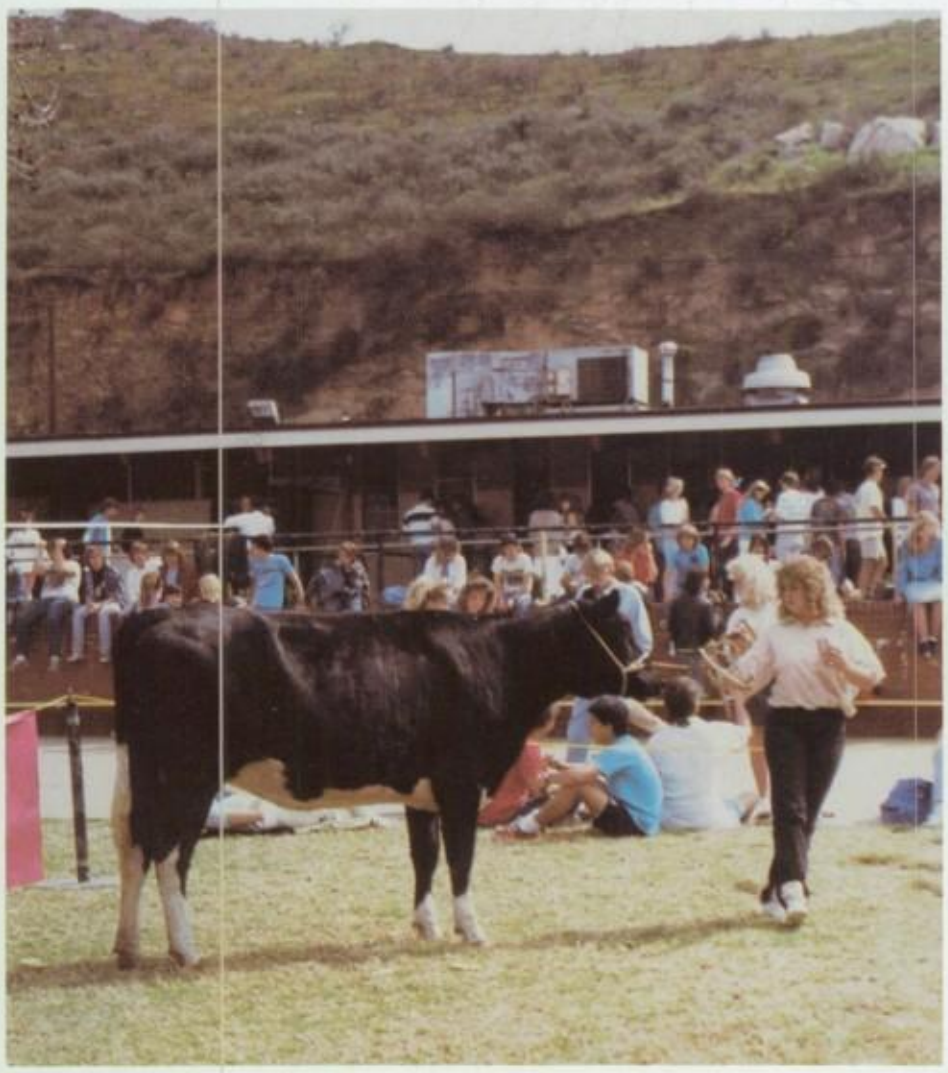
Learning To Do, Doing To Learn

To most people, the Future Farmers of America is nothing more than a few smelly pig pens on the corner and a week of F.F.A. activities in early spring. In reality, "F.F.A is an organization for careers in the industry of agriculture. The F.F.A. gives students the opportunity to enhance skills learned in the classroom through practical experience," said Advisor Lucreta Riggs. "A major emphasis of the F.F.A. is the development of leadership skills and abilities to prepare young people for leadership roles in their agricultural careers."

With two hundred plus students enrolled in over ten classes at the Ag. Department, the popularity of Future Farmers is evident.

"Most of the students have livestock projects (beef, sheep, and swine) which will be shown and sold at the Eastern San Diego County Junior Fair and the Del Mar Fair. Other projects include oat hay, work experience, ornamental horticulture (house plants) and small animals," stated Riggs. "F.F.A. is much more than farming!"

F.F.A. members: Top row: Shannon Beckman, Byron Shehan, Kristy Cedding, David Lawler, Angie Samaniego, Laura Hillker, Kandi Bracewell; Sitting: Sheryl Bushree, Melissa Ness, Donny Ross, Davin Lawler, Heather Baratt, Tina Goldring, Shanda Harath, Andy Bueno, Kristy Bracewell, Josh Silverthorn, Advisor Lucretia Riggs, John Dignan, Mark Scudder, Department Head Sam Walker, Ed Seacord, Toby Shehan, Nicki Reihbien, Shannon Beckman, Chamane Dexteimer, Stephanie Halloway, Sondra Robinson, Peggy Palmer, Steve Serrano, Byron Shehan, Chuck Yeadon, John McFerron, Wendy Pimberton.



During National FFA week, a cow was paraded around at lunch, showing everyone on the Quad exactly what the F.F.A. can produce.

In position and ready to go, George Kumke prepares to attack his huge bale of hay on one of the week's competitions, the hay bucking race.

Giving his last burst of power Dale Hickson throws his bail of hay across the finishline in the final day of the National FFA week competition.

Key Club Exhibits Community Leadership

Members of the Key Club were kept busy during the holiday season. Besides facing the hustle bustle of Christmas shopping and decorating, these students were dedicated to bringing Christmas cheer to people who would otherwise have been left out in the cold this holiday season.

Free babysitting was offered by members to the school's faculty and others in the Lakeside Community for the donation of a bag of non-perishable groceries. With this food, they provided a full Thanksgiving meal to a local family in their time of need. The Thanksgiving food drive sparked the idea of keeping year-round food bank on hand for needy individuals and families.

The club also kept up the spirit of giving by their generous donations of clothing and toys to an orphanage in Tijuana.

The elderly were not left out on the club's agenda of spreading the holiday spirit. Lakeside Kiwanians held a holiday luncheon in honor of residents living at a local retirement home on December 12th. Key Club members helped serve food and provided a Christmas skit for entertainment.

Using funds gained from a car wash held December 6th, the club was able to purchase holiday decorations for residents at the TLC Convalescent Home in El Cajon. These small gifts were distributed to the elderly residents on December 22, when they were caroling there. Immediately following was a Christmas party for all members.

According to an active member, "Key Club is a fun way of becoming a positive force in our community."

Key Club supporters at TLC Convalescent Home: Christy Gall, Dawn Schnure, Jenny Berry, Miriam Sproger, Wendy Cruise, Mr. John Douglas, and resident dog, Mutt.

Residents of the TLC Convalescent Home are entertained and served refreshments by Cherie Piatkiewicz, Dana Ciolli and Dawn Schnure.

During Halloween caroling, Deena Shands and Jenny Harrison visit with residents.

Under the strong leadership of President Cherie Piatkiewicz, Key Club experienced an expansion of membership and increased involvement.

DECA STUDENTS WIN AWARDS

El Capitan High School's 34 members of the Distributive Education Clubs of America (DECA) attended the Southern California Career Development Conference on February 9, 1988, at Cal State University, Long Beach. The DECA students won a total of 58 awards in the marketing, merchandising, sales, and mathematics competency events. There were 32 California Association of DECA, Southern District Chapters. A total of 562 DECA students represented Southern California, from Santa Barbara and Los Angeles to San Diego. El Capitan has won a total of 88 awards in their first two marketing competitions this season.

At the February Conference there were 9 first places won in the fields of: Restaurant Marketing, General Marketing, Petroleum Marketing, and Apparel and Accessories. There were 4 second places won in the fields of: Food Marketing, Restaurant Marketing, General Merchandising, and Apparel and Accessories.

When asked, "Do you think DECA will carry over to other areas of your career life?" Christie Bostic stated, "Yes, because the skills we learn in DECA will help me at interviews, meetings, etc. I would like to someday run my own business and I feel with my experience in DECA, I can go as far as I want and reach any goal I have in the business field."

Alison Galewski said, "We couldn't have done it without the help of Mace Williamson."

Before the lunchtime rush begins, Jodi Littlepage tests the strawberry ice cream consistency and taste.

After lecturing the class on sales and money, Mace Williamson offers pointers on how to role play business situations.

To prepare for the next D.E.C.A. competition, Marc Barlow searches through his folder for additional information to help him.

With members working on a variety of projects, Leesa Hale tries to schedule a day for their group pictures.

All D.E.C.A. students are scheduled for shifts in the student store. On Monday Kris Gibson, Patti Ashworth, and Ami Lake take their turn at selling.

SURF CLUB COMPETED RAIN OR SHINE

No matter how cold the water was; rain or shine, the Surf Club would wait in anticipation for Saturday morning surf sessions or contests.

With over twenty guys and two girls on the team, advisor Mr. Hedberg says, "This is the most active surf club in El Cap history!"

Everyone liked the contests the most. Mr. Hedberg arranged several contests in different locations. Everyone who participated received a certain amount of points. The winner got the points of how many people were in the contest and everyone after that got one point less than the person before him or her.

The end of the year brought an awards banquet, giving the top surfers and bodyboarders special awards.

The devoted surf club members met every Friday in Mr. Hedberg's room to listen to the surf report and decide which beach they would meet at on Saturday. Among their favorites were Cardiff, Sunset Cliffs, I.B., Blacks, and Marine Street. Although the team usually met on Saturdays, many members often went to the beach three times a week or more. "To be a good surfer it takes a great deal of dedication and confidence in yourself. You can't be afraid you just have to go for it," said President Jon Ritchart.

Everybody was glad we even had a surf club at El Cap because it's so far from the beach. "It's a good idea, it gives many people something to look forward to," says senior, Val Perez.

While bodyboarding at Marine Street, Glenn Whitford does a drop-knee.

At a noon time meeting, Vice-President Rick Strom and Dan Neighbors listen to the surf report and discuss tomorrow's contest at Rock Pile.

Alex, to some this is superficial, but this is truly where I feel "at home". When I die this is where I want to be. I've enjoyed knowing you this year. You've helped encouraged me and I hope I was able to listen well for you since I can't really give good advize. I hope you have a great Summer. Good luck in all your future endeavors!

Love,

Jon Hedberg

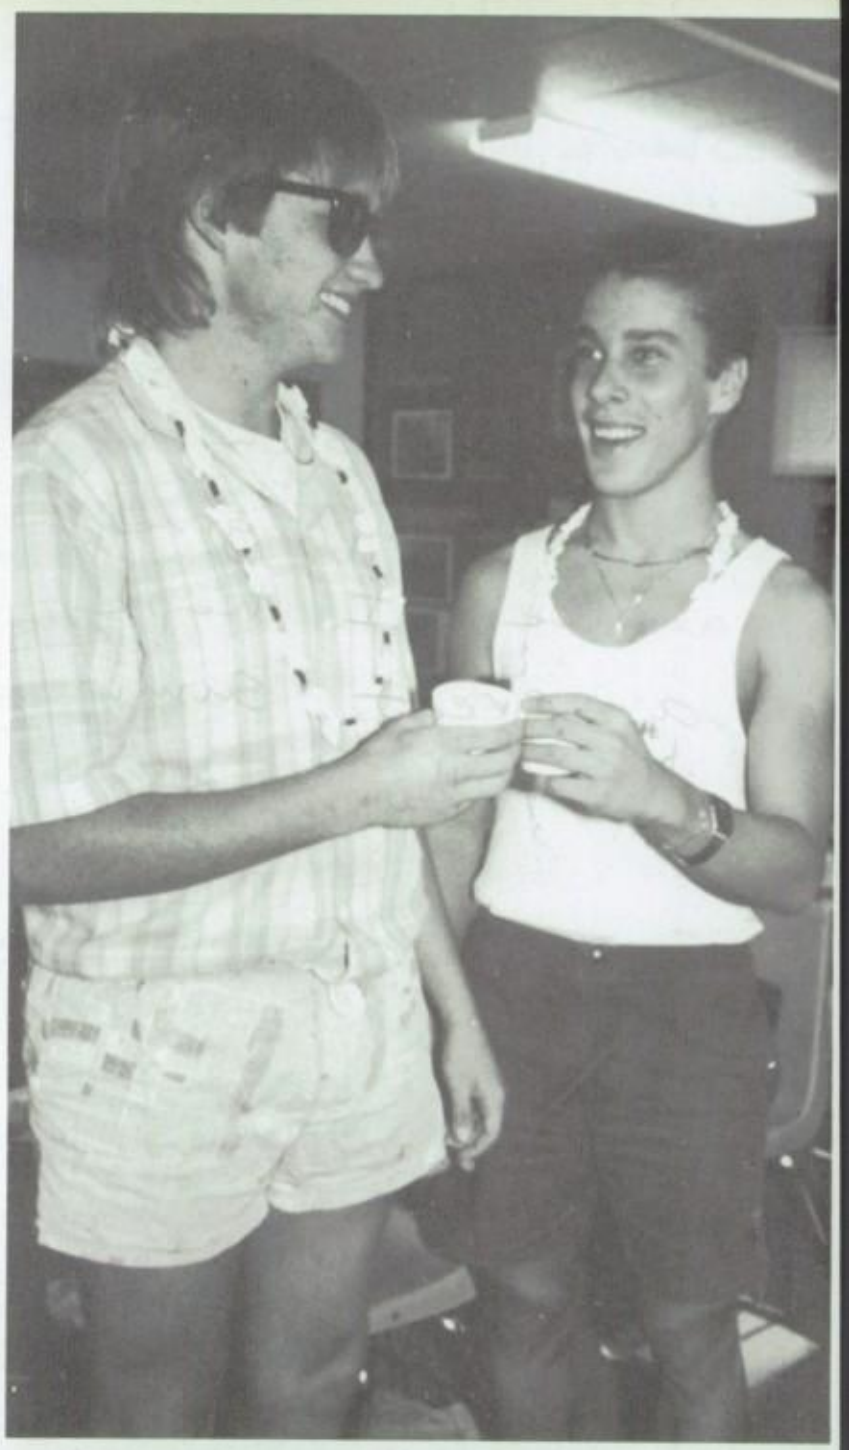
FRENCH CLUB BECOMES ACTIVE QUICKLY

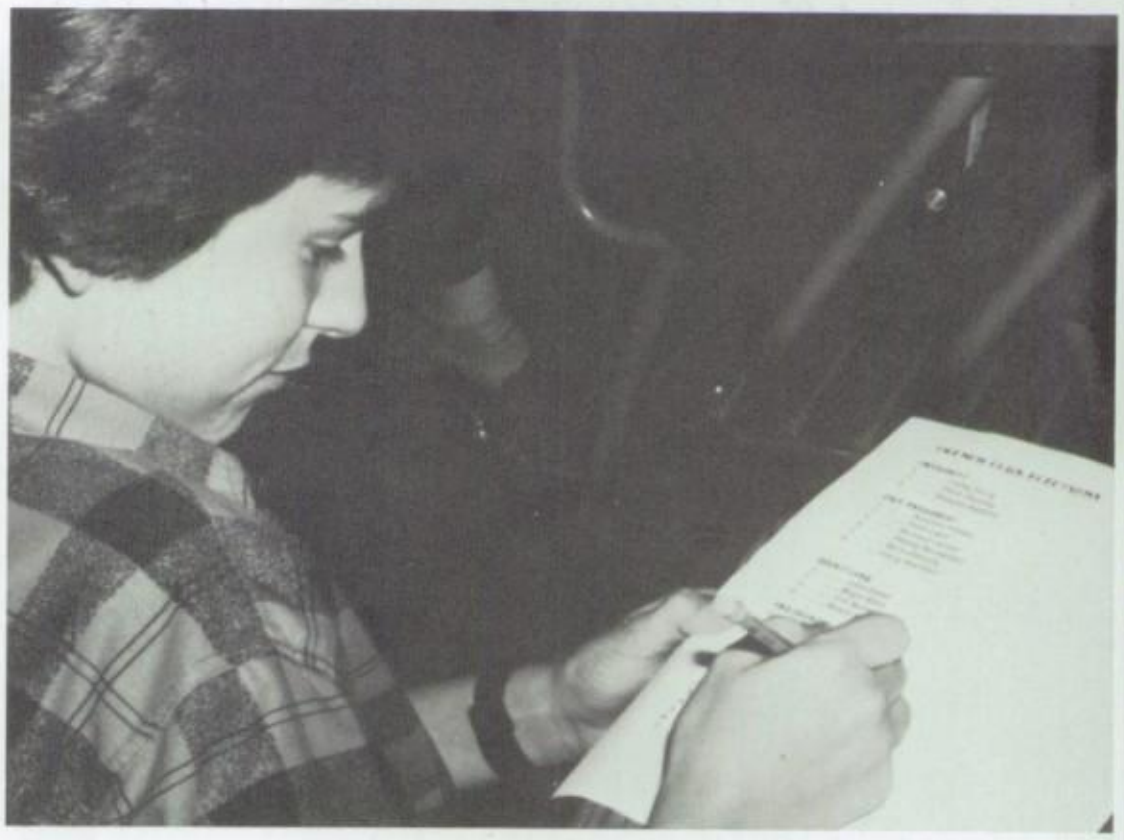
"I've always thought it would be a neat thing to get started," said Mrs. Romaine. "Exposing students to French culture is what I've always planned and a French Club is a great way to do it."

As a new club on campus it was important to make it known that a French Club did exist. After elections were held, the new officers immediately began promoting. On club day, the French Club officers were easily recognized on the quad as President Mark Murphy waved a French flag, students took notice and a full club was soon assembled.

First on the agenda was a poster sale which brought in enough money for the members to go to La Chaumine, an exquisite French restaurant. In early February, the traditional Mardi Gras festival was held. While students ate croissant sandwiches and chocolate mousse, Adam Cook and Sarah Neidhart were crowned King and Queen. They received ten dollar gift certificates to the Wherehouse.

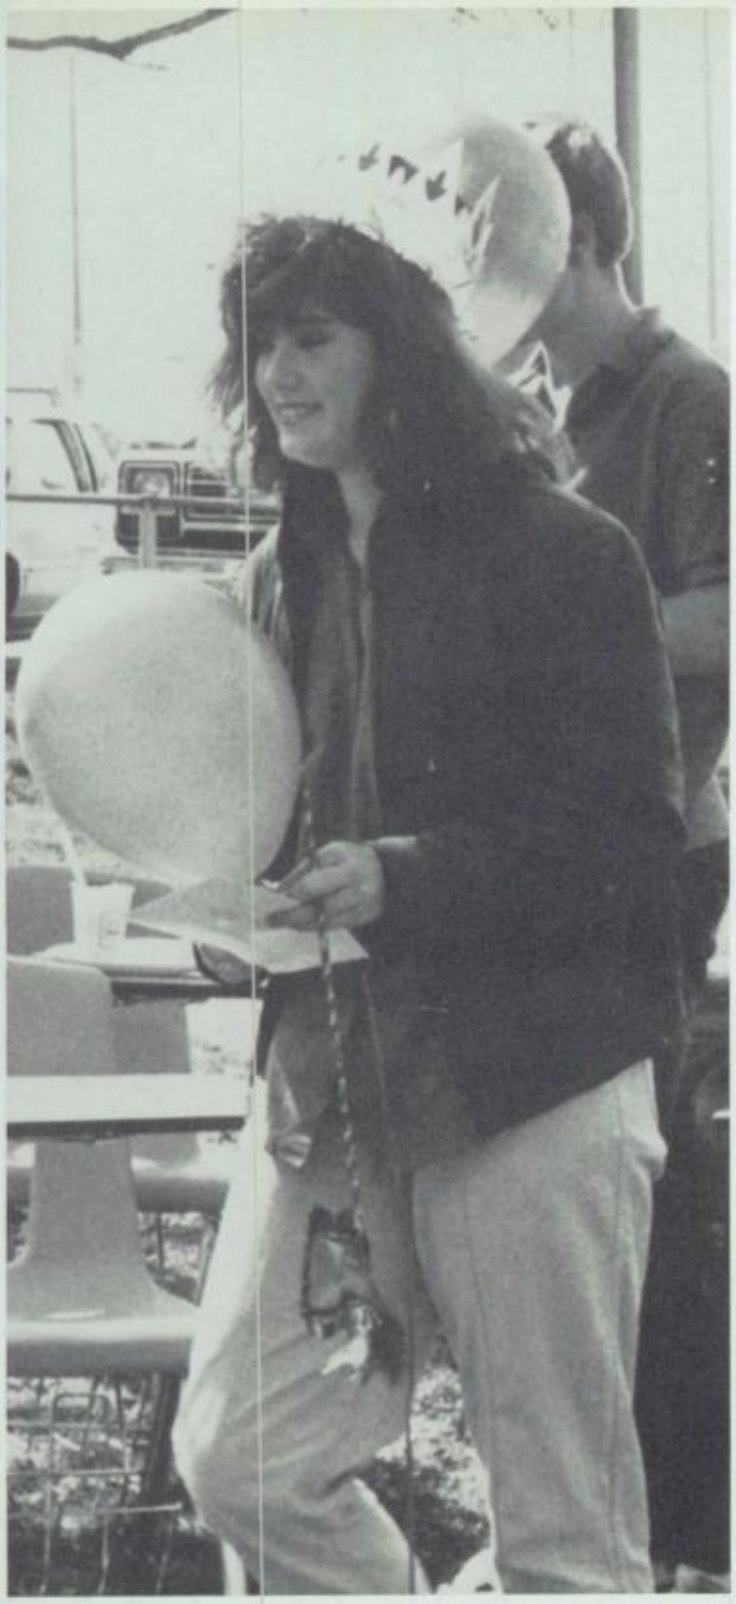
To wind up the year's major project, the club sponsored a continental breakfast for faculty and staff. Many faculty said it was a great idea and would love to have it become a monthly event.





Celebrating French Polynesia Day, Mark Murphy and David Donatti toast the occasion.

Voting for his choice of French Club officers, Brad Craw makes his decision by secret ballot.



After the votes were tallied, Sarah Neidhart was pronounced Mardi Gras Queen.

FRENCH CLUB: Front Row: Treasurer Debbie Teo, President Mark Murphy, Stacy Ford, Publicity Loan Thai and Michelle Blanchard, Vice President Heather Stoops Top Row: Secretary Gina Dolan, Mrs. Romaine, Shelly Jackson, Jennifer Kurtz, Jeff Hickle, Rachel Masters, April Blakely, Thom Lane.

During the French Polynesian breakfast, Steve Alvarado and Brandie Gould shared many laughs and smiles.

VARSITY FOOTBALL GOES TO CIF

After beating El Cajon High to clinch the 2A league championship, El Capitan was off to C.I.F.

Even though they didn't win against San Marcos, they made a good effort. Through the whole season, the Varsity squad stayed on top of everything. They had their best start since 1978 with a record of 4-0. Their most exciting game of the season was against Granite Hills. After being behind 14-0 at the half, the Vaqueros came back with 4 touchdowns, one of those being a 75 yard scoring run by tailback Andy Johns. Strong running throughout the season gave Bryan Palmer, offensive player of the year in the Grossmont League 2A and he will also attend Stanford on a football scholarship. Defensively the Vaqueros were rated #1 throughout the whole season, lead by outside linebacker/all league Erin Murray and strong safety Tom Cabell.

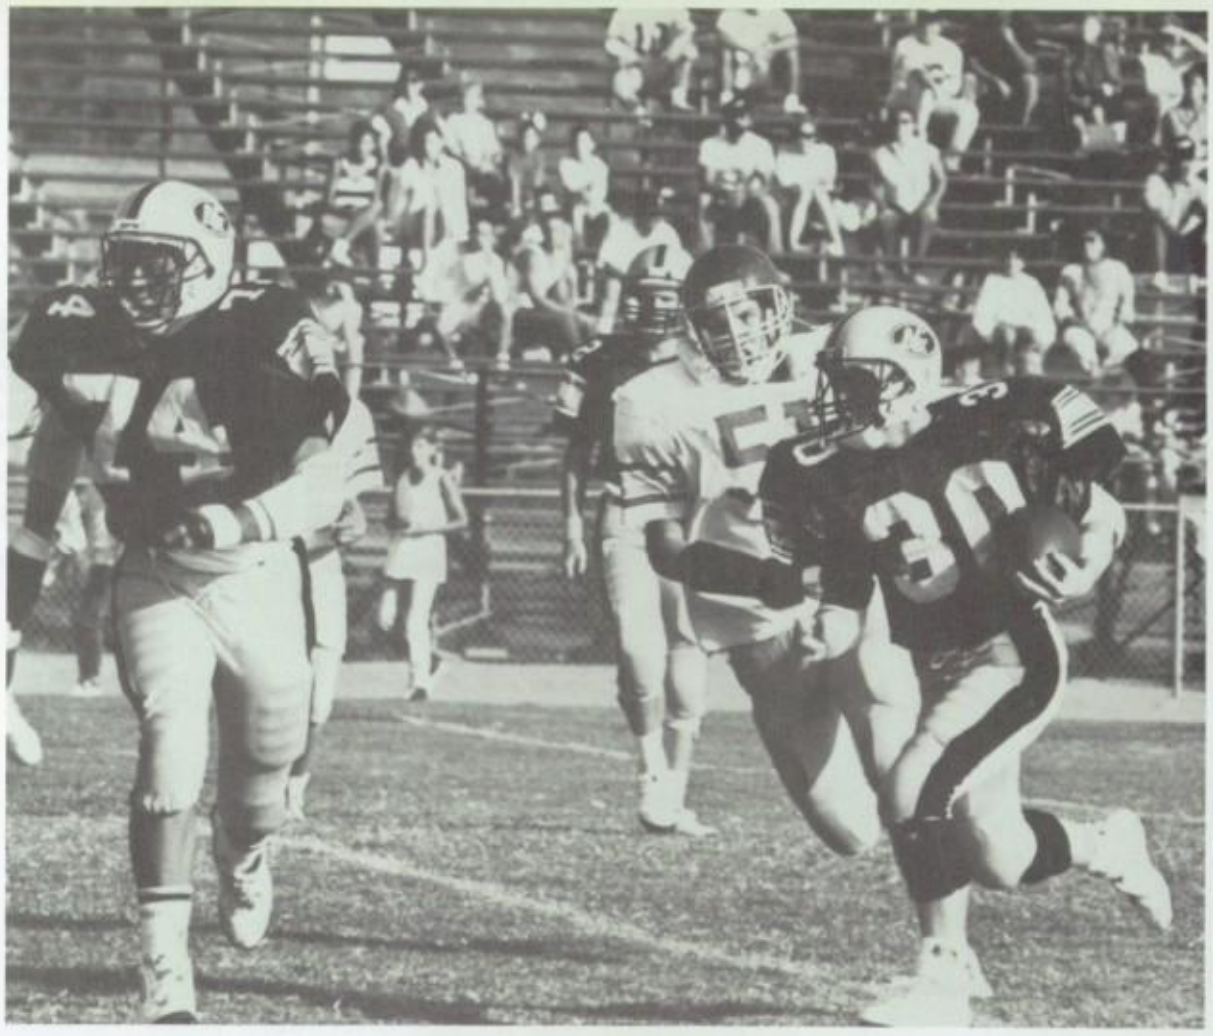
To build enthusiasm to win the game, the Vaqueros charge through the banner of pride at the Helix game.

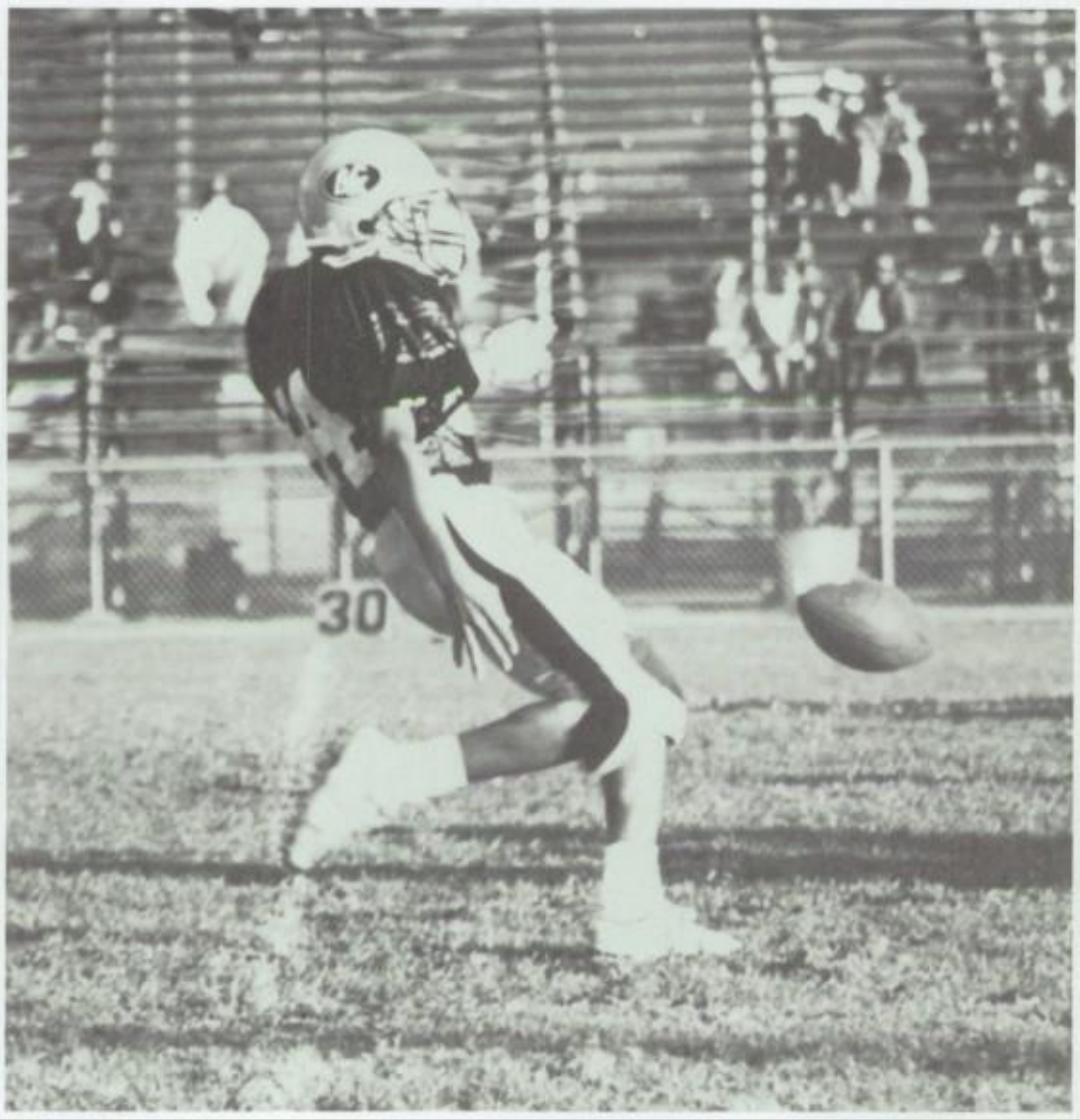
As Coach Waasted gives signals to the defensive line, the rest of the team watches intently to see if they can block the play.

To pass along the offensive plays, Coach Rockhold sends the runningback, Andy Johns, into the huddle with a special play that resulted in a 72 yard gain against Santana.

To make the first down, Dan Freeman hands Bryan Palmer the ball to gain the yardage that resulted in placing six points on the scoreboard.



With good blockage by Ben Shields, Mark Smith escapes the tackle to gain 5 yards.



From the Vaqueros 30 yard line, Fabian White makes a successful punt down to the 35 yard line.

After receiving the handoff, Mark Smith escapes the Valhalla defense to gain yardage.

Junior Varsity Football Proves Promising in 87-88 Season

Headed by Coach Vickery, Duke, and Waasted, JV Football held an outstanding season. Lead by Captain and Co-Captain, Greg Gutierrez and Greg Ransweiler, JV Defense was impassible.

Recognition for linemen of the year was given to Prentice Teo and his two teammates. Jimmy Soule and Mike McLaughlin. Best all around player can be accredited to Brian Murphy who went from Quarterback to Cornerback in one season. In justification of, Waasted stated, "Brian is probably our greatest Varsity promise in 89. He's an outstanding ball player."

Outside linemen were freshman, Bryan Quick and Andy Principe. On Strong Safety stood Mitch James and Ryan Hanson. Head Defensive Coach, Coach Duke stated, "Defensively, our greatest objective is to prepare the kids for Varsity. As of now, we're in a good position to transfer some of the kids to Varsity."

Leading the offense in Touchdowns, most of which were over 50 yards, was Halfback, Mark Smith. Smith scored a total of 12 TD's. Beside Smith stood Keith Ruyes, who averaged 10 yards per carry. Protection of the Quarterback can be given to head offensive linemen, Mark Towne.

With reference to the outcome of the season, Coach Vickery stated, "We were an exciting team to watch this year. We scored more TD's offensive and defensively, than any other team we played. Our losses were taken in a positive manner. Each loss was by 6 pts. or less."

"We played a well played season," said Coach Duke.

To successfully defend the goal, Jim Shields blocks the shot from the pointman to keep them scoreless in the first quarter.

Making a good pass into the hole is usually a difficult task, but Andy Patton eludes Southwest's defensive crown to pass it to Todd Jardine for the score.

UNDERCLASSMEN MOVED TO J.V.

ACCENTUATING The Year of The SENIORS

"This season was so much better, not only because we were more successful, but because we received much more support than we ever have," said co-captain Thom Lane. "There were more fans at home games and our managers, (Gina, Renee, Leanne, and Barbara) always cheered us on and kept up our spirits at away games."

The varsity team ended the season primarily of seniors. Beginning on Homecoming Day, October 31, Coach Legace decided this would be the year for seniors. After moving the underclassmen down to the junior varsity to gain more playing time, Coach Legace told the seniors it was their game and to go out and win against arch-rival Santana. At half-time it was 3-3 and with having only one substitute, things didn't look too good in this game of speed and endurance. At the end of the third quarter they led 4-3. "We knew we had to win. It was the most important game of the season and the last Homecoming game we would have. We were all really pumped up," said pointman Joan Lee. Kevin Krickhahn, Andy Patton, Todd Jardine, Brian Robinson, Tyler Millard, Jim Shields, Joan Lee, and Thom Lane put everything they had into their fourth quarter defense to preserve the win. The final score was 10-5 with their first league win. Goalie Tyler Millard ended the game with a school record of 19 saves in one game. They ended up winning four games and finished the season with great confidence and self-respect.

The team motto this year was "Teamwork." It was led offensively by leading scorer, Kevin Krickhahn and by leading assist-maker, Thom Lane. On defense, Thom Lane led in steals with Brian Robinson a close second. Overall, the varsity team learned new plays, to set picks, and return for defensive coverage after a shot. "This year ended with each of us knowing how to execute plays and we all felt pretty confident working with each other," said Kevin Krickhahn.

On junior varsity, the team was led by co-captains Shawn Thompson and Jeff Damschen. This team won the Consolation Championship trophy at the El Cajon Invitational Tournament with a double overtime sudden death victory over Army/Navy, 9-8. Steve Marron, the team's leading scorer, was voted to the All-Tournament Team.

In a quick pass from Joan Lee, Thom Lane powers over the defensive wing to add one point to the score.

Girls End Season in Fourth Place

The girls Cross-Country team had a disappointing year with their final-regular season record of 4-4, which put them 4th in overall standings.

Two runners on the team placed in the top 15 at Grossmont League Finals held at Lindo Lake Park. Diana Bradley had a 13th place finish with a time of 13:08 on the 2-mile course. Tammy Kniffing followed behind placing 14th with a time of 13:14. As a result of the Finals, the girls were selected All-League Honorable Mention.

The girls did qualify for C.I.F. Finals and were ranked 13th coming into the race. They came out the way they came in, ending the season ranked 13th in the county.

Even though the girls didn't do well this year, they still made it to C.I.F. Finals, which some schools never make. "I felt we had a good season and did what we deserved," said Mavy Chadwick.

Cross Country Places Second in CIF Finals

The boys Varsity Cross Country team has had a good year. Two runners received medals and All-Grossmont League. Senior Greg Spielman placed eighth with a 16:33. Junior Konstantine Kindreich had a third place finish with a 16:11. Running on a daily average of eight to thirteen miles the team of seven prepared for C.I.F. El Cap had to run with Poway, El Camino, Serra, and Santana. The team placed second in C.I.F. Finals behind Serra. Losing to Serra made all hopes to Fresno disappear. The team is ranked fifth in the county as a result of the race.

The team has had a fine year. Their final record of 7-1 during the season puts them second to powerhouse Santana in League standings.

The team had a chance to be League champions this year if they won the Grossmont League. They did come in second. Two runners on the team received medals and All-Grossmont League recognition.

C.I.F. prelims were next for the team. This year El Cap ran 2A instead of the 3A division they had previously run. The purpose at prelims is to qualify for C.I.F. Finals. The team thus qualifies for C.I.F. Finals by winning their heat with a score of 81. The introduction of the State meet this year, held at Fresno, was the goal of this year's team. In order for them to achieve that goal, they had to beat Serra.

Making his move, Mark Lucchessi pulls away from Santana's number two runner.

Support Helps The Win

"I started running in the sixth grade. When I entered high school, I decided to run track for two reasons: one, the girls' track team, and two, I like to win," stated Randy Baker.

Track is a competitive sport that takes time, energy and effort. Support from family, friends, and teachers is a major part of running track.

"When my friends are there to support me, it gives me a boost in the winning direction and it makes me feel confident about myself." He went on to add that track is more of an individual win than a team win. "You have to win your event just like everyone else so the team can win the over-all meet. Teamwork, in a sense, is individual, yet it all comes together at the end."

Randy Baker

To win requires practice so Jeanette LaQuire paces carefully around the track.

In practice, Brian Harmon reaches the best high jump of the afternoon.

After warming up sufficiently, Kim Varvel digs in and leaps to one of her best broad jump efforts of the day.

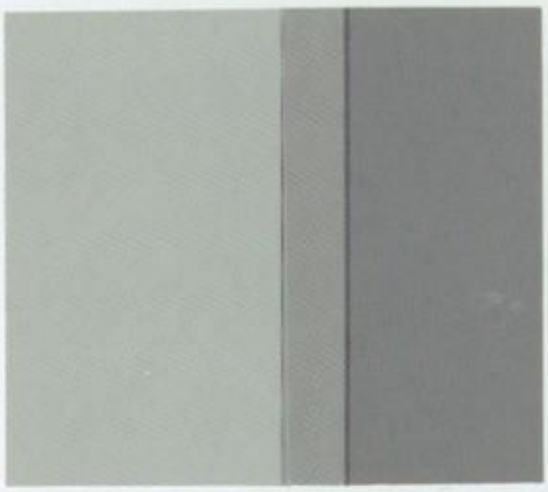
PRACTICE TIME INCLUDES WEEKENDS

A gunshot sounds in the almost still air and a group of runners take off. Kurt Wilkins, one of El Capitan's track stars, is in the pack.

"I first got into track because of my dad," he began. "He was a coach so it was the only sport I really knew."

"Edwin Moses and Greg Foster are two people I admire. I want to be like them, work as hard, be successful." He also went on to add that working "as hard" means spending his free time practicing, usually weekends.

"When I prepare for a meet or event, I put everything out of mind and just run the best that I can. Whether I win or lose, it doesn't matter because I know I did my best."



Kurt Wilkins

At spring practice, Tammy Kniffing runs the track even though it is flooded from early morning rains.

Joy Principe

Coaches Help Set Goals

Senior track member Joy Principe faced her final season as a member of the El Cap Cross Country and Track team. She has been a member since her freshmen year and said she has always liked to compete. "At this level, you compete to be the best you can, and you really have to practice hard to be the best you can be."

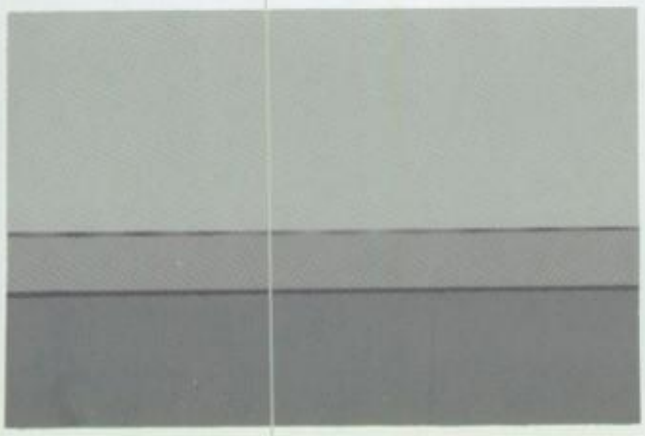
Practice means anywhere from 2 to 3 hours after school and meets twice a week. Joy finds time for schoolwork on Sunday, her resting day.

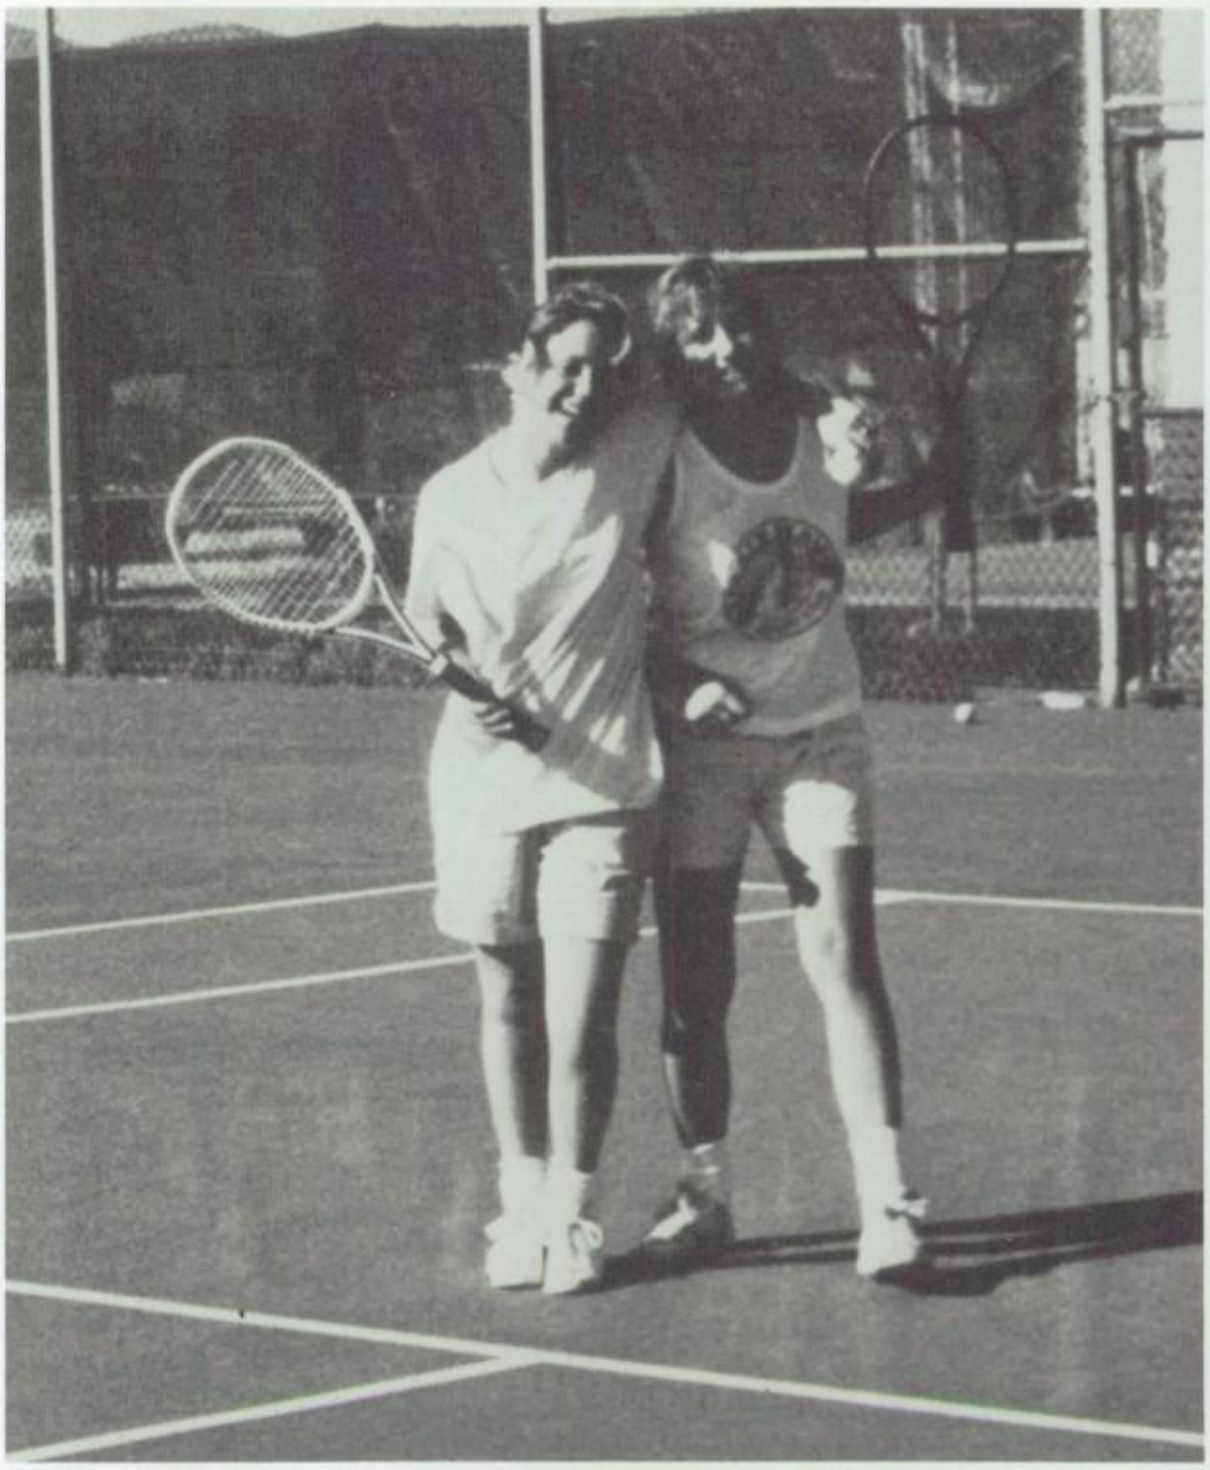
Joy said, "The best thing about track besides competing is the team. We have fun together and everyone is friends with one another. The worst thing is the killer workouts."

Coaches play a major role. They help her set high goals and achieve mental toughness, build high self-esteem and she said, "I like our coaches because they care about us as individuals as well as athletes."

After four years of competing in meets, her most memorable moment was last year in the '87 League finals when she anchored the mile relay and they won the League title.

After running, Stacy Martinez rests and watches Tammy as she works out.

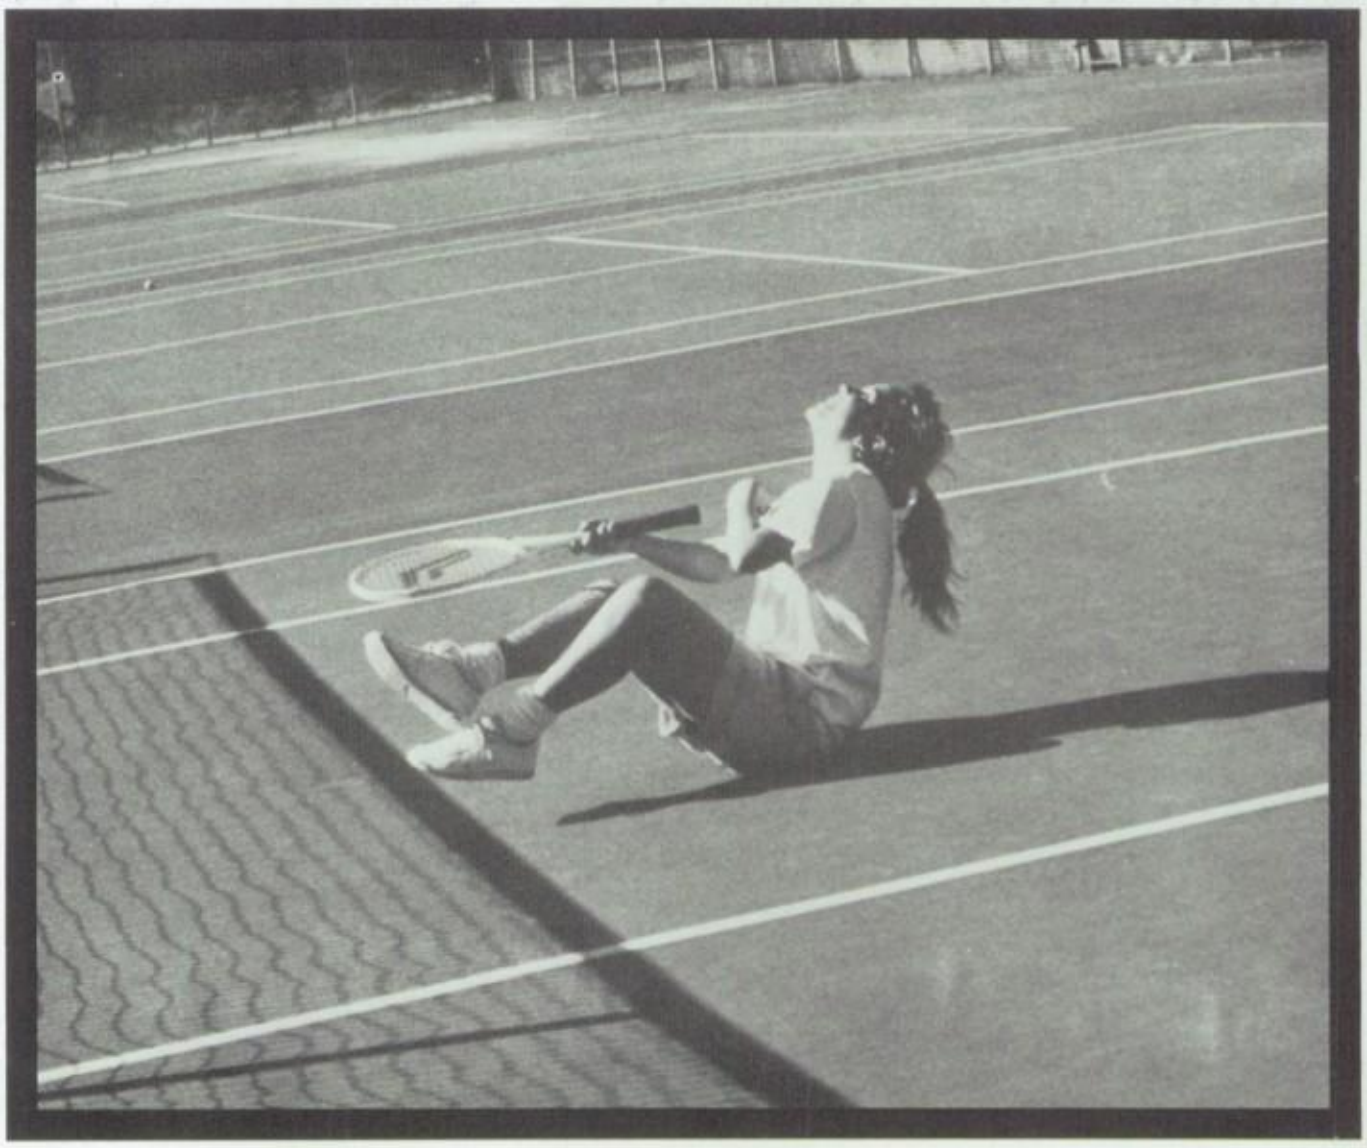


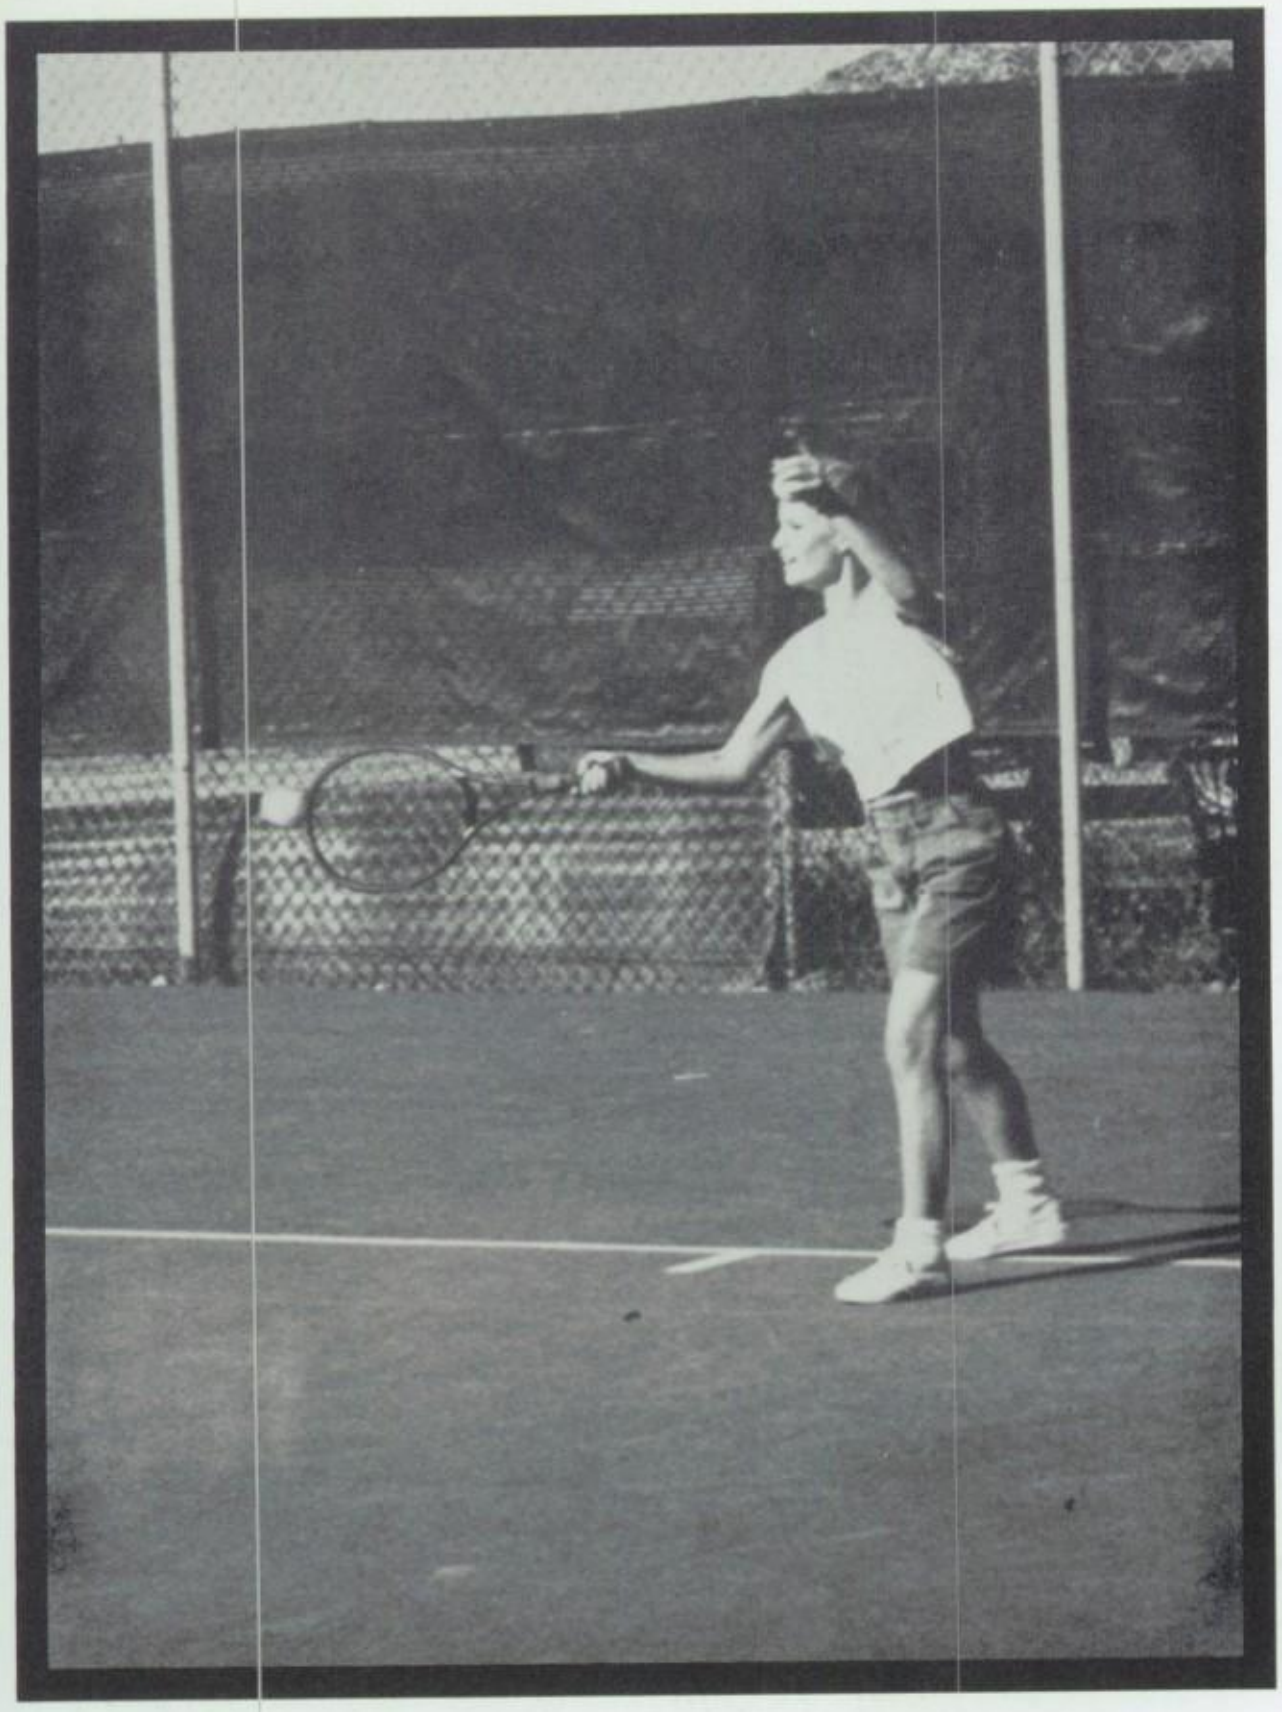


After a tough practice match, Emily Principe and Chris Robinson congratulate one another.

Just like in the book Inner Tennis, Rae Ann Hamilton concentrates and waits for her opponent to serve the ball.

After winning her match Emily Principe falls to the ground in joyous laughter.





TEAM FINISHES FOURTH

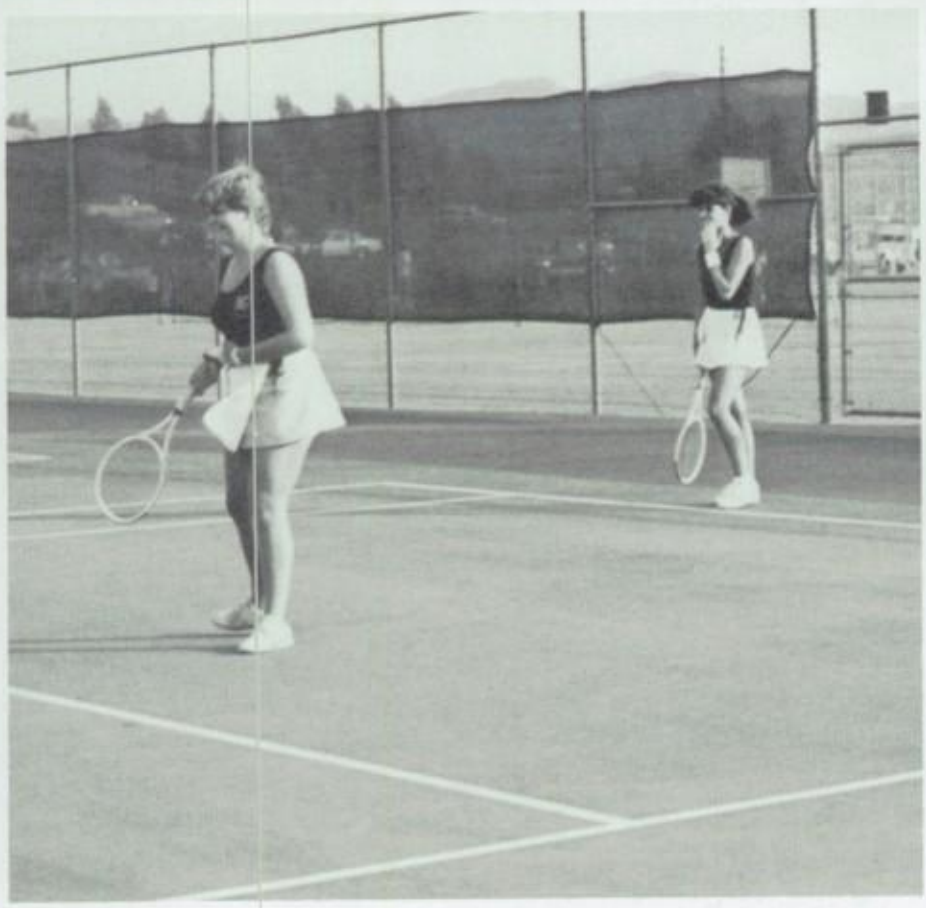
Girl's Varsity Tennis finished the season in 4th place. "It was my best year since I started as a Sophomore. We played really well."

Every day was another day of practice cluttered with drills and various ball hitting techniques. All of which were led by Coach Newton. Challenge matches were held every other day for each girl to have a chance to move up 1 or 2 positions on the ladder. Each girl was competing for the top 4 singles spots and the top 2 doubles teams.

Throughout the season, Joy Principe and Kim Varvel led the Varsity on doubles. Principe and Varvel gained the top position and a seat in the CIF Finals. For their valiant efforts, Kim and Joy were awarded the MVP's of the year.

Loan Thai and Crystal Hobbs were seated right behind Joy and Kim. Loan and Crystal earned the Most Improved players of the year. Loan comments, "This year's team was awesome!"

Team Captains were Joy Principe and Rae Ann Hamilton. Rae Ann was also awarded the Sportsmanship award for her uplifting spirits and kindness on and off the courts.



In a quick move, Ivy Stuckey drops the ball just on the other side of the net for game set match.

To prepare for an upcoming meet, Diana DiRaffaele practices her serve.

Doubles partners Christine Peterson and Lisa Jensen find working together helps them to win their matches.

TEAM MEMBER MEANS PART OF WINNING FAMILY

"Being a member of this soccer team means being a member of a winning family," states Coach Henry Sosa.

The team was off to a good start with two wins, one tie, and only one loss. Grossmont was number one in the county until our girls beat them in a 2-1 victory.

"We're going to win league!" declared Diana Bradley. Predicted to be third in league, Diana was optimistic about being in first place.

The main scorer on the team was Kim Varvel. Even with the constant pressure, Kim was able to put in long practice sessions and hard work.

Head coach Goal Tenders for the U.S. National team, and also the Under 20 U.S. National Coach, Sosa has had extensive experience in his coaching.

It was a hard transition for Sosa to go from coaching all boys national teams to a high school team, but he has adjusted well.

He has high goals for his team as he stated: "Personally, I would like to see them make playoffs, but you can never set your goals short of winning CIF."

Sosa has worked the girls hard, with much more conditioning than they did last year, and it seems to have paid off. This year's defense, including Carey Tinsley, Georgina Gutierrez and Becky Herzig have done exceptionally well this year.

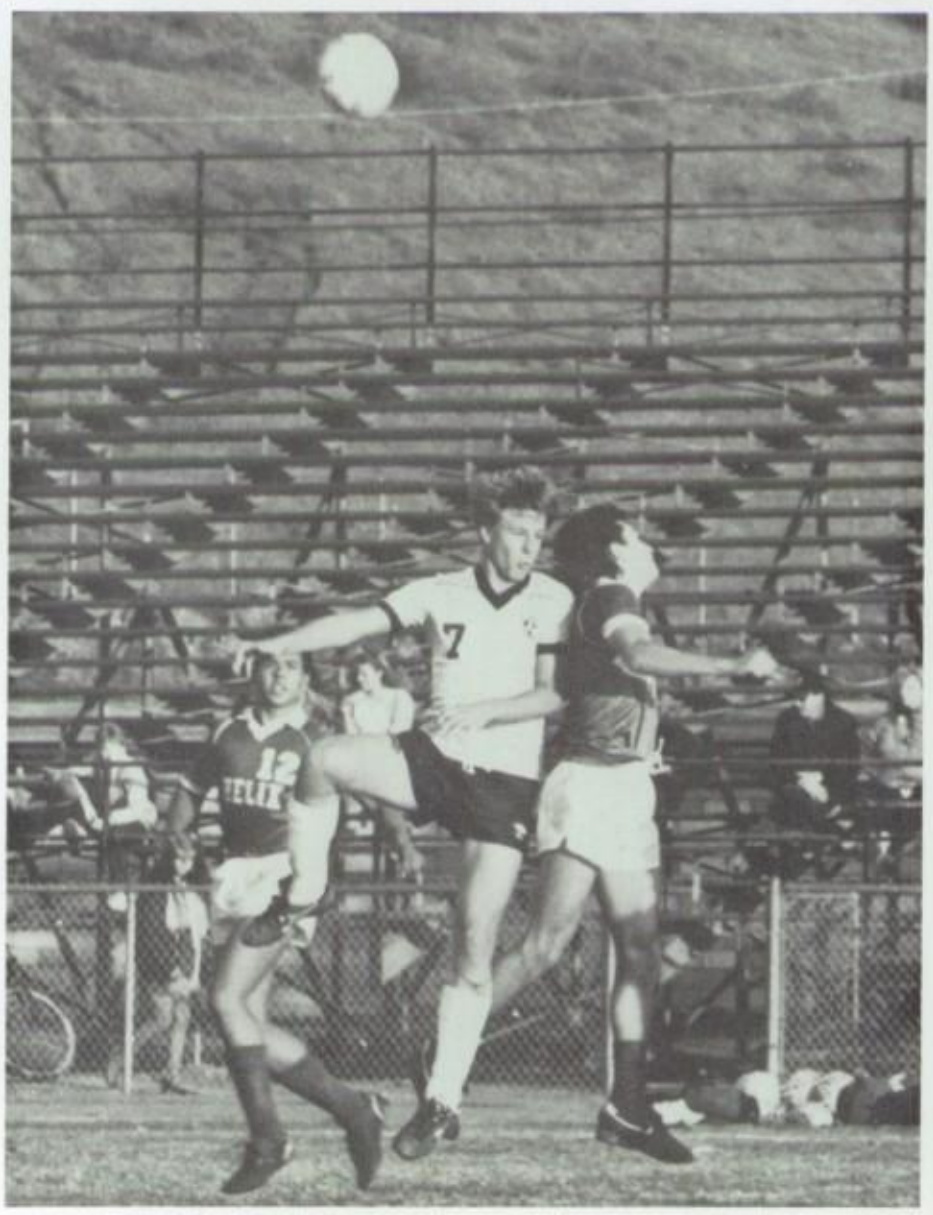
COACH PETERSON INSTILLS DETERMINATION

Although they only won seven games, the boys' varsity soccer team held plenty of talent, including all-leaguers, Kurt Wilkins and Craig Scantlin. The most exciting game of the season came on the first day of league play against last season's co-champions, Valhalla. The Norsemen managed to score two goals in the last five minutes in order to overcome El Capitan's tightly knit defense.

The competitive nature of the team was brought about by overall pride and determination which was instituted by Coach, Ron Peterson. "As long as the team played with all their heart it didn't matter the outcome of the game," stated Coach Peterson.

The attitude of the team was summed up by Kurt Wilkins who said, "I like the competition thus I played for the team more than I would play for myself."



To help the Vaqueros score, Robert Romero dribbles the ball forward.

Leaping for the ball, Kurt Wilkins heads the ball away from a Helix player.

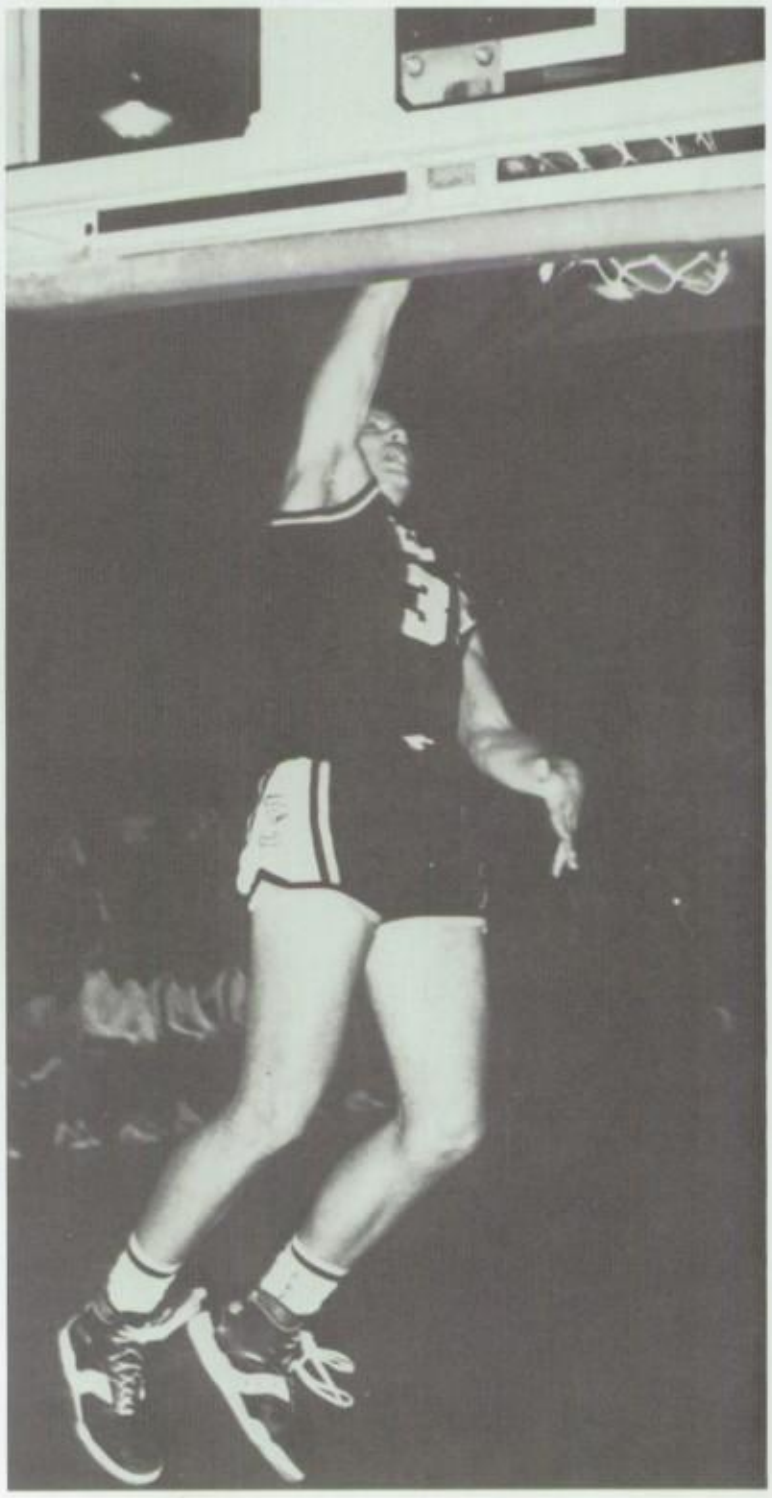
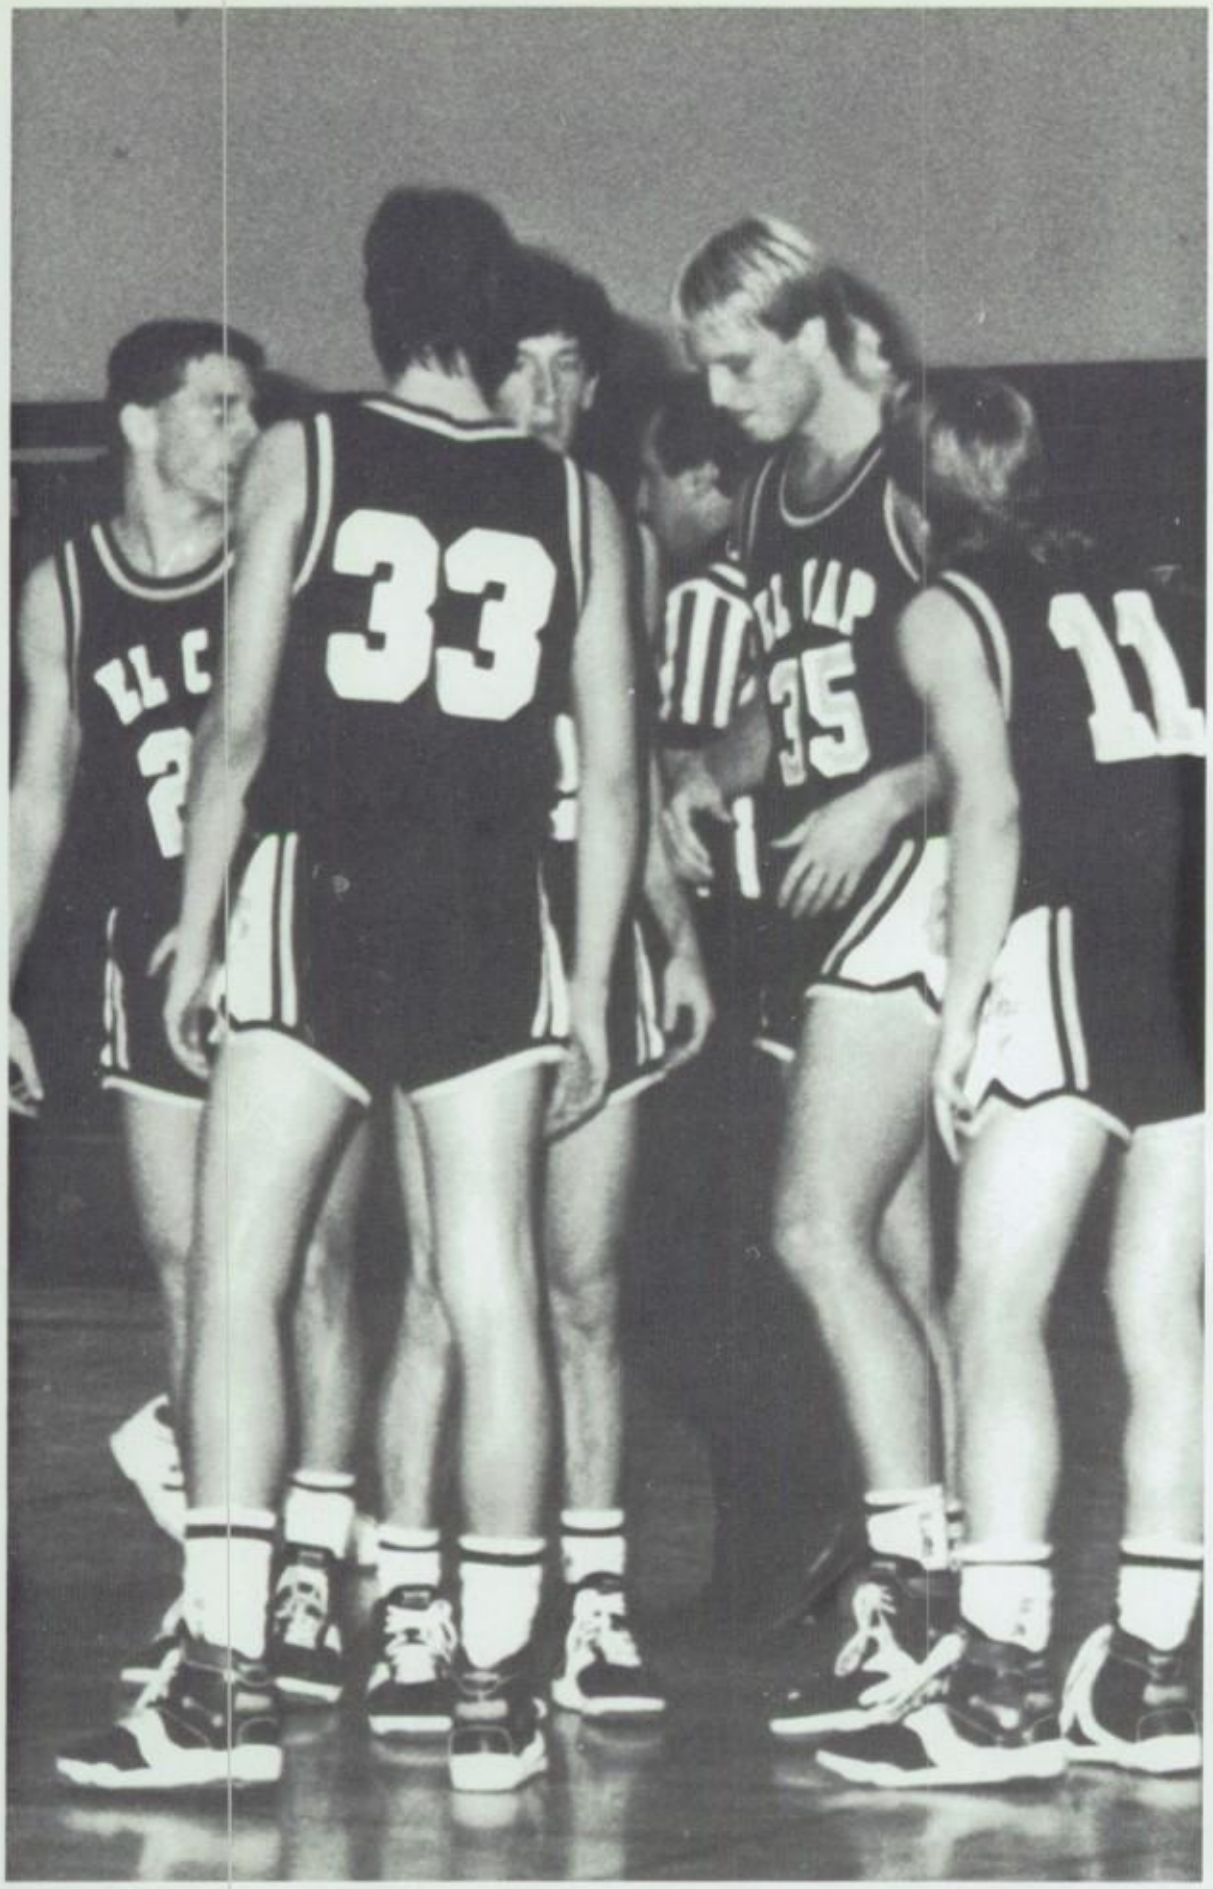
Brad Smith races down the court to set up the play.



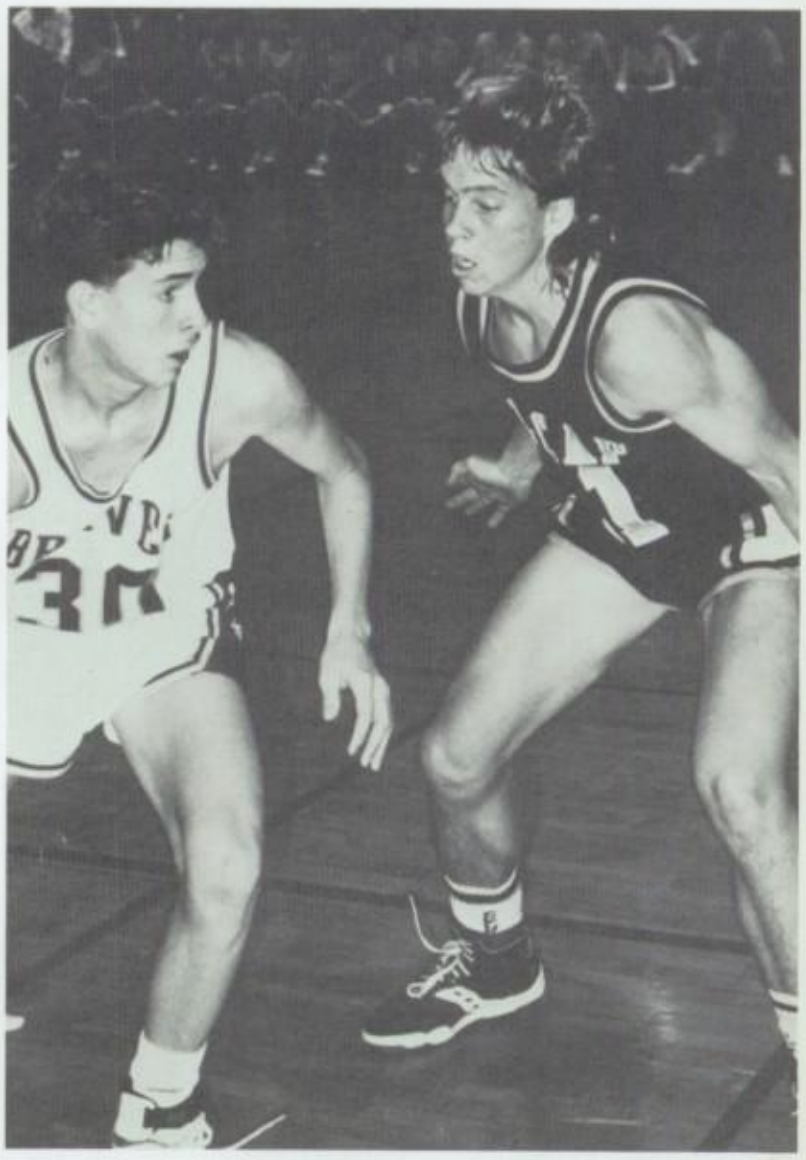


Successfully stopping his man from penetrating the middle, Brad Smith blocks the set up as Bryan Palmer steals the ball for 2 more points.

To prepare for a press, Bryan Palmer, Jeremy McGarity, Brad Smith, and Jason Berkshire huddle at the free throw line.

Team captains Bryan Palmer and Brad Smith led the boys Varsity basketball team to a good season. Their defense excelled and they worked to improve their offense by practicing every day after school.

Two outstanding players were Jason Berkshire, with his slam dunks, and Bryan Palmer, who worked well inside.



BETTER THAN THE RECORD SHOWS

El Cap's Varsity Basketball season finished with a 1st round C.I.F. 7 point loss at Oceanside.

"The entire season was littered by numerous close losses and a last second win over C.I.F. Division I Finalist, Morse High, and a late season double overtime win over Helix," stated Coach Gleboff.

The person who played the best throughout the season was awarded MVP, the most valuable player award. For the 87-88 season was Jason Berkshire, pulling in 1/3 of the team's rebounds and the leading scorer for the Vaqueros.

"Our top defensive player was Bryan Palmer while play making and free throw awards went to Brad Smith. Our most improved award went to Jeremy McGarity, who scored 27 points and led us in defense in the Oceanside loss," stated Coach Gleboff.

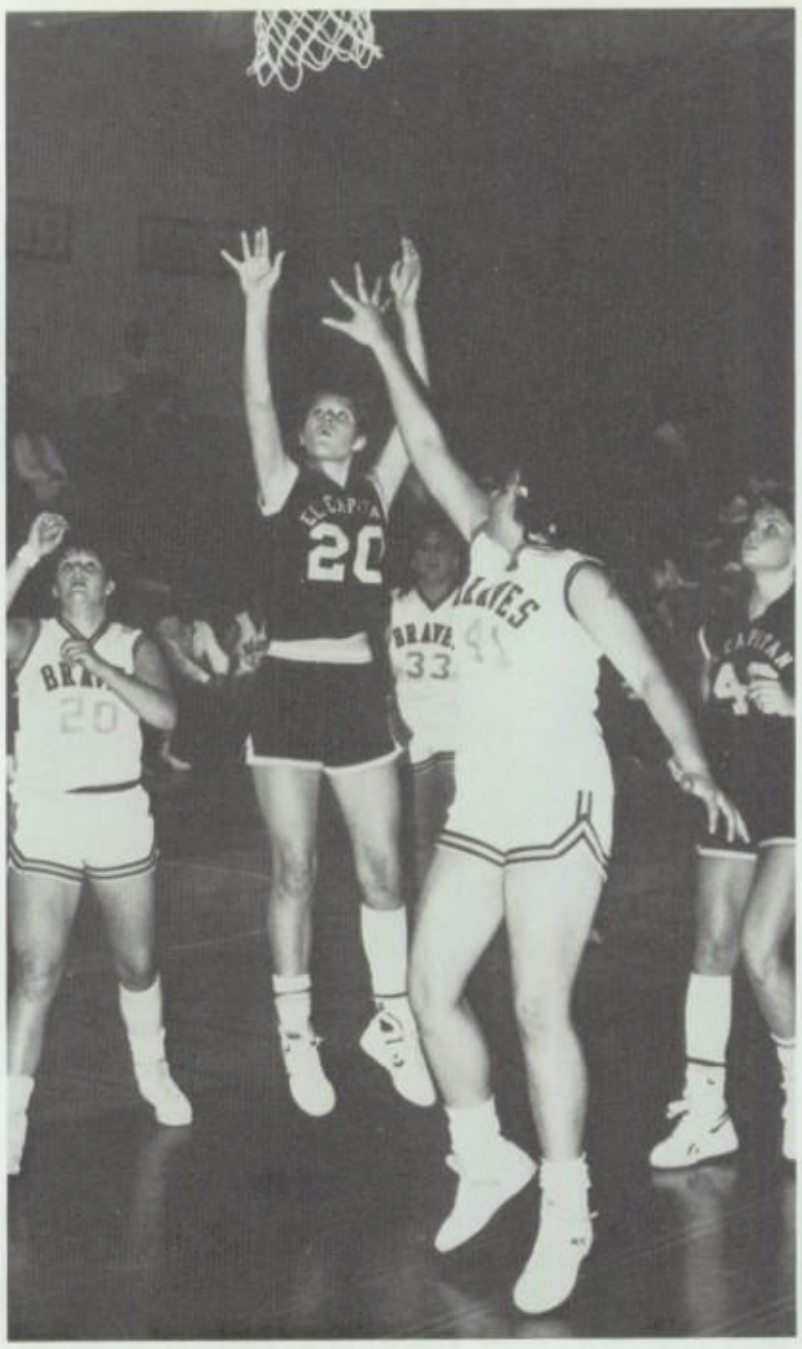
Apollo Kolias commented, "We're a better team than our record shows. We beat the best, but came up short in the end."

With concern to his teammates, Jason Barbeau stated, "The way we stuck together through the hard times of the season was outstanding."

Leading scorer and rebounder for the team, Jason Berkshire, stated, "The outcome of the season was very disappointing, but it was a good learning experience. We would've won more games but our ball handling was terrible."

Strong defensive player Andrea Bravo moves swiftly in to steal the ball from El Cajon, setting up another score for El Cap.

Shooting for a point that could mean the game, Sam Weiser aims, jumps high, shoots, and scores.



To get the game off to a good start, Carmen Stanley jumps high to tip the ball off to Melissa Hadfield, who drives down court for the first basket of the game.

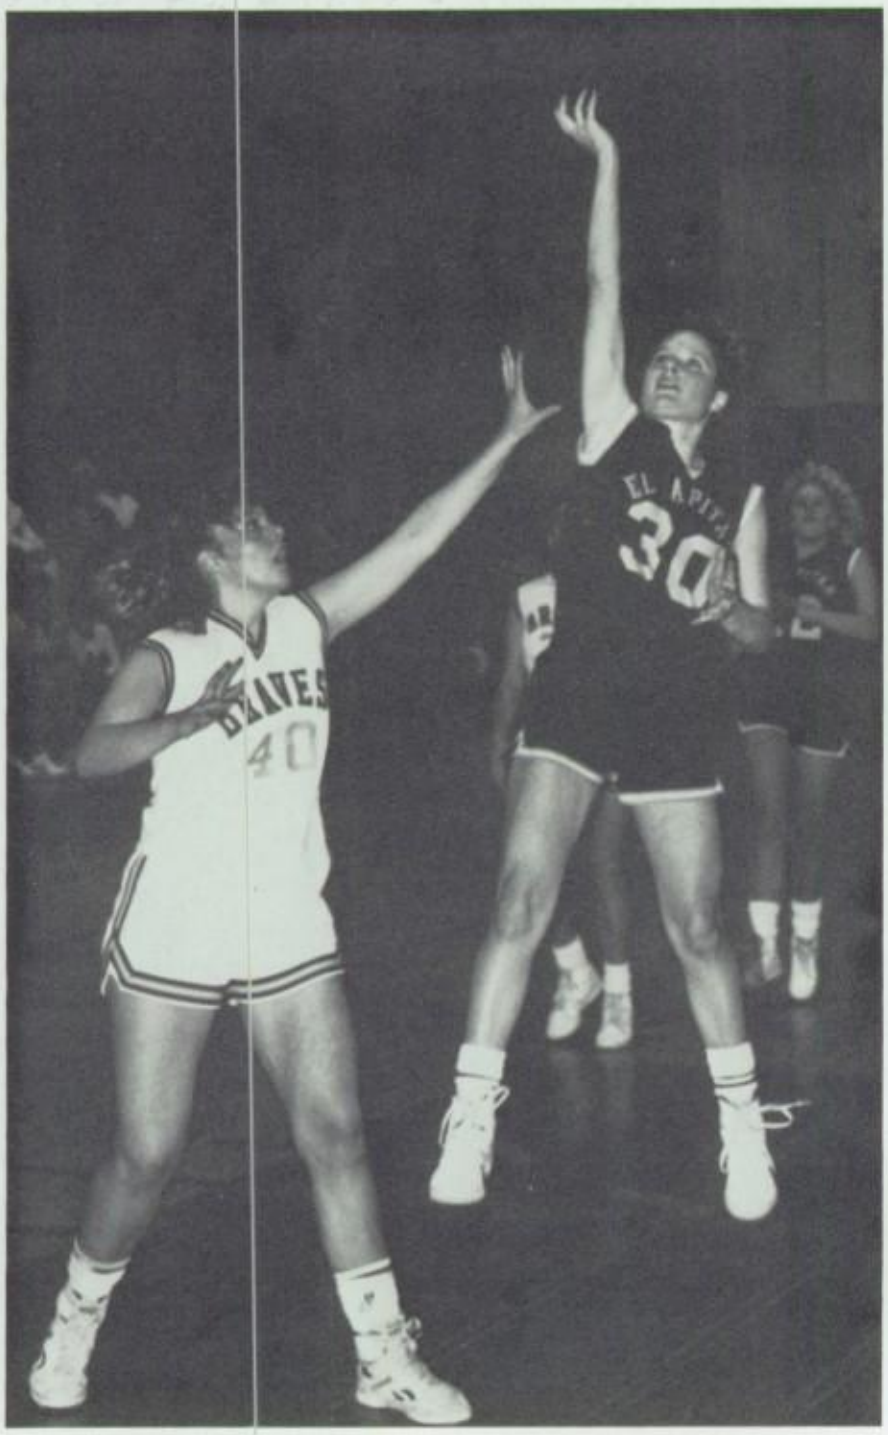
After a rebound from Lorissa Shenefield, Melissa Hadfield drives down court and scores with a smooth lay up.

The Hallmark Of A Year

Hardwork and dedication was the hallmark of the girls varsity basketball team. While other students were usually at home or working, the team was either practicing or supporting the school. Guard and four year player Theresa Darwell stated, "Everyone on the team is fun and I get along with all of them. That's what makes playing on this team so enjoyable."

Games were held on Tuesdays and Fridays. So, in order to play well, the team practiced after school, Monday through Friday as well as Saturdays. At the practice sessions, the team worked on their lay-ups, offense/defense drills, free throws, and running/passing drills.

The dedication and hard work resulted in the team going to CIF. They won their first game 59 to 32 but lost the second 41 to 47. Working together as a team made them winners and that made a hallmark year.



While waiting for the game to begin, Coach Gunion quickly reviews the team's strategies and goals.

Concentrating on making a basket, Theresa Darwell gracefully jumps to score a point that moves the team ahead.

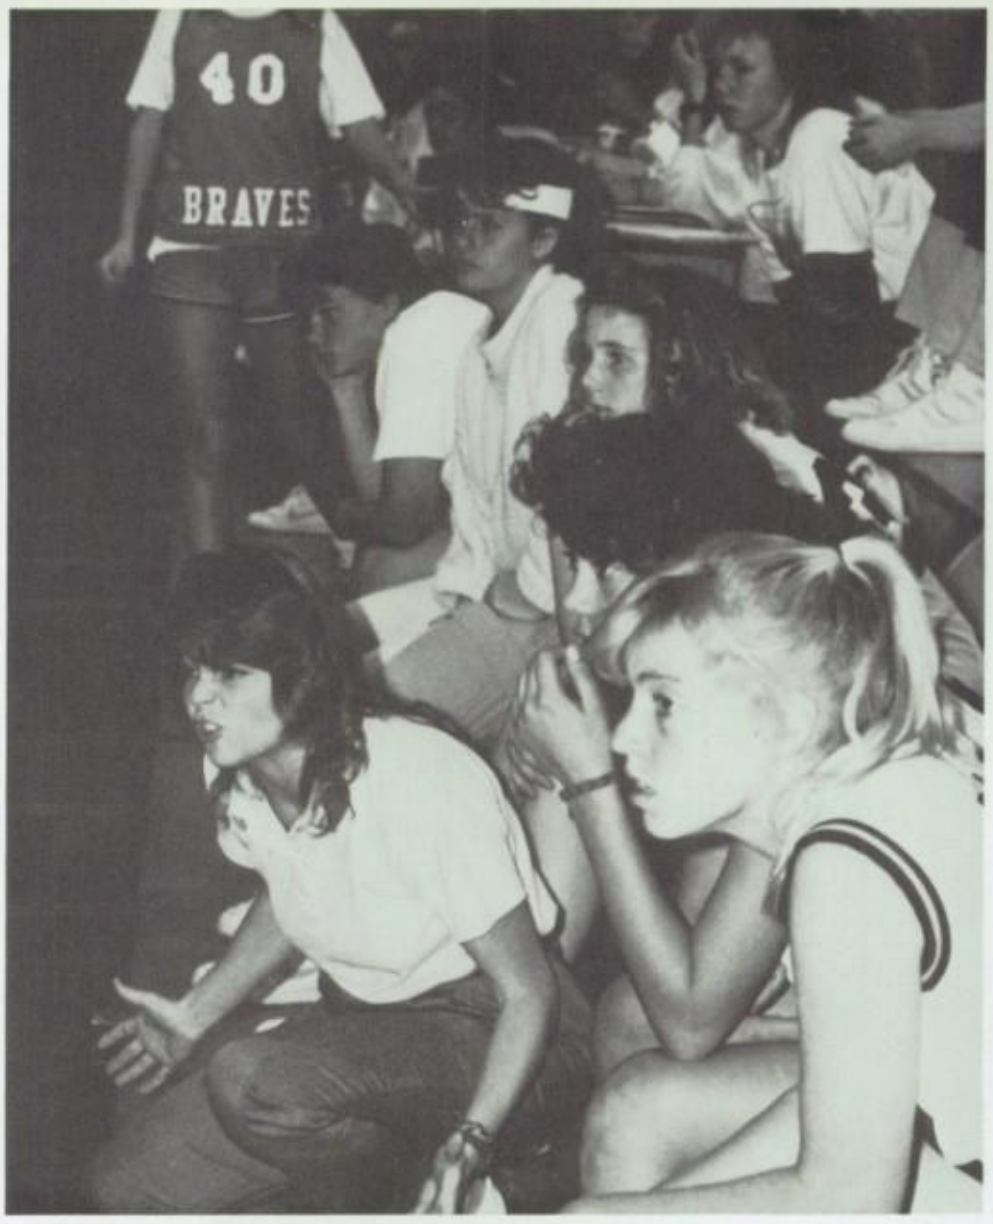
Shooting The Hoop Means More Than Dribbling



"Since I was about six years old, I've wanted to play basketball," Tammy Cruse began.

As a Freshman, Cruse was a first string player for the Junior Varsity squad. She played ball-handler, moving around the court to help where she was needed.

"This year's motto was 'Teamwork'. When you work together and play your best, it keeps an open mind and helps win the game," she said.

"If I have learned one thing playing this year, it was how to dribble with my right hand. Being left-handed, it is hard to dribble with the opposite. Also, while playing basketball, there are many things that you must learn how to do and improve on."

When playing Basketball, many things go through a player's mind. Thoughts about future plans and where the sport might take them.

"My future plans are to make the varsity squad next year. Then after high school, I'd like to play for a college team," she said.

Tragically, Cruse fractured her knee in a game against Helix High. "Two girls hit the knee and I fell to the court. There was no call against Helix, but I was out."

"It still hurts when I play, but I try to do my best. Even though I was injured, I still like to shoot a few baskets. I'm always eager to play."

On the sidelines, Coach Kelly Gilmore shouts the play and encourages the girls to run hard and set up down court.

While Kristie Krivitz blocks the El Cajon Braves, Daena Gonzales passes the ball to Sally Goldate who moved in for two points.

J.V. Ends Season In Third Place

JV Basketball, headed by Jim Hurst, finished the season with a surprising (10-8) record.

To successfully hold a winning record, the JV boys had to attend every day's painful practices. Each practice consisted of line drills, ball handling techniques, and stamina workouts. All of which were to reflect upon their 3rd place record.

The winning attitudes of every player produced big plays and fast breaks. Tony Fornaca was recognized for the "Big Playmaker" of the year, as well as Roy Richards for "Mr. Hustle."

JV player, Andy Berg, comments, "It was very difficult at times, but we had a great season."

ANDREA ATKINS: DESIRES TO BE THE BEST

"I gotta get goggles!" was the first thing Andrea Atkins said after her first day at Heartland Swim practice at the age of 10. "They just threw me in the water and made me swim for two hours straight."

She has practiced almost every day since and it's starting to pay off. As only a Sophomore, Andrea is already considered one of the best distance swimmers in the Grossmont League.

"I really enjoy swimming. It would be hard for me to just stop. It's just so much fun. I think swimming is one of the best sports. You use all the muscles in your body, even the muscles you didn't know you had."

Like most athletes, Andrea has to totally organize her time. She has learned to use swimming to benefit her school studies. "All my Heartland teammates think I'm weird because while stretching out I always have a book in front of me and when swimming I've learned how to go over my assignments in my head."

"It's been tough, but I think it's all worth it. My main goal for this year is to make the top 12 in CIF and with all the work I've put into it, I hope it pays off," said Andrea. "No matter how I do, I always know I'll have someone there for me. My parents have always been really involved, I couldn't have done it without them. Through all the wins and losses they've always stuck by me."

Andrea thinks that you can learn more from your losses than the wins. "They may not always feel that great, but when you lose, it's usually because of mistakes and you can always learn from your mistakes and work harder."

"Going into big meets like CIF, I got to see all the times I was going to have to beat to even qualify. It wasn't realistic, but I knew I had to at least better my own time. I was so nervous because everything is so much more intensified at CIF than at other meets. You don't know what to expect."

You can always expect to see Andrea Atkins swimming her heart out. She has the desire to be the best she can and she tries to get everything out of life as she possibly can.

TEAMWORK MEANS GIVING 110%

If you happen to walk down to the pool on El Capitan's campus, you'll see Thom Lane swimming with his teammates every day after school. He's been swimming since 9th grade along with his brother and the rest of his family.

In order for the team to do well, he says: "Everyone must give 110% for the team to do well." His first race ever, he messed up his backstroke turn and got a relay team disqualified after they had won the race. That was one of his most embarrassing moments and since then has been careful on his turns.

He feels swim is mainly an individual sport but it takes the whole team to win a meet. Coach Legace and Coach Yocom, Thom says are great. They make them work hard but still have fun. They teach them the fundamentals of swimming and how to win. "They've always fully supported everyone on the team, no matter what quality you may be. Hard work and to have fun is what they expect."

Swim limits Thom only in the way that he doesn't have enough time for other things. After workouts he's exhausted and his body feels like jello. He loves the feeling of competition and exhilaration. What he likes best about swimming are the meets because that's where he feels like it's all worth something.

His goal for the year was to make C.I.F. finals individually in the backstroke. In conclusion Thom says: "Swim has influenced me by trying to do my best in so many of the things I do. It made me realize that if I work hard I'll succeed."

SINGING HELPS TO EASE TENSIONS

Bo Bacinett, one of the leading players for El Capitan's golf team, started playing when he was 8 years old. Every Sunday he and his father go to Singing Hills and golf all day. His older brother, Stan Bacinett also golfs at his college in Northern California, and when he comes down to visit, he golfs with Bo and his father.

Bo's favorite aspect about this sport is being with his friends while playing golf. He feels he could use his golf skills later on in his career and said, "Most business deals are done on the golf course."

Since he has been golfing, one of his proudest moments was when he shot a 33, which is above average, and resulted in beating his brother, who is a good golf player.

When it's crucial to sink the putt, he feels a lot of pressure, so he starts to sing to himself. Brian Holifield, his golf partner and a good friend, also helps him out. When he's under pressure, they'll sometimes sing together and usually the opposing team doesn't like that. They feel they have a lazy attitude.

Bo said, "The two people I admire the most are my father and brother for their skills." He likes to travel with the team, especially when they go to Palm Springs and compete against other schools. He loves competition and challenge, and he says he will pursue it further in college and if he's lucky, he'll become the next golf champ.

"FORE!" Calls To Curo

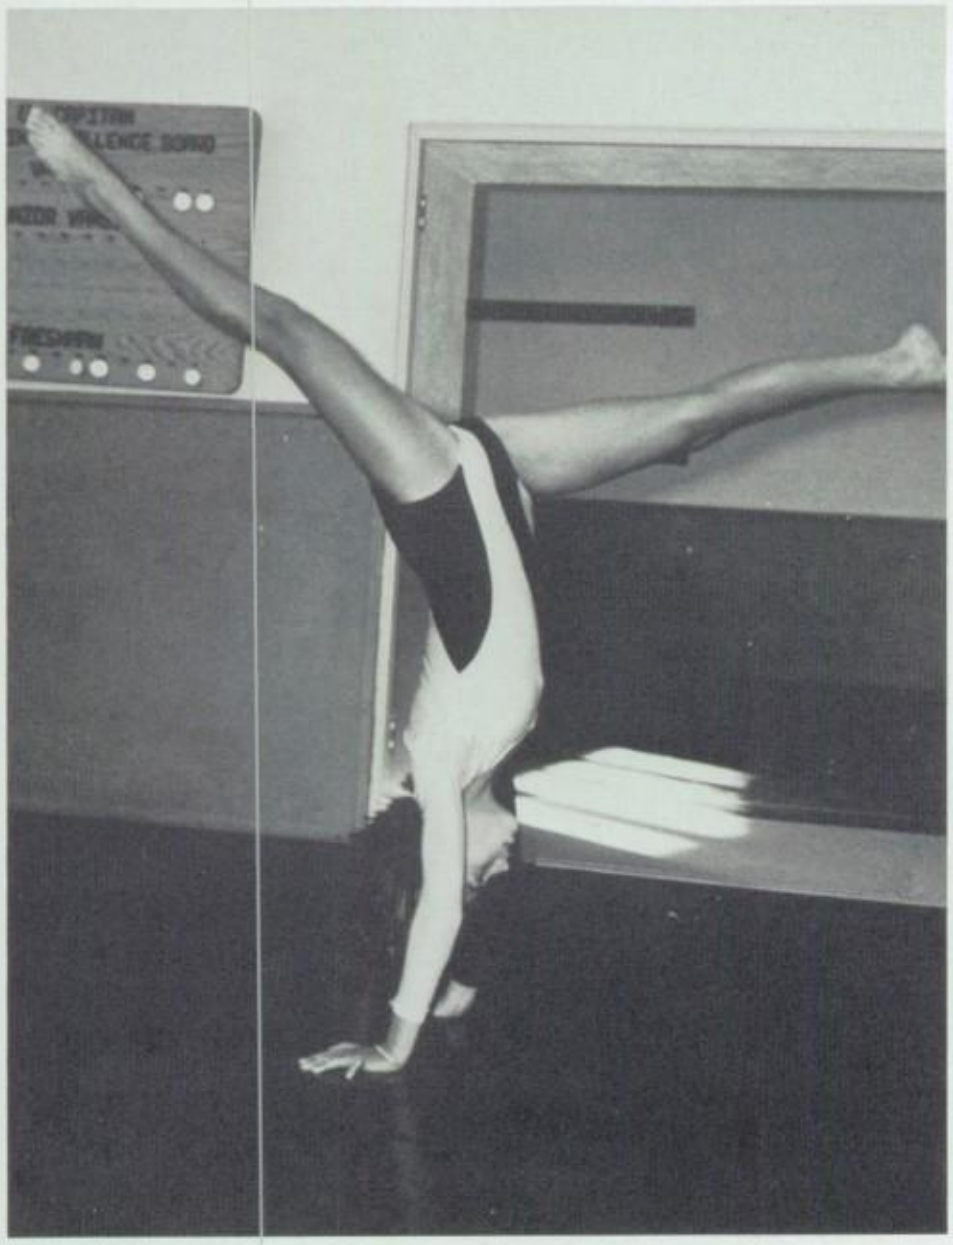
"I really got interested in golf after I saw the movie 'Caddyshack,' stated Clayton Curo. "It's a skillful sport, despite what other people might think. It takes time, effort, and a great deal of concentration. I take some deep breaths before starting. It relaxes me and keeps my head clear."

According to many top golfers, the game is fun, full of excitement, builds concentration, and encourages self-confidence. "Another thing that you experience while playing golf is the different types of holes and courses. Each one is different," said Curo.

"One of my most exciting moments in golf came when I got ten holes in one. My most embarrassing moment was missing the eleventh one," Curo said with a wide grin.

Form is the key ingredient in an exercise as Coach Diane Perkins helps Krista Nystrom improve hers on a front hand spring off the vault.

It's the form of her floor exercise routine that Melissa Hobbs constantly practices on.



HEIDI NYSTROM

NERVOUS, EXCITED, AND VERY SERIOUS

"Most people admire me for my gymnastics ability; that makes me feel confident and reassured," said Heidi Nystrom, Optional gymnast.

Heidi first got started in gymnastics when she was 6 years old, by watching other girls compete. She now practices 6 days a week at school and twice a week at a gym called USA, where she gets one on one coaching. She practices a total of 22 hours a week.

Heidi doesn't have one specific gymnastic hero, "They're all heros and if I could be like any one of them, I would be happy." She stated that the best thing about gymnastics "is that it gives me coordination, courage, balance and it keeps me in shape." Her favorite event is the floor exercise because of the music, excitement, and the challenge.

In the moments just before a meet she admits, "I'm a nervous wreck! I'm nervous, anxious, excited and very serious." She loves to compete in meets explaining that, "Without competition, I'd have nothing to look forward to."

Practicing the cast on the uneven bars, Heidi Nystrom prepares for the next move.

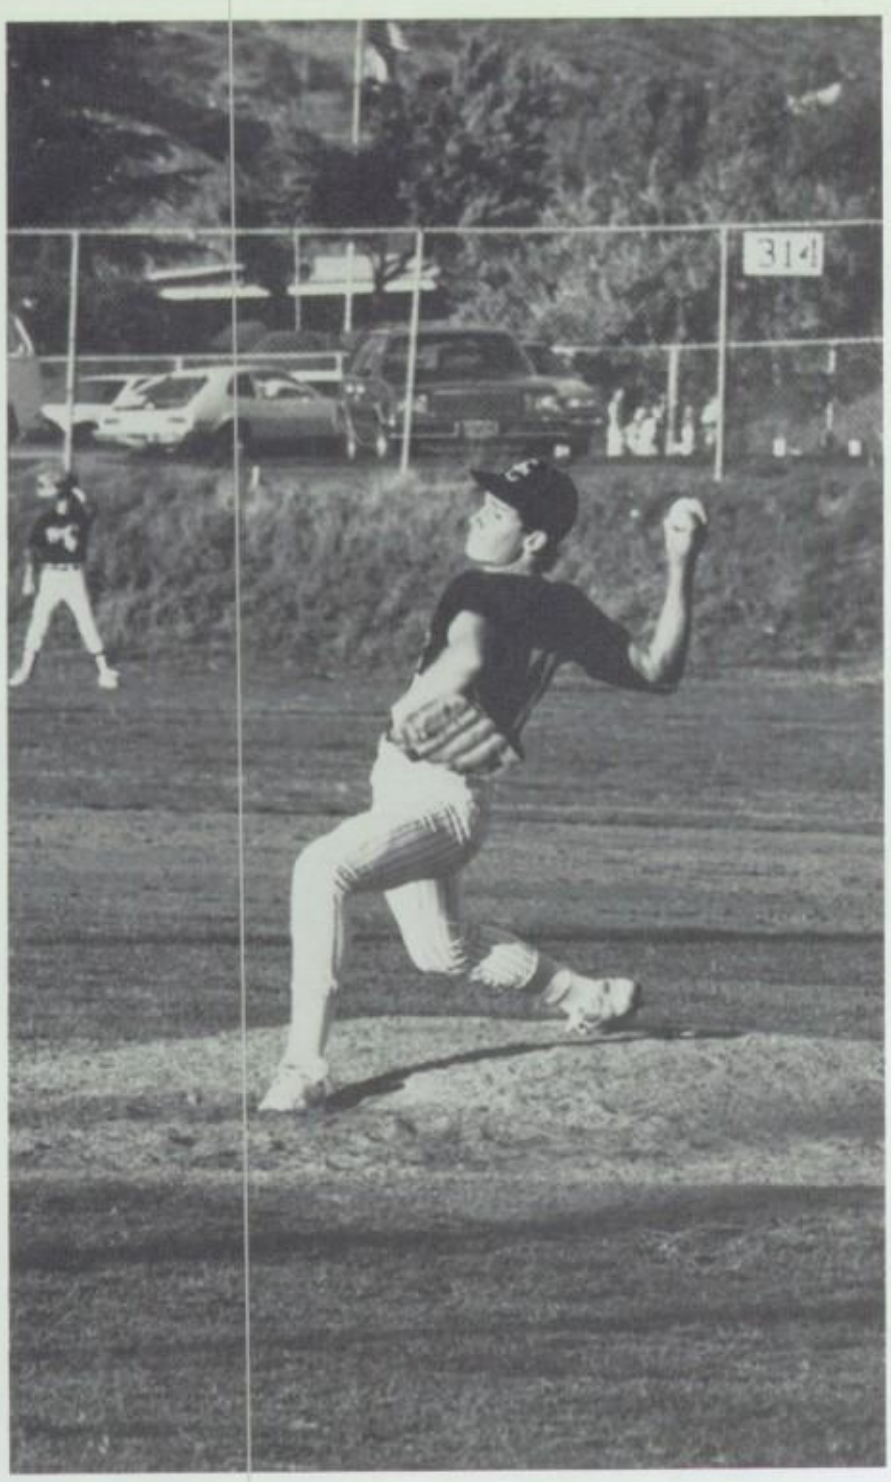
As catcher, Matt Smith calls the pitches to thwart the batter from getting on base.



BASEBALL TEACHES MORE THAN ATHLETIC SKILLS

"Baseball has taught me discipline and how to work with people," stated player Carlos Gutierrez.

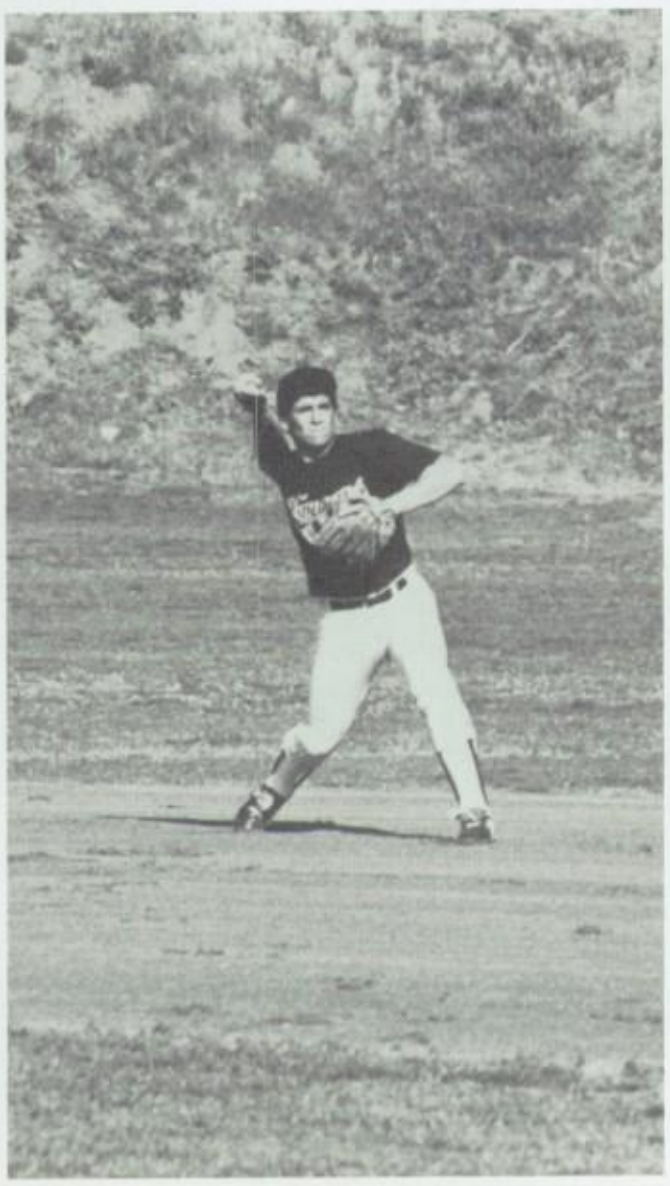
"Learning is a big part of playing sports; you may lose a game or two in the process, but it's worth it in the long run."

Carlos learned to play at the age of nine, when his mother signed him up for caps. "My parents initially signed me up, and they have been super supportive ever since." Carlos says that parental support is important to athletes. "It's good to have someone back you up even if you aren't the best player."

According to Carlos, competition plays a major role in sports. "When competing you need to keep up communication with your team members, so you can work together."

His most embarrassing moment was during a game against Montgomery High School. "Mr. Vickory told me to swing for the fence, and I unfortunately didn't," stated Carlos.

He says that baseball has helped him keep up a positive attitude and help bring his team towards victory.



Relief pitcher Dan Freeman rears back and stretches to throw a perfect fast ball past the batter.

Playing third base, Robert Guerrero fields a grounder and makes the throw for the out at first.

At second base, Jason Escoto fields the ball, checks to hold the runner on third, throws to first for the out and saves a run.

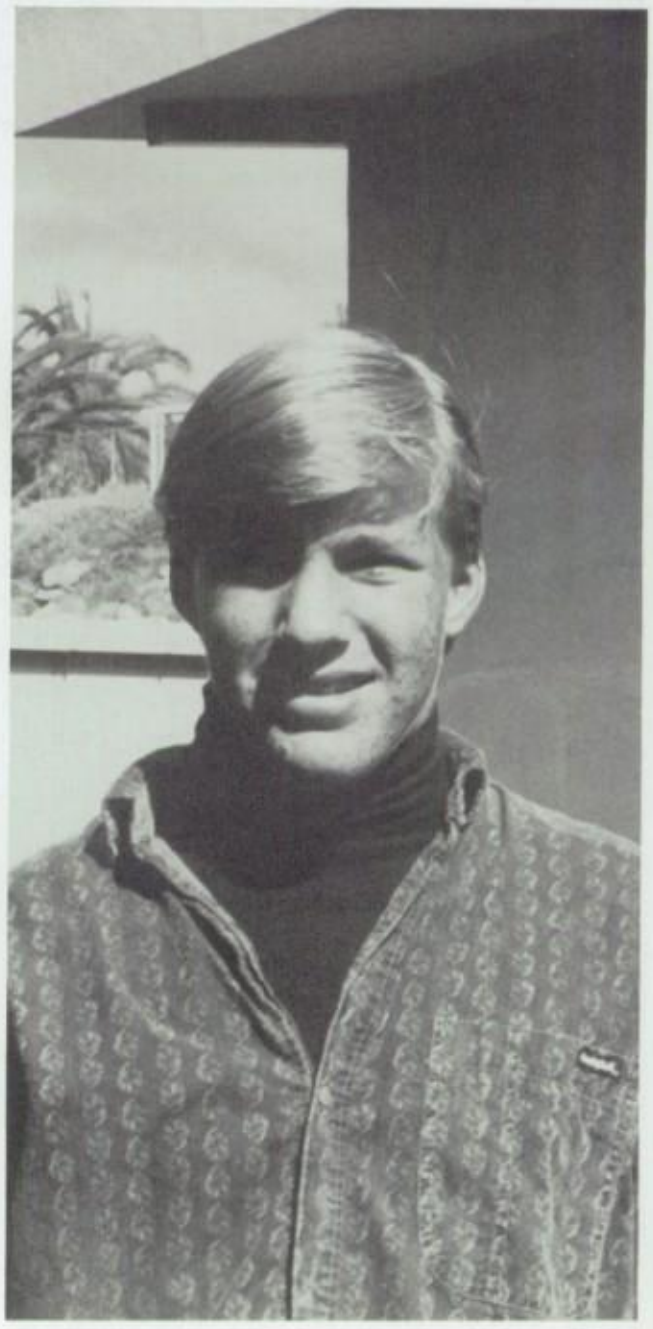
BASEBALL HELPS BUILD CHARACTER

"I've played baseball for 5 years and by watching my brothers it has encouraged me to play harder," said Chris Salewske.

Playing baseball can be pretty stressful sometimes but by working hard with his teammates and coach, he has discovered the keys to winning in the game. "By having Mr. Unden as a coach, it's easy for me to believe in him because he has played and taught me teamwork and responsibility," said Chris.

During baseball there were many fun and embarrassing experiences. For example, Chris slid into second base during Pony league and his pants nearly fell off.

"When the team is down, but I am doing well, I just tell them to shake it off. Playing baseball helps me build character and it gives me a rush."



Working Hard To Be The Best

"To work as hard as possible is one of my objectives in softball," said Daena Gonzales. "Goals are an important aspect in playing it. Setting these goals can also give you a better attitude about yourself and the team. We as a team need to have a good attitude to work together as one."

Playing since the sixth grade, Gonzales feels that offensively and defensively, teamwork in softball is crucial.

"In playing both the short stop and pitcher positions, I enjoy having support from my Mom and my friends. Watching my Mom play softball has really helped me in many ways. She has also taught me different techniques and skills that have helped me to improve as I play.

"Playing softball takes great amounts of skill and coordination," she added. "Telling yourself to have a positive attitude about them will help you succeed in playing."

Pointing out the finer techniques of pitching, Coach Landa Harris lobs a few practice pitches.

For Carmen Stanley

Softball Comes First

Softball became part of Carmen Stanley's life at age eight when one of her friends got her into it. Today Carmen plays on the Varsity Softball team, and her favorite aspects of softball are that it teaches sportsmanship, keeps the body in shape, and offers an opportunity to travel.

Carmen describes the games, "Teamwork is the most important part of the games. You have to play always as a team. Everybody has to come out ready to play, give a hundred percent and encourage everybody. I personally prepare for the games by thinking positively, and I imagine myself playing well and seeing the best thing to do in different situations. I think the team learns more from losses than wins because then everybody can work on the mistake."

At the end of the semester, the Varsity softball team had an opportunity to show all the skills they had learned and what they had worked for when they played in CIF. Carmen said, "To go to play in CIF was the most exciting moment for me. Even though we lost, everybody tried hard."

Carmen says her coaches are good and have helped her. She has learned from them and they have encouraged her. She has also had supportive parents and friends. In fact, in the future, Carmen wants to major in physical education, maybe come back and coach. Softball gives Carmen the skills she needs to make this dream come true and hopes to get a sport scholarship. Carmen doesn't think softball gives her any limits. With her, softball always comes first.

After catching the ball, Andrea Bravo begins to hurl the ball to first base.

While preparing for an outfield fly ball, Carmen Stanley coaches Melissa Hadfield to go for the run.

Freshman Varsity pitcher Tracey Andrews throws a curve for strike three.

Waiting for the ball to be hit, Andrea Bravo prepares to tag Jennifer Agostino for the intended cut.

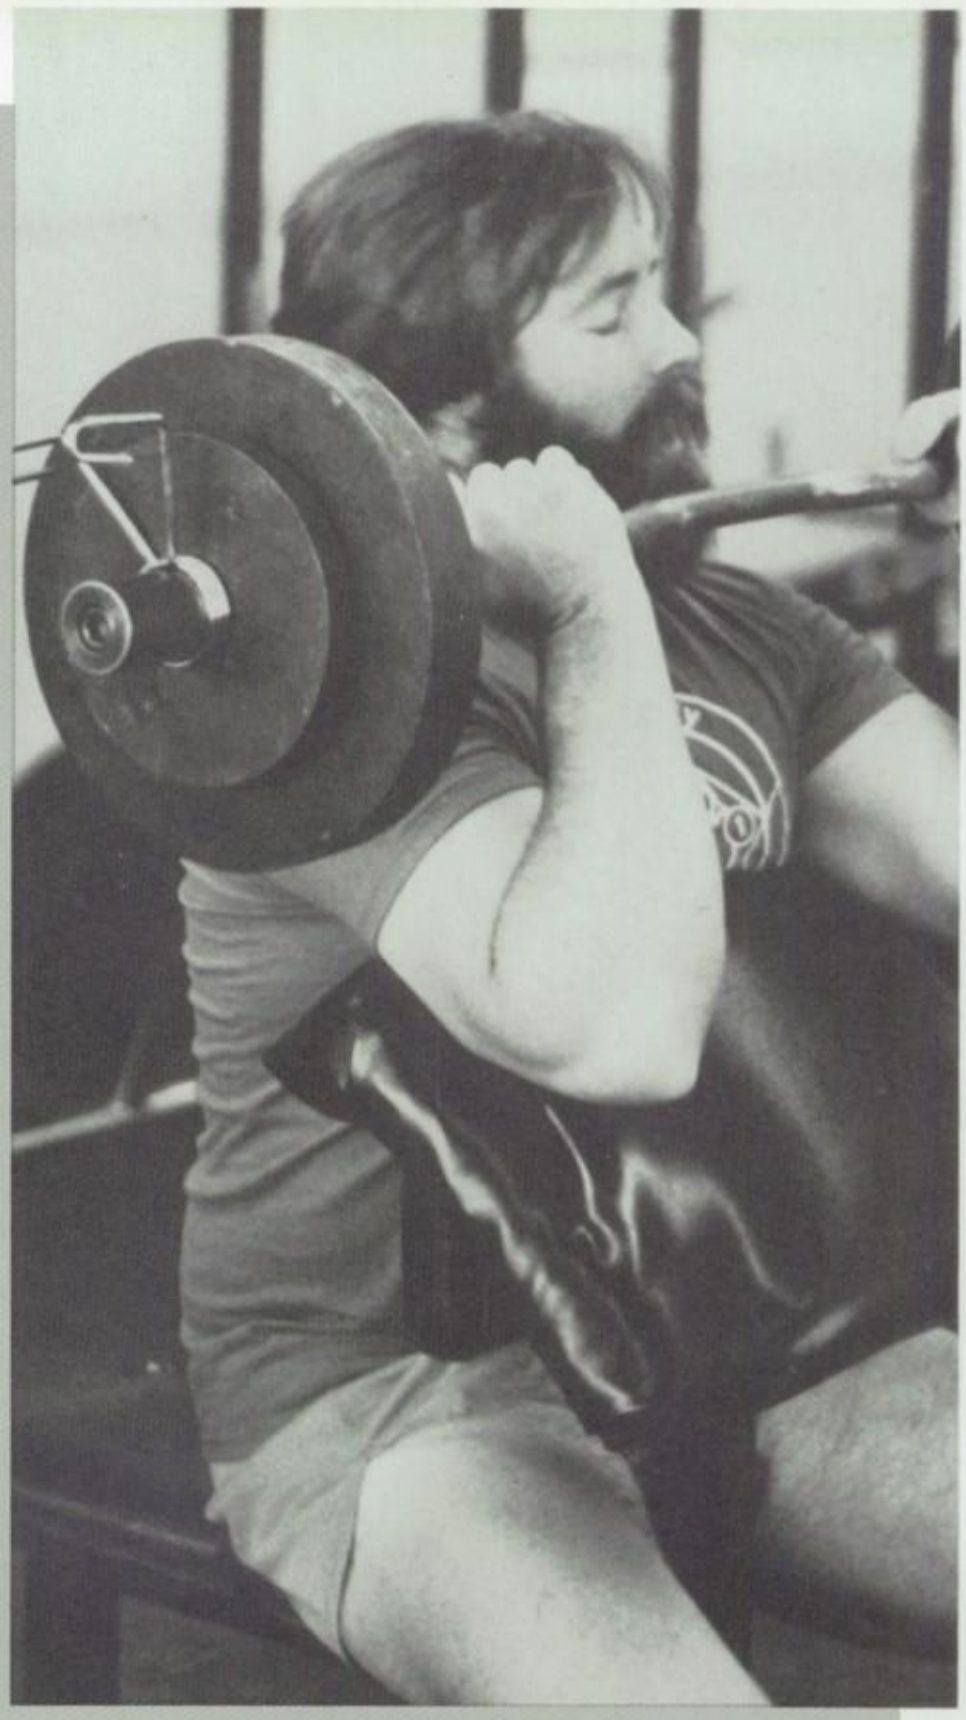
Barbell Club: To compete or workout

When a person decides to start working out, they must be sure they are ready for hard work, and have the will power and dedication needed to keep it up.

The barbell club gives students the chance to do all of this. They could have competed in the months of April through early June, but not everyone had to compete, but were encouraged if the potential was there. In the meets, there were two required lifts: the dead lift, which is a lift where the weight sits on the ground and then has to be picked up, with no hesitation, and then has to be held for at least three seconds with the shoulders shrugged back. The bench press, you may have a spotter to pick the weight off the rack, but then the contestant must bench the weight with one continuous motion upward. The contestant may not move their feet and may have a minimal bridge in their back.

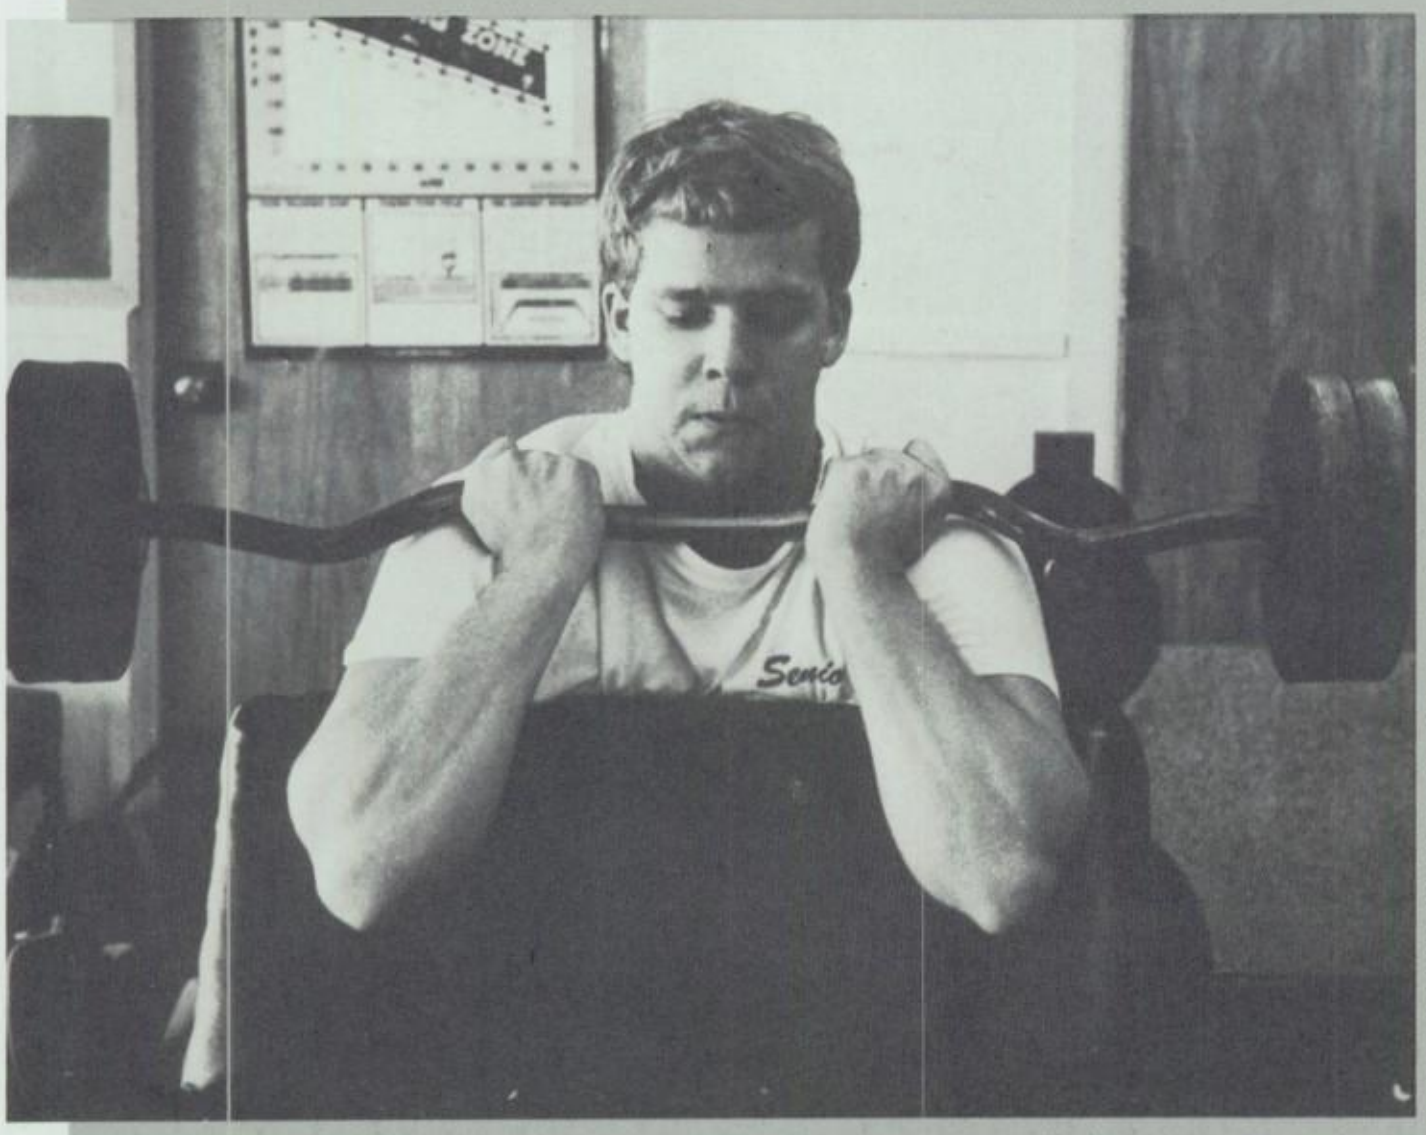
Our school competed against many schools in San Diego, and has won first at the Greater San Diego County Powerlifting Meet and second at Torey Pines last year. This year El Cap hosted one of the meets sponsored by the Lakeside Optimists in late April.

After school many of these young men and women were hard at work like Tom Cabell, Travis Reed, Jason Barney, Susie Wilkes and Tanya Romero, along with Coach Waasted and Coach O'Malley who were there to help the team.



Working shoulders Tom Cabell chooses upright rows, to build bigger neck muscles!

Before the Barbell Club comes in the weight room, Coach Waasted squeezes in a few sets.



Before his workout Chris Tockstein warms up with a set of curls.

Working up to his max, Travis Reed benches 245 lbs.

TRYING TO MAKE CLASS

Most students left the school in relief; it was Wednesday and their finals were finished. Some however, were headed for the wrestling room and another day of strict labor and sweat in the attempt to lose 4, 5, or maybe even 6 pounds to make a weight class.

For 3 months this was an everyday happening in the life of a good wrestler, "not fun but essential," stated junior and fourth place finisher at league Davin Lawler.

This year the team started out super, as varsity jumped out to a 4-0-1 record while j.v. was boasting a 5-0.

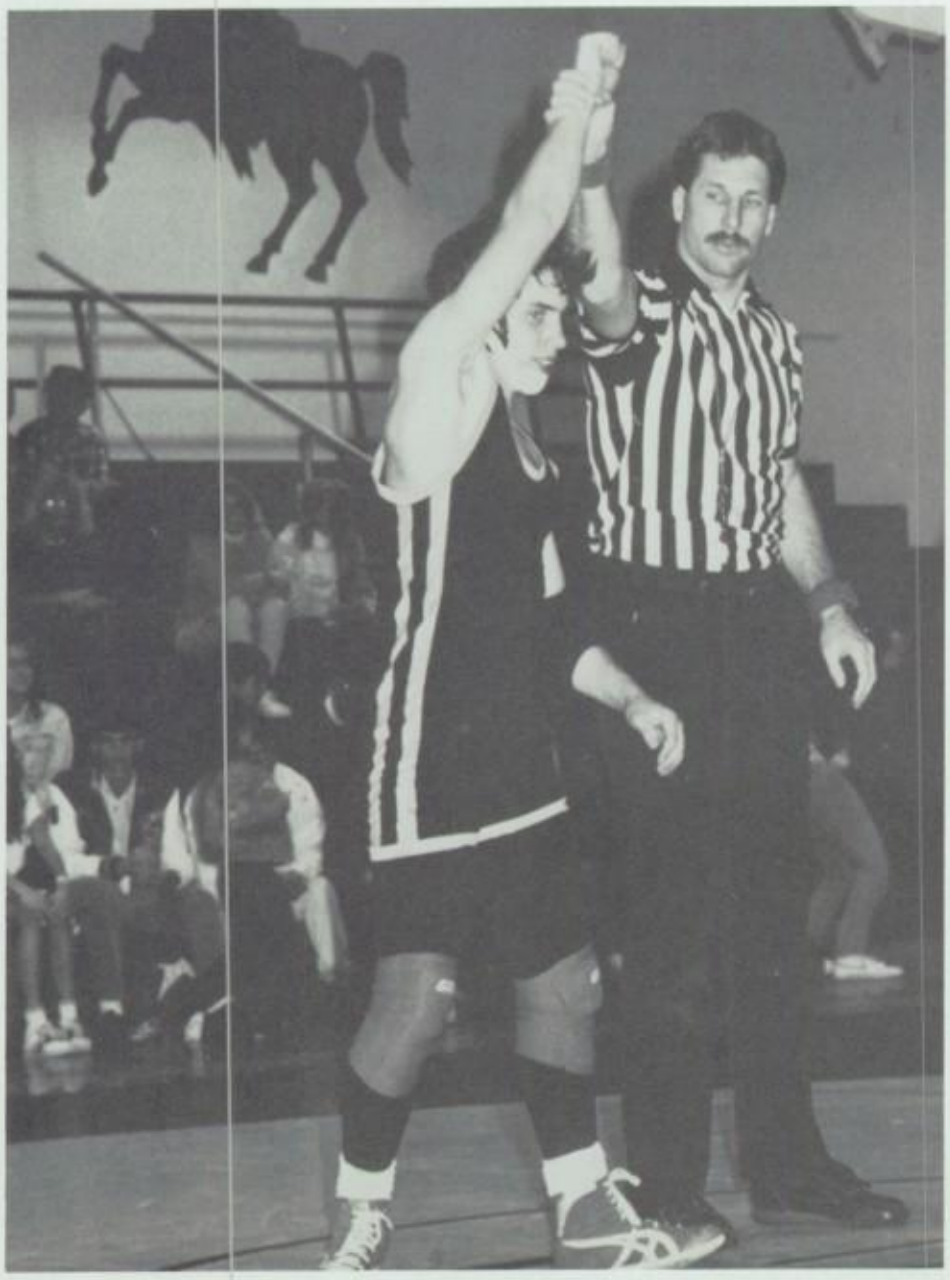
"Considering we started with 60 people and ended up with 24, I think we had a great season," said j.v. standout Prentice Teo. Teo, along with two other j.v. wrestlers, Greg Gutierrez and Sid Melero, got varsity letters and lead their team to fifth in the league.

While on the other side of the coin, varsity team captain Tung Thai was leading his team to second in league, and senior Carlos Gutierrez was on route to qualifying for masters. "I think our strength was in our young wrestlers, such as juniors Mike Boehm, Davin Lawler, and Travis Reed," stated Coach Cooper.

"Everybody gave their best and we got something accomplished, it was a great feeling," added junior Mike Boehm.

Driving through his opponent, Davin Lawler tries to capitalize on an exposed back.

Working for a pin, Tung Tai shoots for a half-nelson.



After another pin against El Cajon, Mike Boehm has his arm raised in victory.

Straining for a pin, Sid Melero applies the pressure.

Wrestling Team Places 6th at CIF

The wrestling team wrestled extremely well in the 3A C.I.F. San Diego Section Wrestling Championships at Mira Mesa High by placing in the top ten ranking sixth.

They ended with a final score of 99 points. Behind them was Vista (93½ points), Mt. Miguel (80½ points), and Morse (76 points). In front was Granite Hills (115 points), San Dieguito (122 points), Mt. Carmel (137 points), and 3A Section Champ Poway (250 points).

Two wrestlers came out on top by placing first in their respective weight groups. Travis Reed won his 194 pound weight group by defeating Dan Stehly of Orange Glen by decision. The Junior has won two straight first place finishes, with the last coming from Grossmont League Finals. "I'm excited about taking C.I.F. because I didn't think I was going to get this far."

Carlos Guitterez avenged his League Championship loss by placing first in his 168 pound weight class. He beat Al Martell of Mt. Carmel by default. Tung Thai finished second in his 108 pound weight category losing to Poway's Shane Roselle by decision. "I'll admit he's a good wrestler, but next time I wrestle him, I'm going to give him a better match," said Thai.

Davin Lawler placed fifth and Manuel Hernandez sixth in their weight groups. Lawler wrestled in the 148 pound category winning over Orange Glen's Dan Fluegge. Hernandez wrestled in the 115 pound weight class loosing to Mike Abernathy of Monte Vista.

Each wrestler is eligible to go into the Masters Tournament for placing in the top six at C.I.F. If one of the wrestlers finishes in the top four in the Masters, he automatically qualifies for the State Meet at Stockton. Despite all the heavy competition and unyielding adversity suffered in the Masters Tournament, one of the five top wrestlers placed in the top four earning him a trip to the State Meet.

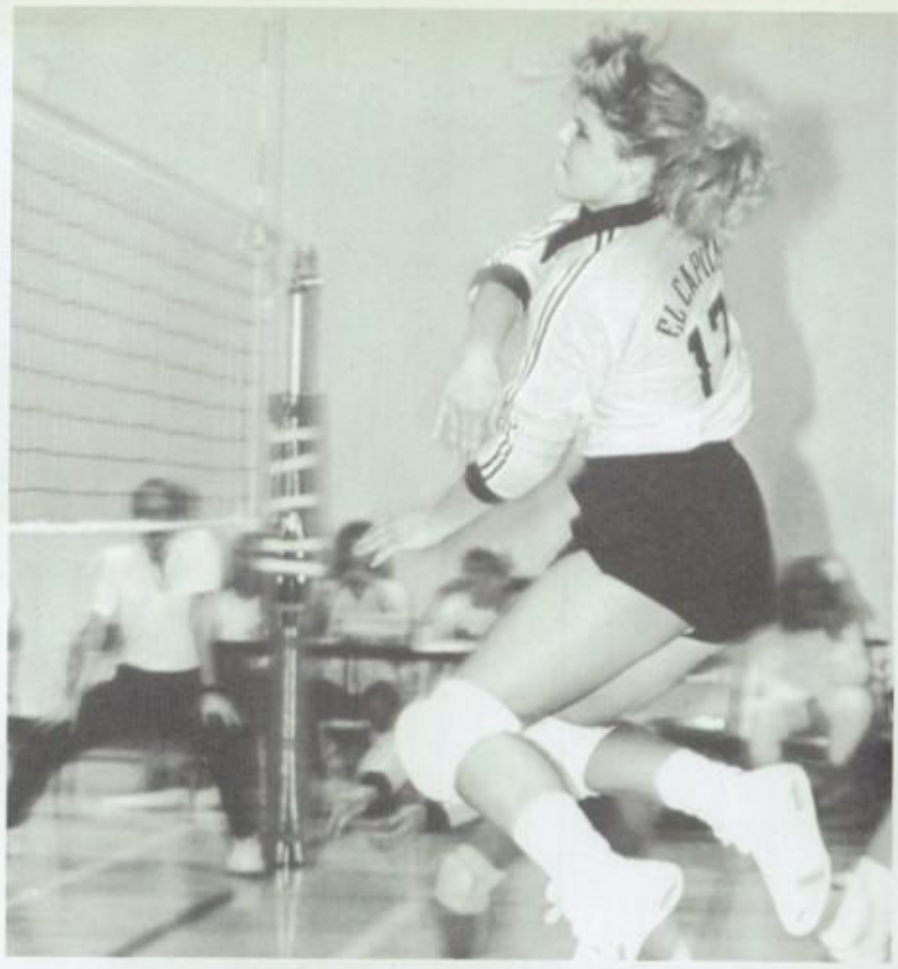
Senior Tung Thai defeated Tony Masting of Holtville in his 108 pound weight class taking third place. Thai is on his way to his second straight State Meet in two years, an accomplishment he says is well worth remembering. "Going to State feels better than last year because I was scared. This year is like a second chance and I should be better because I know what to expect," said Thai.

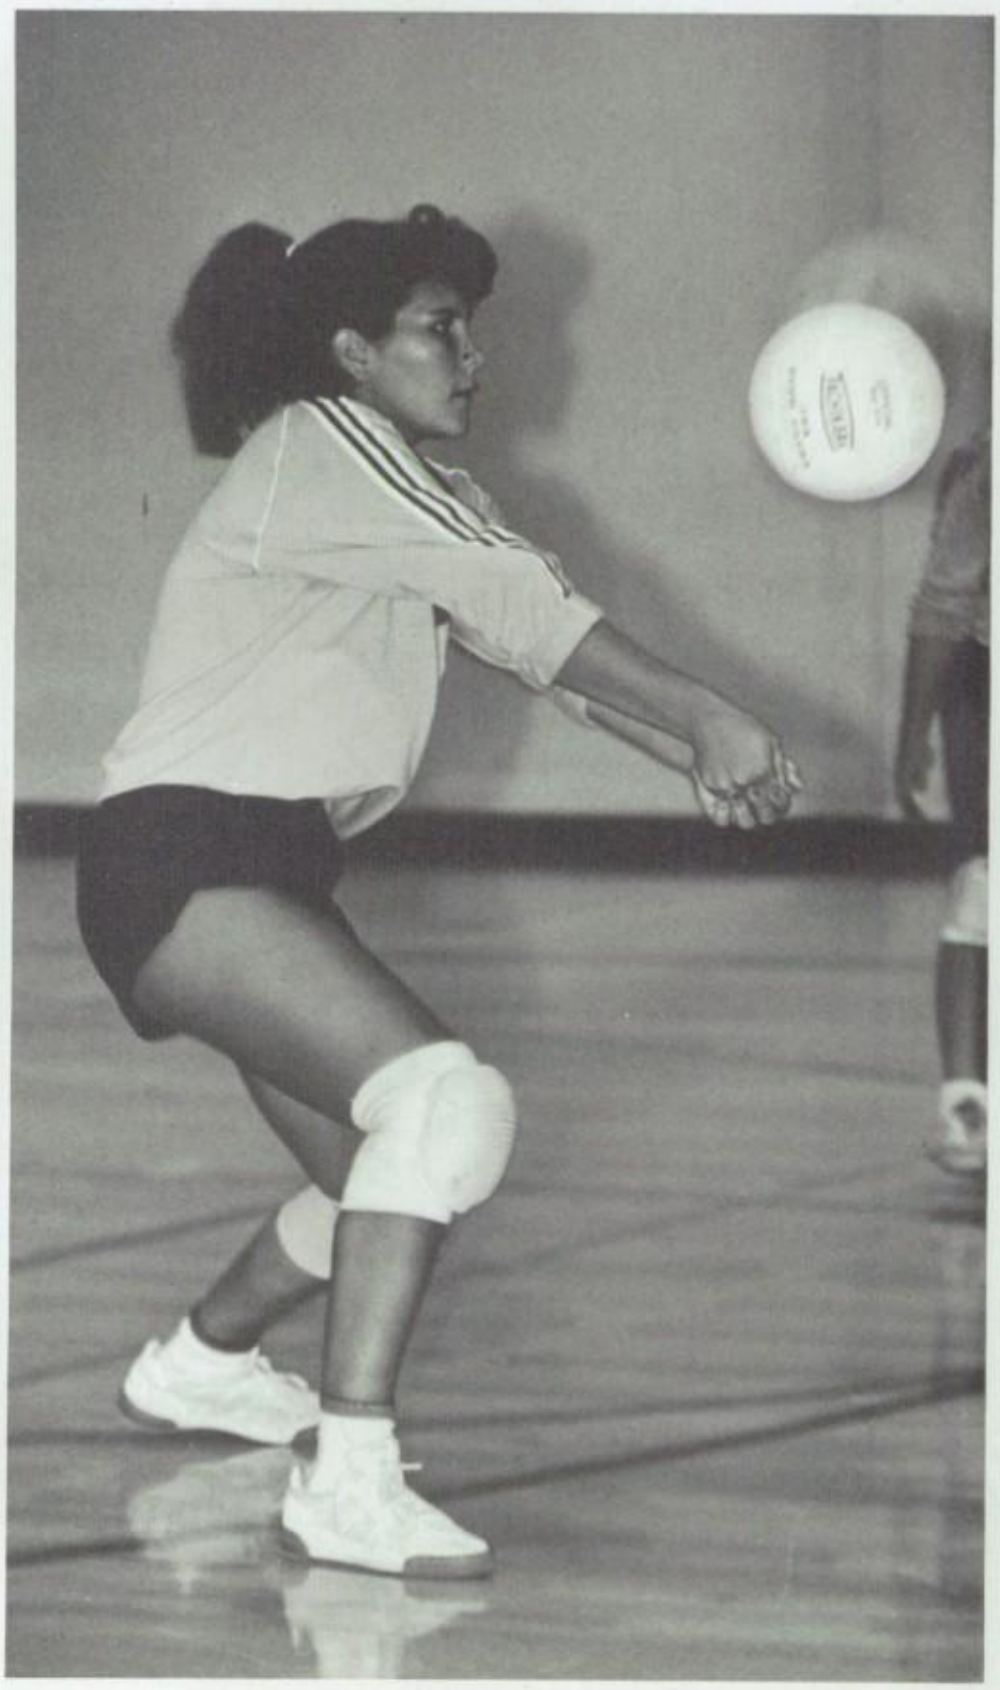
Thai didn't wrestle his way to the State Meet by himself. "I've got to thank the guys and Coach Cooper for putting me where I am now," Thai said. "When they cheer me on, I feel I shouldn't let them down. I wouldn't be 29-5 without them."

Carlos Guitterez suffered an ankle injury in the first round of the Masters Tournament. The injury made him helpless in wrestling the other competitors in his weight class so he was forced to drop out. Hopes of a second trip to the State Meet disappeared because of it.

The 3A C.I.F. Champ of the 194 pound category, Travis Reed was unable to wrestle because he had contracted bronchitis before the meet. His quest for his first State Meet was turned away.

Unlike Guitterez and Reed, Manuel Hernandez and Davin Lawler competed in the tournament. Both wrestlers lost twice and were eliminated as a result.



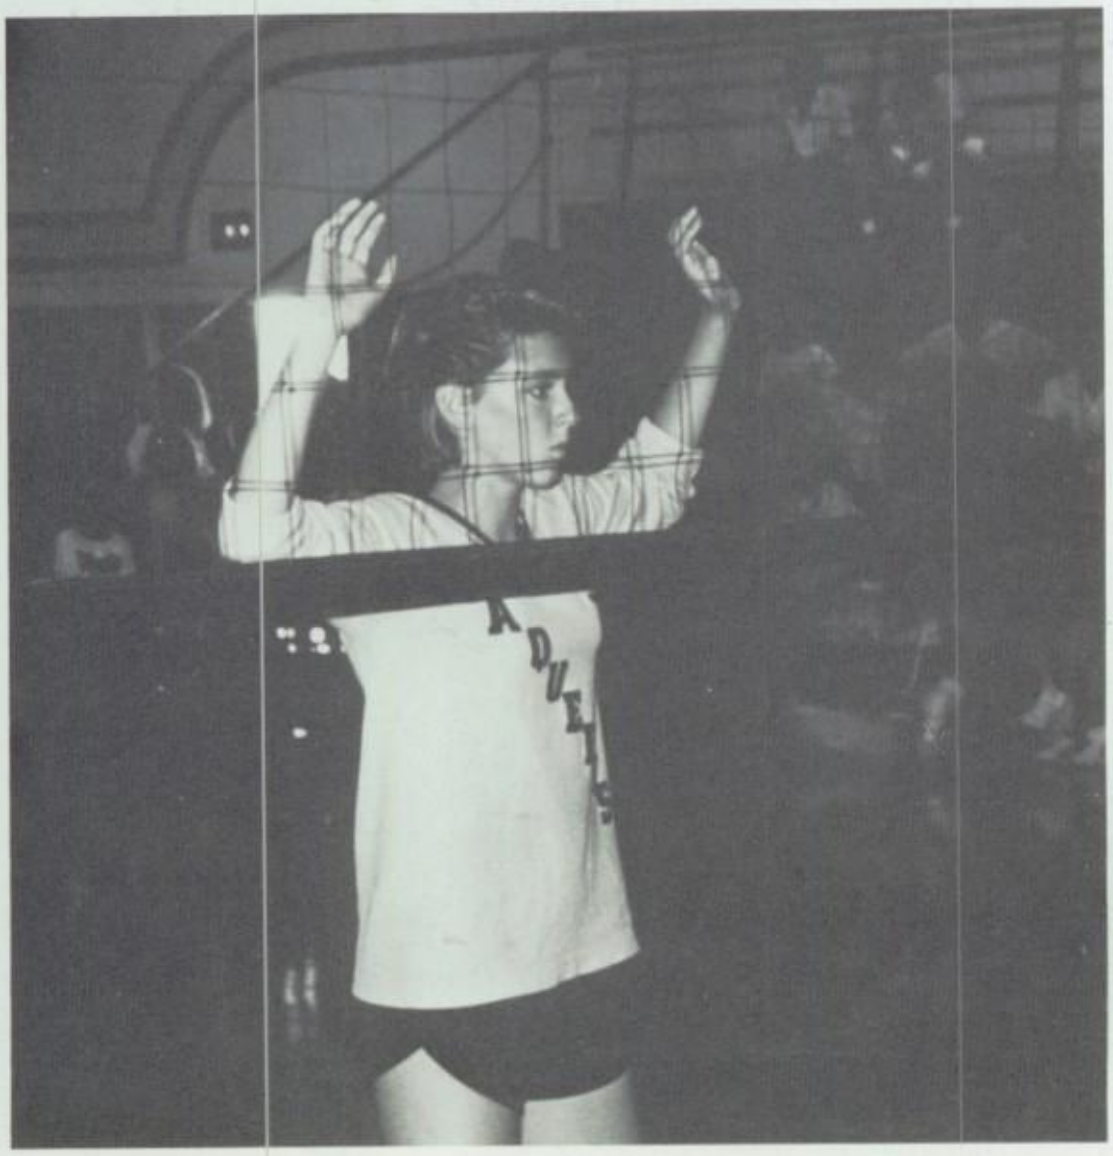


Lunging towards the net, Danielle (Dinger) Gerdes reaches foreward to return a spiked ball.

With great strength and agility, Sophomore Melissa Hadfield spikes the ball for one point and retains the serve.

VARSITY VOLLEYBALL TEAM: Coach Dana, Liza Tumang, Lin Files, Tiffany Artzer, Shannon Schram, Andrea Bravo, Stephanie Smith, Lucy Jones, Tammy Truckenberg Sitting: Melissa Hadfield, Danielle (Dinger) Gerdes, Nora Burson.

Anticipating the ball's every move, Junior Andrea Bravo sets up to return the ball for a point.



INDIVIDUAL ATTITUDES CONTRIBUTE TO WINS

Winning and losing wasn't everything for both the Junior Varsity and Varsity girls' Volleyball teams. It took a lot of teamwork and hard practice to come together as a unit. Volleyball isn't all about hitting the ball back and forth over the net; it's strategy and teamwork blended together. One of the main factors contributing to the wins was the attitudes, effort, and determination of each individual team member.

The Junior Varsity team practiced hard weekly never getting down on themselves. Working together as a team and getting everyone to participate was also a helpful tactic throughout the season.

Varsity player, Junior Lin Files stated, "We had a good working team, everyone contributed to the wins, and everyone came together on the losses. Contributing to the wins was the ability to play together, and most importantly everyone had to believe in themselves. Knowing we could overcome any task if we tried and fought hard to win."

Junior Varsity member Jennifer Smith stated, "We had a really fun season all together, we could have done better I feel if we had worked harder at practice and took them more seriously."

In all, both the J.V. and Varsity had a successful season. "The wins and losses really didn't matter all that much, the thing that really mattered was that we had a chance, a learning experience to go out and compete for our school," stated Kristina Southward.

With minutes left in the game Coach Seabloom calls a time out to go over some last minute strategy.

J.V. VOLLEYBALL TEAM: Standing: Coach Seabloom, Jennifer Brady, Kristina Southward, Sam Weiser, April Files, Laura Lowery, Kristie Krivitz, Carey Tinsley, Melissa Manire, Hilary and Heather McLaughlin; Sitting: Kim Howatt, Stacy Blackman, and Jennifer Smith.

With eyes set on the opposing server, freshman Carey Tinsley waits patiently for the spinning ball which resulted in a blocked point.

In a practice match, Jay Done successfully returns the serve as his partner Ron Hodges looks on.

Racing to return the serve, Jason Barbeau drives across the court.

Captain: Tung Thai

Dedication Pays Off In Many Ways

"Tennis is a sport in which you can work your way upwards. In playing it, you can never be the best, but you can always improve," stated Senior Tung Thai. He started playing in the seventh grade and has worked upwards into the Varsity team.

Both Varsity and Junior Varsity teams practiced and prepared daily, except when they had a match. Thai prepared for his matches by listening to slow music. "I listened to things like Every Breath You Take to help me focus my mind on tennis and concentrate only on it.

"What kind of reward do you get after practicing all those long hours?" He paused for a moment to think. "Hmmmm, well if you're good enough, you win. The best thing about winning a tennis match is that you realize all of the work you've put in has paid off. You deserve it!" he added.

Tennis is a time consuming sport and success takes tremendous effort. "It's fun time for me," Thai said. "It gives me something to do after school and keeps me working upwards."

The Golden Gate Bridge in San Francisco celebrated its 50th birthday. About 250,000 people jammed onto the bridge for an anniversary walk across the span. Another 500,000 packed the bridge approaches but were denied access because the engineers feared the span could not support the weight.

The Dow Jones industrial stock average dropped 508 points, the largest in history, on Monday, October 19. Some called it a "crash", others called it a "meltdown" and others called it "Black Monday". Whatever it was, it stripped $500 billion from the market value of U.S. securities.

Television evangelists Jim and Tammy Faye Bakker said farewell to the PTL ministry in March. Jim Bakker resigned after confessing to a sexual encounter with a young woman, Ta[illegible] bowed out of the [illegible]ergo treatment for [illegible]. In February, Jim[illegible] also required to [illegible]misconduct.

Two inventive students stressed spirit week as "spirits".

Special friends, Chris Hainlin and Maile Kahananui snuggle in delight to simply share the joy of the day.

Spring class competitions on the quad at lunchtime exacted peals of laughter from both participants and spectators.

At the Mardi Gras, Missy Blanchard set up serve the French pastries.

Alea,
You've been a delightful person to have in class. My best wishes go with you always.

Character Education Curriculum Underscores

"Traits of Excellence"

The district launched an all school campaign to emphasize ten specific traits ranging from self-esteem to responsibility.

In a time when newspaper headlines tout scandal, murder and deceit, and even powerful TV ministries of the P.T.L. and Jimmy Swaggert reveal dishonorable and dishonest conduct, it shakes the basic value systems to consciousness.

Television commercials chant "Say No to Drugs", yet the sports and rock heros fall prey and from favor with their fans.

The community and district had a chance to observe character in action in various ways. Students demonstrated individually and collectively their commitment to traits of excellence in the classroom and on the playing fields as well as in their jobs.

Throughout the year, careful attention was paid to each trait to underscore their importance to students. Were they effective? Did they get the message across? It certainly would seem so.

Alea-

Look How short my hair use to be

Alex,

It was fun in dance especially the sexually stimulating discussions we had. Don't forget the "red wagon full of goodies" before you have sex! Take you next year in another class or two. This dance.

Bye.

Although you had a little Existential time confusion, you have a plethora of charm. Therefore, I expect you to go far. Never forget Freud's recommendation: "Love & Work make for a meaningful life..."

Good luck, Alea

ALEA,

ALL I CAN SAY IS THAT ITS BEEN INTERESTING. ANYWAY I'LL SEE YA OVER SUMMER AT SOME PARTIES.

LOVE,

MIKE

Alea,

I'm leaving, what are you going to do without my hairy chest and stomach. You must be crushed I love you and I'm going to miss you very much.

P.S. Call me 443-0794

Love Always

Alea,

What can I say? You have inspired me so much and encouraged me more than anyone this year. You're friendship has meant a great deal to me. I hope we can go out sometime when neither of us is a busy alea, Be the best you can be. You can be great at anything you want to be. Always be yourself because you're special. Please don't ever forget me or my promise to be there when you need me. I will think of you often.

Alea, you have an awesome body and your personality is terrific. Hi! It was the greatest knowing you and great knowing in all that you've done. Ya. It was fun please keep in touch. I'm Spanish & P.E. I love you and miss you. Hope ya have a cool summer.

Love Shelly
